The several witnesses presenting testimony to Judiciary were physicians (3), attorneys (6) and quality health care advocates (3) who are familiar with the peer review process. Each witness agreed that effective review of physicians is necessary to assure the delivery of competent, quality health care to all Americans. However, they stressed that the privileges of physicians should not be adversely affected through professional review action for reasons unrelated to competency. They agreed that the bill, as reported, does not provide adequate protections to competent physicians from abusive actions by illegal professional review.

Overwhelmingly, the expert attorneys agreed that in light of existing rules of state and federal law applicable to peer review, the immunity provisions of the bill are too sweeping. Indeed, at least one witness, who has been following the various legislative proposals introduced on this subject since he began his career in anti-trust health law at the Federal Trade Commission, argued persuasively that the bill's attempt to insulate peer review from legal challenge is self-defeating, and would instead increase the disruption and costs to all parties in those instances where peer review actions are contested.

The legal and constitutional problems created by this bill are many. We will summarize the most serious examples which were revealed during the Judiciary Committee's review of H.R. 5540. We found:

1. The immunity from individual damage claims under any federal or state law is too sweeping and unwarranted. The perception that treble damages under federal anti-trust claims will bankrupt peer review participants is unsupported by the facts. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversal of the Patrick case just 4 days after the filing of your committee report again demonstrates that peer review is not subject to sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act.

The Ninth Circuit, in agreeing with both the Seventh and Third Circuits, found that peer review received the cloak of protection from the state action doctrine, because the state had a clear policy to displace competition in the certification and regulation of hospital health care. Such state involvement would defeat all potential anti-trust claims by private parties. Adding a statutory exemption would thus be a gratuitous exercise, with the only result that a dangerous precedent would be set for other groups seeking special treatment.

It should finally be noted that the national competition policy represents a hundred-year commitment to the notion that all economic players should have the opportunity to compete in an open, free-moving market system. Health care has moved into the realm of competitive enterprise, with many physicians competing for the right to provide medical treatment in diverse and often specialized markets. Where peer review poses the risk of preventing or discriminating against other health providers from full economic participation in the market place, it is no different than any other illegal restraint of trade. As such, anti-trust immunity is a serious step, and the burden rests with those seeking special treatment to demonstrate that such protection is justified. It is our view that with respect to the instant legislation, such a burden has not been sustained, particularly where there are various state shield laws which already provide immunity for peer review.

Moreover, no justification has been shown for shielding peer review which violates federal or state civil rights laws. The testimony presented to the Judiciary Committee shows that peer review often has the result if not the intent of discriminating against minority and foreign born doctors. Effective civil rights enforcement is predicated on the ability of individuals to challenge such illegal acts. Restricting such enforcement to Federal and State Attorneys General would simply defeat the statutory scheme for our nation's civil rights laws.

It is very difficult, under existing state and federal law, to challenge fairly administered review actions, because courts are reluctant to second guess decisions by medical professionals as to the issue of "competency." Therefore, peer review participants' fear of damage claims is unfounded. Furthermore, the federal rules of civil procedure and a number of statues already provide for sanction, including monetary, against attorneys and individuals filing frivolous or nuisance claims. The view of several witnesses was, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

2. The bill establishes a statutory presumption that professional review actions are in the "furtherance of quality health care". It is a presumption which can only be overcome by "clear and convincing evidence." The presumption and burden of proof subvert exisitng law, with no compelling justification. Moreover, they would simply create additional legal issues to litigate in suits challenging review actions. A three-tiered system would result: one trial for injunctive relief, with one set of presumptions and burdens of proof and one trial to challenge the validity of the peer review action, with a different set of presumptions and burdens. If a physician were successful in the second suit, there would then be a third suit for damages. Such an approach is legally unsound, will add significant legal costs for both sides in an already costly proceeding, and frustrate the very purpose of the bill—effective peer review through voluntary reporting.

3. In a host of ways, the due process procedures set forth in the bill, fail to provide adequate safeguards to health care providers improperly before peer review committees. Notice is inadequate; there appear to be no mechanisms for compelling testimony or for providing the physician, in advance, with the evidence supporting the peer review action; and, in the end, the "due process" provisions of the bill are merely advisory, not obligatory.

4. The attorneys' fees section of the bill turns the Civil Rights Attorneys' Fees Act, as well as other attorneys fees provisions on its head. Section 103 of the bill states that the person challenging the peer review action may be required to pay the attorneys fees and costs of the health care entity, and all of the participants in the peer review process; whether the challenger wins or loses his or her complaint. Such an oppressive statutory scheme will most certainly have a chilling effect on health providers wronged by the review process. Contrary to public perceptions, not all physicians are wealthy. As our civil rights experts emphasized, health care providers with limited resources and earning capacity (for example, with privileges at fewer facilities) will be "unable to obtain counsel and their rights will be a dead letter."

In sum, for those with limited resources, the net result of Title I is that good faith suits backed by substantial evidence will simply not be brought and persons with means will be discouraged from redressing their grievances. In any event, illegal professional review actions will go unchecked. Clearly, no one wants such a result.

Mr. Chairman, with the help of health care advocates and legal experts, we considered the following issues which go to the very heart of this Committee's jurisdiction:

1. Is there a legal precedential harm to granting sweeping immunity from damage claims under any federal or state law solely on the basis of physician "perceptions" or "fears" of being sued for carrying out duties under professional review committees?

We must conclude there is.

2. Is there a factual record which shows that participants in professional reviews have been subjected to damage claims?

We must conclude there is not.

3. Can Title I of H.R. 5540 be sufficiently amended to address all of the legal imperfections raised by its contents?

We must conclude it can not.

As a result of our two days of hearings on H.R. 5540, we conclude that there is overwhelming support for effective peer review and support for voluntary reporting of professional review actions to a federal government controlled repository.[1] There is also a recognition that there must be meaningful incentives to encourage vigorous review and reporting. The provisions of Title I do offer incentives but they are incentives which shield professional actions which are fair as well as actions which are illegal. Under this Title, incompetent doctors will be unable, as they are under present law, to reverse fair peer reviews; and competent doctors whose rights have been violated by illegal peer review actions will be driven from medical practice with no hope of redress from existing federal and state laws which provide protections from such illegal acts.

We believe there is strong bipartisan support for Title II. However, given the myriad problems the Judiciary's limited review has identified, pursuant to our sequential referral, we recommend that you delete Title I of the bill. We believe this action would assure prompt passage of H.R. 5540 in both the House and Senate in the 99th Congress.

Please be assured that we will work with you in the next Congress to fashion immunities which are tailored to the factual record. As the experts we heard from have stressed, the "incentives" created by the bill may very well frustrate the laudable goals of effective peer review and reporting. In lieu of Title I, you may wish to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report back to Congress with suggestions for incentives for effective professional review, and to identify those factors which the Department's enforcement efforts have determined are discriminatory or illegal or unrelated by quality health care.

[1] However, as reported, Title II does raise several constitutional and privacy issues with respect to confidentiality. These concerns could probably be easily corrected.

We urge you to accept the findings and recommendations of the Committee on the Judiciary.

With kind regards.

Sincerely,

DON EDWARDS,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights.

PEER REVIEW AMONG DOCTORS RECEIVES BOOST

(By Frank R. James)

At a time of increased public concern over physicians' competence, a principal tool for regulating doctors—peer review—has received a shot in the arm.

The process was attacked in court in 1984, prompting many doctors to temper criticisms of their colleagues and, some argue, allowing weak physicians to continue practicing. But a federal appeals court in San Francisco has now defended peer review. That decision, physicians say, will likely bring doctors back to the review table and strengthen the first line of defense against incompetent physicians.

"There's no question that once doctors are told about what's happened, they'll begin reacting," says James Kronenberg, associate executive director of the Oregon Medical Association. Because the appeals-court decision "potentially resolves the legal problems doctors feared," he says, "we think it will reverse" the trend among doctors toward refusing to take part in peer reviews.

INVOKING ANTITRUST LAWS

In 1981, Timothy A. Patrick, a surgeon in Astoria, Ore., sued a hospital peer-review panel after it appeared likely that he would receive an unsatisfactory evaluation. Dr. Patrick alleged that peer-review panel members were inattentive when he tried to defend himself during the review, with one tying fishing lures, another reading a magazine and others reading their medical journals or attending to paperwork unrelated to the review.

Invoking federal antitrust laws, Dr. Patrick charged that the physicians on the panel sought to put him out of business because he competed with them for patients. The district-court jury agreed, awarding him $650,000 in damages, which—under antitrust law—was trebled to $1.95 million.

As a result of the ruling, many doctors around the country began to mute their criticism of fellow physicians or to refuse to participate in peer reviews altogether, physicians say. Antitrust charges are difficult to defend against and the treble damages aren't covered by physicians' malpractice liability insurance.

REVERSED DECISION

Last week, however, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the Patrick decision. The court acknowledged that peer review can be anticompetitive. But it ruled that the peer-review panel members in this case were immune from prosecution because Oregon, as do most states, regulates its health-care industry through mandatory peer review. Federal law exempts state actions from antitrust challenges when those actions are deemed necessary for the public good.

Many members of the health profession have praised the ruling. Kirk Johnson, general counsel of the American Medical Association, says the original court decision "had a very major psychological effect on doctors. It was an obstacle to the kind of vigorous peer review that everybody—physicians, the community and state governments—believes should be done." The AMA, the Joint Commission for the Accreditation of Hospitals and the Oregon Medical Association filed friend-of-the-court briefs with the appeals court arguing that antitrust law shouldn't be invoked against peer-review panel members.

After the original ruling in the Patrick case, many doctors "just said, 'The hell with it,'" says G. Craig Merhoff, a surgeon at Williamette Falls Community Hospital in Oregon City, Ore. "There's no question that a lot of the physicians who backed off in our hospital simply said: 'I'm not making recommendations on restricting anything. I'm not going to hang everything on the line because some guy's a bozo.'"

Dr. Merhoff adds that if the appeals-court decision means "we can conduct peer review like we did in the past, without the threat of restraint-of-trade (charges) being thrown at us, peer review will improve."

The appeals court did leave open the possibility that Dr. Patrick might sue in state court. He also might still invoke antitrust law in connection with the defendants' activities outside the peer-review process. The court cited evidence, for instance, that the defendants had sought to prevent emergency-room visitors who were asking for Dr. Patrick from being treated by him.

Barbee Lyon, an attorney for Dr. Patrick, says the appeals court removed "the strongest defense" for a "good doctor (who) finds himself opposed (by a peer-review panel) for base and disreputable motives." Mr. Lyon adds, "I would discourage doctors from getting into situations where they could find themselves at odds with the medical establishments." Dr. Patrick may appeal the latest ruling to the Supreme Court, Mr. Lyon says.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of our time.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5540, the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986.

This legislation is needed to address a major factor contributing to the medical malpractice insurance crisis—incompetent and unprofessional physicians. Groups such as State licensing boards, hospitals, and medical societies which have the responsibility to weed out incompetent physicians, do so with alarming infrequency. In the limited number of instances when such bodies do act, physicians simply move on to other hospitals in other States and set up practices.

As a consequence, there have been several publicized situations in which physicians that had a history of incompetence or unprofessional conduct have continued to practice and cause injury to patients. One of the most recent of these tragedies occurred minutes from here at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

This legislation would require that entities disciplining physicians report their findings and their disciplinary actions to a central repository. The legislation would also require hospitals to obtain this information before granting privileges to new applicants. This two-way reporting mechanism is the most important element of this legislation. At the present time, even the most diligent hospital cannot obtain adequate background about physicians applying for privileges at its facility.

Unfortunately, the reporting mechanism established by this legislation is likely to lead to more litigation as incompetent physicians who can no longer hide their pasts, must file suits in order to preserve their livelihoods. Therefore, in order to encourage physicians to act responsibly in reviewing the activities of their fellow physicians, this legislation would provide a very limited immunity from liability for allegations of antitrust violations by disciplined physicians. Physicians and hospitals that engage in responsible peer review deserve this very limited immunity.

I strongly believe that setting up a repository of information about all physicians to which hospital credentialing committees can have access will reduce significantly the ability of incompetent physicians to jump from facility to facility at will. That in turn will go a long way toward reducing the incidence of malpractice if not malpractice suits.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 5546, the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986, which I introduced along with Chairman WAXMAN and several other members of the Committee on Energy and Commerce. This legislation represents an important step in assuring the continued viability of our National Childhood Immunization Program, a program which is crucial to the health of our children.

Mr. Speaker, every Federal, State, and private health expert that testified before the Subcommitee on Health and the Environment on this issue agreed that our National Childhood Immunization Program is the most important preventive health program in the country. In the past few decades, we have all but eradicated such deadly childhood diseases as polio, whopping cough, and diphtheria through nationwide immunizations. Unfortunately, the companies which manufacture these crucial vaccines for our children are faced with a terrible dilemma. They are being forced out of business because liability for the very few children that may have adverse reactions to vaccinations has resulted in the unavailability of liability insurance.

H.R. 5546 addresses this problem. It establishes a reasonable no-fault compensation program for injured children. This program puts caps on awards for pain and suffering and for death benefits, and bars the awarding of punitive damages. An injured party who is not happy with the compensation award can still go to court, but several new tort protections would be available that would lessen the chance of outrageous awards. For example, under this legislation, a manufacturer would not be liable if the injury or death resulted from side effects that were unavoidable, or if the vaccine were accompanied by proper directions and warnings. Furthermore, there would be a legal presumption that warnings were adequate if they were in compliance with Government standards. Finally, H.R. 5546 addresses a particular concern of several Republican Members in that it does not limit compensation to only those people injured by vaccines in the past few years, as did earlier legislation. There is no reason why the legislation should exclude those children injured in the past, especially if they were unaware at the time that their injury was vaccine-related. Yet are now banned from initiating an action by State statutes of limitation.

As Mr. WAXMAN has indicated, this bill does not contain a funding mechanism. I hope that we will pass this bill today and add a funding mechanism later so that we can preserve our Childhood Immunization Program.

I commend Mr. WAXMAN for his work on this measure and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TAUKE].

Mr. TAUKE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act.

All of us, I am confident, are committed to ensuring that each of our citizens receives high-quality health care services. One of the most effective ways of ensuring the quality of health care services is encouraging stringent physician peer review to identify, correct, and prevent further substandard care. A second way of ensuring the quality of health care services in our Nation is giving hospitals and other institutions employing, licensing, and accepting physicians as members the information they need to detect physicians who have a history of disciplinary actions for providing substandard care. The Health Care Quality Improvement Act provides us with both of these tools.

One of the major deterrents to effective peer review is the threat hanging over physicians or hospital administrators involved in peer review that they may be sued under State and Federal antitrust, defamation, and other statutes by a doctor they are planning to discipline or have disciplined, even when the review and disciplinary action are clearly motivated by concern over quality of care. Testimony we on the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment received indicates that these suits are having a chilling effect on effective peer review.

The Health Care Quality Improvement Act provides carefully defined immunity from antitrust, defamation, and other statutes for peer review actions undertaken with the clear motive of improving the quality of health care and carried out in a manner giving the physician under review every opportunity to defend his or her record. In developing this legislation, we had well in mind the importance of antitrust, defamation, and civil rights statutes to the protection of physicians and other health professionals. This bill was drafted, redrafted, and then drafted again to provide that: First, the protection is afforded only to quality of care motivated reviews of physicians: The limited immunity is not provided for reviews of nurses or other health professions; second, the jurisdictions of the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice to pursue suits against physician or hospital peer review activities are untouched; and third, civil rights protections for physicians under review are untouched.

The American Medical Association, medical specialty groups, the Federation of State Medical Boards, hospital organizations, and the inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services all strongly support these carefully drawn immunity provisions, believing them to be essential to effective peer review.

Second, the Health Care Quality Improvement Act creates the centralized, comprehensive data bank we now lack in this Nation to ensure that physicians who are disciplined, who are the repeated subjects of serious malpractice suits, or who lose their licenses for providing substandard care cannot easily relocate and again establish practices. In order to receive immunity for physician review activities, hospitals and other organizations employing or licensing physicians are required to request information from this data bank upon initial employment or granting of staff privileges and periodically thereafter.

With these immunity, reporting, and referral provisions in place, we will no longer be reading with such disturbing frequency of physicians with long histories of incompetence or unprofessional conduct who have continued to cause needless deaths and injuries years after their damaging behavior was noted.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to acknowledge the diligent efforts of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] and the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] on this very important piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this is excellent legislation. I commend the chairman of the subcommittee and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN], the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], and all the others who have made possible the movement of this legislation forward. It is a good piece of legislation. It will not solve all of the problems that beset us, but it will move us strides forward in addressing the problem of medical malpractice and associated difficulties that we face in connection with this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for the legislation.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN].

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, the bill before us today will create an important first line of defense against malpractice: ridding the profession of bad doctors. As such, it is the first step toward a national malpractice strategy.

Medical malpractice harms all Americans. For consumers, it means higher health care bills and greater risks as doctors practice more defensive medicine, subjecting consumers to more tests and procedures. If you are a patient, this can actually threaten your life.

The malpractice problem doesn't lend itself to "quick fix" solutions. But the medical profession itself is a good place to start the process. Doctors are in the best position to do something about malpractice—because they see it happening around them. Most doctors are honest, hard-working, competent professionals. What's needed are new systems that encourage these doctors to bring cases of incompetence to disciplinary authorities.

We also need a system to keep track of doctors—one to prevent bad doctors from moving from State to State after their misdeeds have been discovered. Our legislation establishes a national data bank for hospitals, HMO's, and group practices to consult before granting privileges to physicians who apply to practice at their facility. The data bank will include information about malpractice claims, loss of hospital clinical privileges, licensing boards' disciplinary actions, and even voluntary resignations from medical staffs. No data bank presently keeps such comprehensive malpractice records. This would prevent incompetent doctors from moving from State to State and continuing to endanger patients' lives.

My bill does both of the things I've mentioned. It encourages physicians' to blow the whistle on malpracticing colleagues by protecting them from individual damage suits that might result from honest, fair peer review. And, it requires that all disciplinary actions be reported to the national clearinghouse, including plea bargains that result in doctors voluntarily leaving practice after disciplinary investigations have begun.

Mr. Speaker, it is too bad that we need this bill. It is unfortunate that physicians don't have the tools to effectively police themselves. And the absence of a reliable malpractice data bank has had regrettable consequences over the years. H.R. 5540 has become a necessity if we are going to take action against malpractice and its consequences.

Doctors participating in peer review face the tremendous risk these days that they will be sued for their actions against a colleague. According to testimony before the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment and the Subcommittee on the Courts and the Constitution, that risk is preventing the peer review participation of good, honest doctors. We must act to remove that risk, so that there is a better chance bad doctors will be weeded out of the system.

Mr. Speaker, testimony before the Health and Environment Subcommittee also indicated that 3 to 5 percent of the doctors in this country account for most of the malpractice. There are 450,000 physicians nationwide; in other words, a moderate calculation indicates there are 18,000 doctors regularly malpracticing.

Even if their colleagues have some evidence of malpracticing doctors' incompetence, there are tremendous barriers to getting a bad doctor out of our health-care system. We must prevent bad doctors from moving from State to State. And, we must insulate their honest, concerned colleagues from malicious suits. I urge all my colleagues to support H.R. 5540 and to bring us a step closer to protecting all Americans from the far-reaching effects of medical malpractice.

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Speaker, while I wholeheartedly applaud the intent behind H.R. 5540, I must state that I have several concerns about this legislation. Despite its laudatory goal of attempting to stimulate more peer review activities, the legislation chooses to do so by granting a sweeping and unnecessary exemption to the antitrust laws. It also runs the risk of not providing physicians subject to peer review adequate procedural safeguards to rebut evidence of incompetence. Perhaps most troubling, there is no mechanism in H.R. 5540 to guarantee that physicians will, in fact, participate in more peer review if the bill is passed. Thus, Congress is faced with the uncertain choice of granting doctors immunity from any damage actions under Federal or State law without predictable assurances that the doctors and hospitals will take the needed steps to weed out incompetent and harmful medical practitioners.

In the short period of the last 2 weeks, the Judiciary Committee conducted two hearings on the legislation on the basis of a sequential referral. As a result of these hearings and discussions with the Energy and Commerce Committee, certain changes were made to the bill, which address some, but not all, of the substantive concerns that I have with H.R. 5540. I do appreciate Congressman WAXMAN's sincere efforts to reach agreement. The severe time pressure under which we all worked, however, has understandably led to a product which does not clarify all the important issues raised.

For example, still unanswered is precisely why there is a need to grant an antitrust exemption for peer review actions when such activity is already protected under the State action doctrine. Under that doctrine, when States act to displace competition with regulation—as they do in their certification and regulation of hospital health care—the physicians and hospital personnel participating in actions affecting the delivery of such care are immune from antitrust suits. In the Patrick decision, the ninth circuit on September 30, 1986, joined the third and fourth circuits in taking the view that peer review clearly qualifies for the antitrust protection of the State action doctrine. Adding a statutory exemption under the antitrust laws, as H.R. 5540 would, becomes a gratuitous action that sets a dangerous precedent for other applications for special treatment. Moreover, where collective actions by physicians move beyond the bounds of proper peer review to exclude other doctors from practicing at hospitals solely because of anticompetitive considerations, this conduct should not be protected. While the bill attempts to specify those areas of collusive physician behavior that will not receive antitrust protection, no antitrust experts testified at the one hearing by the Health Subcommittee to offer their comments on whether the "carve outs" from the exemption were sufficiently inclusive, and experts who testified at the Judiciary Committee hearing raised concerns with this provision. This is the type of provision that with time might have been drafted with the kind of clarity and precision to satisfy everyone's concerns. Finally, for damage actions challenging peer review, the bill makes a presumption in favor of the hospital and physicians. No sufficient reason has been offered to justify creating a different burden of proof for this type of antitrust action than that which already exists for all other types of plaintiffs' actions.

In the civil rights area, the amended bill which is being considered today goes far in removing the exemption from civil rights actions originally contained in H.R. 5540, as reported. However, the measure may not give doctors sufficient procedural protections to defend their reputations and livelihoods against charges motivated by discriminatory purposes. While the bill now expands the time in which physicians are entitled to notice of peer review actions, it does not mandate access to all medical records and documents that may be used by the peer review committee. Since a physician subject to peer review is, in a real sense, in jeopardy of losing his professional standing, it is essential that he have available all pertinent documents and other written evidence relevant to the proceedings in order to rebut the charges. This is especially important when a presumption of validity attaches to peer review actions, as the bill also provides.

While last minute alterations have ameliorated many of my concerns, and I appreciate the changes made by the gentleman from California, H.R. 5540 contains a number of provisions that would likely benefit from further review.

We all share the important goal of increasing the use of peer review in order to make our health care system safe from incompetent and dangerous medical practice. But this purpose should be achieved with a careful statute that avoids unnecessary harm to our national competition policies and the rights of individuals subject to such review.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RANGEL). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5540, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WHITLEY] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LEWIS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WHITLEY].

Mr. WHITLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5492, a bill to release a reversionary interest of the United States in certain land located in Putnam County, FL, and for other purposes.

H.R. 5492 was introduced by Hon. BILL CHAPPELL on September 10, 1986, and was referred to the Committee on Agriculture. The Subcommittee on Forests, Family Farms, and Energy which I Chair, reviewed and amended the bill on October 8 and ordered it reported to the full committee. Subsequently, the Agriculture Committee considered H.R. 5492 and ordered it reported on October 10, with a recommendation for passage of the measure.

H.R. 5492, as amended, would direct the Secretary of Agriculture to release a reversionary interest of the United States in 1.1 acres of land in Putnam County, FL, that is currently owned by the State of Florida. This reversionary interest, which stipulates that the land be returned to the United States if it is no longer used for public purposes, is contained in the deed which granted the land to the State of Florida in accordance with the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

H.R. 5492 would also direct the Secretary of the Interior to convey the mineral rights of the property to the State of Florida for their fair market value or $1, if the mineral rights have no value. As I understand it, the Forest Service has made a preliminary determination that the value of minerals on this tract is minimal.

The State of Florida seeks release of this reversionary interest, as well purchase of any mineral rights associated with the property, in order to provide for an exchange of the tract for another parcel of equal value that is certainly in private ownership. The release is necessary to permit the land to be transferred to private ownership with clear title. The exchange will benefit both the private landowner who seeks to acquire the land for access to other lands in his ownership and the State of Florida, which will acquire a tract of land that is adjacent to a larger parcel currently administered by the University of Florida.

To protect the interests of the United States, H.R. 5492 was amended by the Forests Subcommittee to require the State of Florida to agree to place a similar reversionary restriction on the parcel of land that it will acquire in this land exchange. According to the USDA Forest Service, this represents a reasonable and efficient approach to conveying Bankhead-Jones lands to a third party.

The Congressional Budget Office reports that H.R. 5492 will result in no cost to the Federal Government if enacted.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that there is any controversy regarding H.R. 5492 and I recommend its immediate passage.

□ 1510

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5492 introduced by my colleague from Florida [Mr. CHAPPELL] releases a reversionary interest of the United States in 1.1 acres of land located in Putnam County, FL, and conveys the mineral interests of the United States in that land to the State of Florida. The State of Florida will pay all administrative costs for the transfer and will also appropriately reimburse the United States for the mineral interests, should they prove to be of any value.

In return for this release, the State of Florida has agreed to place a similar reversionary restriction on the land which it will acquire in exchange for this 1.1 acres.

This legislation allows Florida to exchange the 1.1 acres with clear title for another tract of land with equal value. The exchange benefits both the private landowner, the State, and the United States.

The Congressional Budget Office says that there will be no cost to the Federal Government for enactment of this legislation.

I would like to recognize and commend the great leadership of my colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CHAPPELL] for his efforts in bringing H.R. 5492 to the forefront.

There is no opposition to H.R. 5492 on this side of the aisle. We encourage its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WHITLEY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5492, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WHITLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5686 is a miscellaneous tariff bill which provides for a number of noncontroversial, housecleaning amendments to the Tariff Schedules of the United States. These items are not major policy questions, they are merely the routine and mundane adjustments in the Tariff Code sought by U.S. companies who must import certain items, or who face a problem with an improper customs classification. Most of these noncontroversial tariff items were originally included as part of the omnibus trade bill passed by this body on May 22. Unfortunately, the other body has taken no action on trade legislation this year. The trade reform so desperately needed by American industry and workers in order to promote U.S. competitiveness will die in the U.S. Senate. I know many Members are disappointed by this state of affairs. I share their displeasure.

Having said this, I do believe it is incumbent upon us to try to salvage some of the minor, technical changes in the tariff schedules sought by so many of our colleagues. A close look at this bill will indicate its merit and its lack of offensiveness. We are ensuring that athletes attending the Pan American games in Indianapolis can bring their equipment into the United States free of duty. We are continuing the duty suspension on certain types of textile machinery so that the U.S. textile industry can compete more effectively. We are banning imports of certain types of pornographic literature. We are ensuring that certain scientific equipment, and products for the blind and handicapped, can continue to receive favorable tariff treatment.

Many of these provisions are vital to U.S. companies: firms such as General Foods, Xerox, Corning Glass, and Zenith. In many cases we are seeking to extend duty suspensions which have expired in this Congress because of the absence of any tariff legislation. Yet none of these bills will cause serious harm to U.S. companies or workers. On the contrary, they are essential to the competitiveness of U.S. industries all over this country. Literally dozens of my colleagues have sponsored items contained in this bill. We have strived to make it a balanced and reasonable package that helps many and harms no one.

But let me assure my colleagues that passage of this bill has no bearing on the bigger and more fundamental question of trade policy reform. Next year, we need to return to this Chamber and once again pass a tough, effective trade bill. I intend to cooperate in that effort.

I urge my colleagues to support this miscellaneous tariff package.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON H.R. 5686

The Committee on Ways and Means has examined each of these issues carefully, soliciting comments from the Administration, the International Trade Commission, and the private sector. This information has provided the basis for consideration of the individual provisions contained in H.R. 5686. In addition, the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Trade held hearings on the major issues earlier this Congress.

Each provision in H.R. 5686 is explained below in order to provide a legislative history of this bill.

SECTION 111. CASEIN

(An amendment offered by Mr. Dorgan)

The proposed legislation would change the present tariff treatment of imported casein, in terms of both its classification and the applicable rates of duty. Imported casein is currently classified in schedule 4 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) covering chemicals and related products. This provision would reclassify the product under a provision in schedule 1, which covers agricultural products. As a result of this reclassification, the column 1 or most-favored-nation rate of duty applicable to imported casein would be 0.2 cent per pound duty rather than the current duty rate of "free". The amendment would broaden the product coverage of TSUS item 118.45 by amending the article description to include casein.

The Committee believes that casein is more appropriately classified as a dairy product in schedule 1, rather than a chemical product in schedule 4, because that is how it is predominantly used.

Casein, the principal protein fraction of milk, is manufactured by a precipitation process similar to that used in making cheese. Casein is produced in two major grades—food quality and industrial grade. The difference is primarily the absence of pathogenic organisms in the milk used, the level of sanitation standards maintained in the processing plant, and the amount of heat used in sterilizing the casein product. Industrial grade casein, made under lower sanitary standards, is less expensive than food grade; it may originate in countries where rinderpest, hoof-and-mouth disease, brucellosis, and/or tuberculosis are uncontrolled. The presence of these diseases in uncontrolled form in any country disqualifies its dairy products from food or feed uses in the United States.

Casein is utilized in two main areas—food, feed, and pharmaceutical uses (approximately 80 percent) and industrial applications (approximately 20 percent). In food, casein is an ingredient in synthetic cheese (primarily in frozen pizzas for home consumption), coffee whiteners, frozen desserts and whipped toppings, bakery products, and diet foods. The principal feed use is in calf-weaning supplements. Casein is also used in special infant formulas for lactose-intolerant children, as well as in some other medical, nutritional, and pharmaceutical applications. While insignificant in terms of the quantity used therein, the casein used in these products is critical to the health of persons requiring them and no known practical substitute for casein exists. Industrial uses are in glues, paper and textile coatings, and binders. Industrial usage of casein is declining as other products provide superior price or performance characteristics, while the quantity used in artificial cheese has grown rapidly.

U.S. dairy farmers, seeking additional markets for milk, have long focused on imported casein. Proposals to limit or impose a duty on casein have been introduced in every recent session of Congress.

In December 1979 the Commission submitted to the Committee on Ways and Means its report entitled Casein and its Impact on the Domestic Dairy Industry (investigation No. 332-105, USITC Publication 1025).

Pursuant to request, the Commission conducted an investigation (No. 22-44) of the effect of casein imports on the domestic dairy price support program. It reported to the President on January 29, 1982, (USITC Publications 1217) that imports of casein do not have a deleterious effect on the operation of the dairy price support program.

Casein is provided for eo nomine in TSUS item 493.12, under the superior heading "Casein and mixtures in chief value thereof (other than a product described in item 118.45); item 118.45 covers milk protein concentrates. Imported casein enters the United States free of duty from all countries; accordingly, preferential tariff programs are inapplicable.

As indicated above, the column 1 rate of duty under TSUS item 118.45 (to which casein would be added) is 0.2 cent per pound. The column 2 duty rate is 5.5 cents per pound. In addition, imports from Israel enter the United States free of duty under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Agreement; products of beneficiary countries under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) also enter free of duty.

There is no known domestic commercial production of casein.

Importers include subsidiaries and affiliates of the Irish and New Zealand Dairy Boards (the principal exporters to the United States), U.S. dairy processing companies, and major industrial users of casein, as well as distributors.

There were no exports of casein from the United States in 1984.

Casein imports are presently free of duty. If this bill were enacted, casein would be subject to a 0.2 cent per pound duty under column 1 and a 5.5 cents per pound duty under column 2. In 1984, this would have resulted in an increase in customs revenues of approximately $310,000 for column 1 imports and $275,000 for column 2 (Polish) imports, or a total of $585,000.

SECTION 112. SALTED AND DRIED PLUMS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2278 by Mr. Heftel)

Section 112 creates a new tariff classification for plums, soaked in brine and dried with a column 1 and column 2 rate of 2 cents per pound. These plums are currently classified with other prepared or preserved plums, prunes and prunelles with a column 1 rate of 17.4 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35 percent ad valorem.

Plums are the fruit of a perennial, flowering tree grown in temperate climates throughout the world; in the United States, more than 2,000 varieties of plums, consisting of about a dozen species, have been grown. Most of the important varieties grown commercially are of 2 species; European plums, best suited for drying, and Japanese plums, marketed chiefly as fresh fruit.

Canned plums are generally used as an appetizer, a side dish or a dessert fruit, while frozen plums are used in the manufacture of preserves and baked goods. Plums and prunes in brine are primarily oriental specialty foods.

According to the sponsor, the proposal is intended to grant a lower duty rate to plums which are first heavily salted by soaking in brine, then dried, and which have a limited market as an oriental delicacy. Because they were first salted, these plums are not classified as "dried" by the Customs Service; however, the sponsor argues that the rate of duty on dried plums is appropriately applied to this product because it is in essence dried, rather than canned or frozen. He also cites the lack of domestic production of this specialty fruit.

Imported prepared or preserved plums, prunes and prunelles (including plums soaked in brine and then dried) are currently classified in TSUS item 149.28 with a column 1 rate of duty of 17.5 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35 percent ad valorem. Imported plums are not eligible for GSP but are eligible for CBERA.

According to industry sources, there is no known domestic production of plums that are soaked in brine and dried. Total U.S. production of prepared or preserved (that is, canned and frozen) plums and prunes declined irregularly from an estimated 53.7 million pounds in 1980 to 38.2 million pounds in 1984.

Plums and prunes are produced commercially in nearly every state, with 91 percent of the crop harvested in California in recent years. According to the Census of Agriculture, plums and prunes were produced on 140,000 acres on 11,200 farms in 1982, compared with 136,000 acres on 13,100 farms in 1978. In 1982, 3,700 farms in California accounted for 122,400 acres of production. Most of the producers raise other crops in addition to plums.

During 1980–84, total U.S. imports of otherwise prepared or preserved plums rose irregularly from 1.8 million pounds, valued at $2.5 million, in 1980 to 2.5 million pounds, valued at $3.2 million, in 1984. Data are not separately reported for the plums covered by the proposed legislation; however, such imports are believed to be very small. Hong Kong was the leading source of imported prepared or preserved plums in 1984; Taiwan and China were also sources of supply.

U.S. exports of prepared or preserved plums are not separately reported; however, such exports in recent years are believed to be negligible or nil.

During 1980–1984, apparent U.S. consumption of prepared or preserved plums declined irregularly, averaging 41.8 million pounds annually; in 1984, consumption amounted to 40.7 million pounds. The ratio of imports to consumption averaged 5 percent annually throughout the period.

Enactment of this legislation would likely have little effect on revenue as imports of plums soaked in brine and then dried are believed to have been minimal.

SECTION 113 GRAPEFRUIT

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2362 by Mr. MacKay)

Section 113 would add two new items to the TSUS to provide tariff treatment for imports of grapefruit juice comparable to that provided for orange juice in legislation that became effective January 1, 1985.

Currently, not concentrated grapefruit juice is dutiable at a column 1 duty rate of 20 cents per gallon, and concentrated grapefruit juice is dutiable at a column 1 rate of 35 cents per gallon. The rate for not concentrated juice applies to both natural (fresh) juice and to juice produced from concentrated juice (reconstituted). The effect of this legislation would be to make the rate of duty applicable to not concentrated grapefruit juice (20 cents per gallon) apply only to natural unconcentrated grapefruit juice and not to reconstituted grapefruit juice. Currently, foreign grapefruit juice concentrate can be exported to a third country, reconstituted, and then entered into the United States as a not concentrated citrus juice at the lower rate of duty.

The grapefruit juice covered by this bill may not be mixed with other fruit juices, but may be sweetened or unsweetened, not concentrated (single-strength) or concentrated, and may not contain over 1 percent of ethyl alcohol by volume. If concentrated, the juice may be in liquid, powdered, or solid form.

The purpose of the bill is to close a perceived loophole in the TSUS that could allow highly concentrated grapefruit juice to be brought into foreign trade zones for processing and then entry into U.S. customs territory at a duty rate of 20 cents per gallon, rather than the 35 cents that is applicable to imported concentrates. The sale of this reconstituted product entered at the lower rate of duty would have a severe price depressing effect on U.S. production. A similar "loophole" has already been closed for orange juice, but unless it is also closed with respect to grapefruit juice, there may be a shift in production to the latter product.

Grapefruit juice which is not mixed, not concentrated, and does not contain over 1.0 percent of ethyl alcohol by volume, is classified for tariff purposes under TSUS item 165.32. The column 1 rate of duty is 20 cents per gallon (10.4 percent ad valorem equivalent in 1984), and the column 2 rate is 70 cents per gallon. Included under this item are juices which are reconstituted from concentrate.

Grapefruit juice which is concentrated is classified under TSUS item 165.36. The column 1 rate of duty applicable to this item is 35 cents per gallon (27.7 percent ad valorem equivalent in 1984) and the column 2 rate is 70 cents per gallon.

Items 165.32 and 165.36 are not eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP and no LDDC rate applies. Imports are eligible for CBERA.

Under the recently negotiated free-trade agreement with Israel items 165.32 and 165.36 were designated sensitive articles and excluded from the benefits of duty-free treatment for a period of 5 years.

U.S. processing firms that produce grapefruit juice generally also process orange juice, but in significantly larger quantities than the production of grapefruit juice. Nationally, an estimated 40 firms process grapefruit juice from fresh fruit and nearly seven-eighths of them are located in Florida.

U.S. production of grapefruit juice (on a single-strength equivalent basis) averaged 170 million gallons annually during 1980–82, and declined to an annual average of 110 million gallons during 1983–84. Florida supplied about 80 percent of the domestic production over the 5-year period. While much of Florida's production of concentrated grapefruit juice is later reconstituted to produce single-strength juice before sale to the ultimate consumer, the share of Florida's total production that is initially concentrated increased from 54 percent in 1980 to 79 percent in 1984. Thus, the quantity of single-strength grapefruit juice produced directly from fresh grapefruit in Florida has declined dramatically from 66 million gallons in 1980 to 20 million gallons in 1984.

Separate statistics for U.S. imports of grapefruit juice are not available. U.S. imports of not concentrated grapefruit juice are estimated to have been less than 1 million gallons annually during 1980–84. In 1984, when not concentrated orange juice was excluded from the basket class for the first time, U.S. imports of other not concentrated citrus fruit juices (predominately grapefruit juice) totaled 1.1 million gallons and 84 percent of the imports were from Canada.

In 1984, U.S. imports of other concentrated citrus fruit juices (predominately grapefruit juice) totaled 3 million single-strength equivalent gallons, valued at $3.5 million. The primary suppliers in 1984 were Brazil (39 percent), Belize (34 percent), and Mexico (19 percent). The imports from Belize in 1984 entered free of duty under the CBI. No imports were from that source during 1980–83.

During 1980–84, U.S. exports of grapefruit juice, both not concentrated and concentrated (measured on a single-strength basis), were equivalent to 12 percent of domestic production. Exports declined irregularly from 18.3 million gallons in 1980 to 15.5 million gallons in 1984, which is a smaller percentage decline (15 percent) than the decline in production (39 percent). Japan, Canada, and West Germany were the principal export markets for grapefruit juice in 1984.

During 1980–84, the apparent U.S. consumption of grapefruit juice declined irregularly from 163 million gallons in 1980 to 97 million gallons in 1984. The ratio of imports of "other citrus juice" to consumption of grapefruit juice did not exceed 6 percent during 1980–84, and was generally in the range of 1 percent to 3 percent.

The potential annual gain in customs revenues resulting from enactment of this legislation would be about $165,000, based on dutiable imports in 1984. This estimate is based on the assumptions that all imported not concentrated other citrus fruit juice in 1984 was made from reconstituted grapefruit juice concentrates, and that all imported concentrated citrus fruit juice other than lime or orange entered in 1984 was concentrated grapefruit juice.

SECTION 114. CARROTED FURSKINS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2273)

The proposed legislation would provide permanent duty-free treatment for hatters' fur now classified in TSUS item 186.20 while removing carroted furskins from the scope of that item. A new item 186.22 would be added to cover carroted furskins which would be dutiable at a column 1 rate of 15% ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35% ad valorem. Section 214 would be made effective for items entered after December 31, 1985.

Hatters' fur is the principal raw material used in the production of fur felt hats. Hatters' fur is cut from the skins of certain animals (chiefly rabbits and hares) after the skins have undergone carroting, a chemical process to improve the felting properties of the fur. Most of the hatters' fur produced in the United States is cut from raw skins which are imported free of duty and then carroted in the United States before the removal of the fur for use as hatters' fur.

According to the sponsor, these changes would correct an anomaly in the tariff rates of duty whereby imported finished products (fur felt hats) and semifinished products (hat bodies, known in the trade as hoods) are dutiable at a lower rate than the raw material (hatters' fur) used to make the finished and semifinished product.

Imports of hatters' fur under TSUS item 186.20 are dutiable at a column 1 rate of 15 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35 percent ad valorem. The column 1 rate is suspended through December 31, 1985. Imports are eligible for duty free entry under GSP and CBERA.

Imports of the raw material from which almost all hatters' fur is made (raw or not dressed rabbit furskins) are free of duty from both column 1 and column 2 countries.

The bulk of the imports of the finished products (fur felt hats) and semifinished products (hoods) which are made from hatters' fur are dutiable at a column 1 rate of $1.51 per dozen plus 2.2 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of $16 per dozen plus 25 percent ad valorem. The ad valorem equivalent was 5 percent for column 1 imports in 1984.

Detailed statistics concerning U.S. production of hatters' fur are not available. Industry sources estimate that U.S. production amounts to less than one million pounds annually. Production, which began declining after World War II, dropped steeply in the 1960's. In recent years, however, the industry has revived somewhat with the increased demand for Western-style hats. Industry sources indicate that the domestic industry has considerable unused and underutilized capacity.

The hatters' fur and fur felt hat industries are characterized by high degrees of concentration and integration. Five firms are believed to account for nearly all of the domestically produced hoods and fur felt hats. These firms, however, have subsidiaries and plants located throughout the United States, with much of the hatters' fur reported to be produced around Newark, New Jersey. Excluding Stratton Hats, Inc., which imports hatters' fur for production of hoods and hats, these firms are believe to account for the great bulk of U.S. production of hatters' fur. Although the firms occasionally sell hatters' fur or hat bodies to each other, most of the production of hatters' fur and hoods is captive production for producing their own fur felt hats.

The five firms together account for almost all U.S. imports of hatters' fur, and for some U.S. imports of fur felt hats.

During 1980-84, U.S. imports of hatters' fur generally declined, ranging from a high of 195,000 pounds, valued at $2.6 million, in 1981 to 26,000 pounds, valued at $226,000, in 1984. France was the principal source for U.S. imports during 1980-84, supplying 62 percent of the quantity and 69 percent of the value of imports in 1984. The remainder of U.S. imports of hatters' fur in 1984 was supplied by Belgium and the Federal Republic of Germany. Imports from column 2 sources were nil in 1984.

Based on import statistics and industry estimates of production, apparent U.S. consumption of hatters' fur amounted to about one million pounds annually in recent years.

Based on imports in 1984, it is estimated that the annual loss of customs revenue resulting from enactment of the legislation would approximate $34,000.

SECTION 115. TARIFF TREATMENT OF CERTAIN TYPES OF PLYWOOD

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2324 by Mr. Bonker)

Section 115 would revise headnote 1 to part 3 schedule 2 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) to ensure that imports of tongued, grooved, lapped, or otherwise edge-worked plywood, wood-veneer panels, and cellular panels would be classified under the tariff provisions for those products rather than as building boards.

The products included in this legislation, plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards, are described in the headnotes to part 3 of schedule 2 of the TSUS. Whether or not they have been edge worked, these products are used for many purposes, including siding, flooring, wall paneling, and roofing. Cellular panels are generally not edge worked.

Plywood sheets are being exported by Canada to the United States as building boards rather than as plywood. This subjects them to a much lower duty rate. By simply altering the edge of a plywood sheet, the merchandise qualifies for classification as building boards under the theory that the edgework dedicates the sheet to some special use. Actually the sheets are used no differently than are plywood sheets with plain edges. This legislation would revise the tariff schedules to insure that only special-use plywood is classified under the building board category.

Currently, Customs classifies plywood and wood veneer panels which have been edgeworked as building boards with an ad valorem equivalent of 10 percent and a column 2 rate of 15 cents per pound plus 25 percent ad valorem. Imports are eligible for GSP and CBERA.

A 516 petition was filed contesting the classification of edge-worked plywood as building boards. Customs affirmed their classification and the petitioner filed a summons in the Court of International Trade.

Domestic production of plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards amounted to about 20.4 billion square feet, valued at about $4.0 billion in 1982. In 1984 production rose to about 30.3 billion square feet, valued at about $5.45 billion.

It is estimated that in 1984 about 400 companies, employing 68,500 people, produced plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards. Of these companies, approximately 18 (41 plants), employing 2,000 people, produced softwood plywood siding, which is the major product which would be affected by enactment of the legislation.

U.S. imports of plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards are estimated to have fallen from $620 million in 1979 to $400 million in 1982 as construction activities fell. Imports then rose to $580 million in 1983 and $700 million in 1984 as such activities rebounded.

U.S. exports of plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards are estimated to have risen from $115 million in 1979 to $300 million in 1984 as U.S. producers continued to seek new markets. Exports of edge-worked panels are estimated to have totaled about $55 million in 1984.

In 1984, approximately 30 billion square feet, valued at about $5.4 billion, was consumed in the United States. The increase reflects a rebound in construction activities. U.S. imports of plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards, amounted to about 1 percent of total U.S. consumption of such products in 1984.

It is estimated that in 1984, 1.6 billion square feet, or about 5 percent of total U.S. consumption of plywood, wood-veneer panels, cellular panels, and building boards, was edge worked.

None, as it is expected the increased duty would be absorbed by exporters and/or importers because the Canadians are so competitive with the United States. The effect of the legislation would be roughly a doubling of duty from $400,000 to $800,000.

SECTION 116. CERTAIN WORK GLOVES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4122 by Mr. Broyhill)

This section adds TSUS headnote language which specifies that, for tariff purposes, work gloves made of a textile fabric which is coated with rubber or plastics will be classified as gloves of textile material rather than as gloves of rubber or plastics. This language has the effect of subjecting certain gloves to higher rates of duty and to quantitative restraints under MFA. In addition, as these articles become subject to textile agreements, the gloves would become ineligible for duty-free treatment under GSP and CBERA.

Coated work gloves are cut and sewn from fabric that has been coated, filled, or impregnated with rubber or plastics. The manufacture of the cut and sewn coated gloves is more labor intensive than the dipped supported gloves, because of the sewing operations that are required.

Coated work gloves are used for hand and/or product protection primarily by the industrial sector, including the automobile, steel, construction, and chemical industries. A small portion is sold to retailers for use in the home.

Textile work gloves which are coated or partially coated with rubber or plastics are classified in TSUS 705.86 as gloves of rubber or plastics at a column one rate of 16.6% ad valorem, or in the appropriate TSUS category (704.40, 704.45) as gloves of textile material, at a column one rate of 25% ad valorem. All these articles are eligible for preferential treatment under the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement. Under Customs' current practice, coated work gloves having outer surfaces where the textile material is visible are classified as textile products. If the textile material is completely covered by rubber or plastics and is not visible, the gloves are classified as rubber and plastics products. A classification problem arises where the textile material is only visible when the surface of the glove is examined under a magnifying glass.

Approximately 20 to 25 U.S. firms produce coated and partially coated work gloves. A few of these companies reportedly have plants in foreign countries, especially the Caribbean countries, where work gloves are either assembled from U.S.-cut parts or are manufactured in their entirety for shipment to the United States. Separate U.S. production data on these gloves are not reported.

U.S. imports of the subject coated and partially coated work gloves doubled from $3.4 million in 1981 and to $7 million in 1984. They nearly doubled again in 1985 to $13 million.

Data on U.S. exports are not separately reported; however, exports are believed to have totaled less than 500,000 dozen pairs in 1985, or about 20 percent of the total imported that year.

Estimated revenue gains resulting from the enactment of this provision would be $827,764 in 1986 and $1,083,977 in 1987.

SECTION 117 BROADWOVEN FABRICS OF MAN-MADE FIBERS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2338 by Mr. Jenkins)

The proposed legislation would create three new items in the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) to cover woven fabrics of man-made fibers, other than those containing over 17 percent of wool by weight and those in chief value of glass. These three items would replace current TSUS item 338.50, to allow the creation of additional statistical annotations for such fabrics. Under the single five-digit provision currently applicable to such fabrics, 99 statistical annotations (using combinations of two digits from 01 to 99) are possible. With three tariff items, a total of 297 statistical annotations would be possible.

Man-made fiber broadwoven fabrics are produced in weaving mills and are often the only product manufactured by an individual mill. Approximately 40 percent of the fabrics are sold to apparel plants, with most of the balance used for home furnishings and industrial products.

Officials of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, Inc. (ATMI) state that the purpose of the bill is to establish more legal provisions for these products so that additional statistical annotations, by type of fabric, could be made available to assist the domestic industry in measuring import competition. ATMI also states that the secondary purposes of the bill is to provide additional or transition data to facilitate the possible conversion from the TSUS to the Harmonized System in 1987.

The current column 1 rate of duty for TSUS item 338.50 is 4 cents per pound plus 18.8 percent ad valorem, or an equivalent ad valorem rate of approximately 19 percent based on imports in 1984. The column 2 duty rate is 81 percent ad valorem, and no preferential LDDC rate is granted. Imports are not eligible for GSP or CBERA and may be subject to quantitative restraints under the MFA.

The quantity of broadwoven fabrics of man-made fibers produced domestically decreased from 12.6 billion square yards in 1980 to 11.85 billion in 1984.

The 1982 Census of Manufactures published by the Bureau of Census indicates that there were 340 firms operating 522 establishments weaving the subject broadwoven fabrics of man-made fibers (Standard Industrial Code 2221). According to the Census, these establishments employed 141,000 workers in 1982. The Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Bureau of Census estimates that his industry employed 134,000 workers in 1984.

Imports increased from 290 million square yards in 1980 to 659 million in 1984. The leading suppliers in 1984 were Japan (38%), Italy (23%), and Korea (20%).

U.S. exports decreased from 576 million square yards in 1980 to 207 million in 1984.

Consumption remained fairly constant during 1980-1984 averaging 12.3 billion square yards per year.

This provision would have no effect on revenue.

SECTION 118. SILICONE RESINS AND MATERIALS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2186)

Section 118 would amend the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) to impose a single rate of duty on silicones in all forms. Specifically, section 1(a)(1)(A) would amend headnote 2 to part 4A of schedule 4 of the TSUS, defining "synthetic plastics materials," to classify together silicone fluids, resins, elastomers, and other silicone products whether or not they are in solid form in the finished articles.

In section 1(a)(2), the legislation would also amend headnote 2 of part 4B of schedule 4 of the TSUS by inserting the following paragraph: "(c) For the purpose of the tariff schedules, the term "rubber" does not include silicones."

Section 1(a) 1(b) would insert a new tariff item (item 445.55) covering silicone resins and materials. The column 1 rate of duty would under section 1(b) be subject to staged reductions to 3.9 percent ad valorem in 1986 and 3.7 percent ad valorem in 1987. Section 2 would make the provisions of the legislation effective upon enactment.

Silicone rubber would no longer be classified in TSUS item 446.15 (with a column 1 duty rate of 0.8 percent ad valorem and an LDDC rate of free), which provides for synthetic rubber. Nor would the duty rates proposed for item 445.55 correspond to those for item 445.56, where some of the subject articles are now classified but which would no longer occur after enactment of the new law.

Silicones are a unique family of polymers, containing alternating silicon and oxygen atoms in the polymer chain with various organic substitutes attached to the silicone atoms. Silicone fluids are clear liquids of varying viscosities used as antifoaming agents, release or parting agents, hydraulic or heat-transfer fluids, and permanent water-repelling agents for leather, fabrics, and masonry. Silicone elastomers are essentially high molecular weight fluids that offer good resistance to weathering. They also have been recently used in cosmetic or prosthetic implants. Silicone resins are used as electrical insulation for varnishes and as protective paint films.

In general, silicones possess good electrical properties and, as mentioned above, offer superior resistance to high temperatures and weathering. Silicones also possess a high degree of chemical inertness, are nontoxic, and are easy to process.

According to the sponsor, the purpose of the legislation is to stop the ad hoc basis of silicone classification. Currently silicones are classified in one of nine TSUS categories with duties ranging from 0 to 8.6 percent ad valorem. This is a result of the TSUS being established before silicones were commercialized. The rest of the industrial world treats silicones as a single product grouping in its tariff schedules; this legislation, then, would bring U.S. Customs practice in line with the customs practices of our trading partners. The silicone tariff rates of our major trading partners are much higher than ours, with rates of more than 10 percent. This bill, however, would not raise U.S. tariffs. Rather, the legislation is revenue neutral.

Silicone resins enter the U.S. under one of seven categories with column 1 duties ranging from 8% ad valorem (silicone rubber) to 13.5% (other organo-silicon compounds, benzenoid). All but one of the categories are eligible for GSP and all are eligible for CBERA.

U.S. production of silicones in all forms decreased from 328 million pounds in 1979 to 292 million pounds in 1983.

The markets for silicone fluids, elestomers, and resins, the products of chief significance in the draft legislation are each dominated by three producers. These producers are Dow Corning, G.E., McGhan Nusil Corp., Union Carbide Corp., and the Dexter Corp.

Imports of the articles covered by this bill increased from 3.8 million pounds in 1981 to 13.9 million pounds in 1984. The corresponding increase in value was from $8.1 million to $23.3 million.

Export decreased slightly from 62.8 million pounds in 1981 to 62.1 million pounds in 1984. Although the value increased from $127.4 million in 1981 to $133.7 million in 1984.

Consumption dropped from 316.7 million pounds in 1981 to 243.8 million pounds in 1983. The ratio of imports to total consumption was 5.7 percent in 1983.

SECTION 119. CLASSIFICATION OF NAPHTHA AND MOTOR FUEL BLENDING STOCKS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2396 by Mr. Matsui)

Section 119 would make several changes in part 10 of schedule 4 of the TSUS to modify the tariff treatment of some naphthas and create a new tariff item for motor fuel blending stocks. First, it would amend headnote 1 to part 10 to require that motor fuel blending stocks be classified in part 10 whether or not of benzonoid origin. Second, it would add to headnote 2 a new paragraph defining "motor fuel blending stocks" and require verification they actually be used in manufacturing motor fuels. Third, it would create new TSUS item 475.27 which defines all motor fuel blending stocks as "any product (except naphthas provided for in item 475.35) derived from petroleum, shale oil, or natural gas whether or not containing additives which is actually used for direct blending in the manufacture of motor fuel." This item's tariff rate would be identical to those on imported motor fuel.

Finally, it would amend TSUS item 475.30 (covering kerosene derived from petroleum, shale oil, or both (except motor fuel)), to exclude from that item both such fuel and motor fuel blending stocks.

"Motor fuel blending stock" is a term used to refer to a variety of materials derived from petroleum, shale oil, or natural gas, which can be further processed into specification-grade motor fuel. It can also be used to describe materials that can be physically blended with other material to make gasoline.

Motor fuel blending stocks could be used as a fuel in internal combustion or other engines but are outside the American Society of Testing Materials (ASTM) octane range. Generally, these products are mixed or blended with other chemicals, such as tetraethyl lead (TEL), to obtain a higher octane product that meets the ASTM octane specifications for motor fuel.

The legislation is designed to correct an anomaly currently in existence in the TSUS and made apparent by industry sources, according to the sponsor. Under current law, the Customs Service interprets the TSUS to require them to impose higher duties on certain components of motor fuels than on finished motor fuels.

From late 1983 through July 1984 a number of bills were introduced in Congress pertaining to the tariff reclassification of catalytic naphtha and motor fuel blending stocks/unfinished gasoline. H.R. 4232 proposed a duty rate of .25 cent per gallon on catalytic naphtha (a component used in the production of finished gasoline) and H.R. 5455 reclassified unfinished gasoline and motor fuel blending stocks by creating a new tariff item for them with a duty rate of 1.25 cents per gallon, the same rate as for finished motor fuel.

The Administration proposed a single alternative in May 1984 that was designed to satisfy both sets of bills. Due to the complexity of the products involved, the House-Senate conferees when discussing these bills determined that prior to furthur congressional action on the issue the ITC should be asked to examine the desirability of reclassification and its posible ramifications. The ITC released its report in April 1985.

Naphthas (whether straight or catalytic) and other motor fuel blending stocks are currently classifiable in part 1, and part 2, or part 10 of schedule 4 of the TSUS. Depending on its characteristics, a particular blending stock may be classified—

(1) in part 1, item 407.16, as a mixture, in whole or in part of distillation/cracking/reforming process with no other chemicals added. Catalytic naphthas are included in this category.

(2) in part 10, item 475.35 as a mixture, not in whole or in part of benzenoid chemicals which is the result of distillation/cracking/reforming process with no other chemicals added. Column 1 duty is .25 cent per gallon and 2 is .5 cent per gallon.

(3) in part 2, item 432.10, as a mixture such as (1) and (2) above, to which are added lead alkyls, ethyl alcohol or other nonbenzenoid organic chemicals. Column 1 duty is 5 percent ad valorem but not less than highest rate applicable to any component material. (This can result in rates as high as 10–15 percent ad valorem).

If any of the above meet the ASTM criteria for motor fuel, they are classified as TSUS item 475.25 with a column 1 duty of 1.25 cents per gallon.

Between 1977 and 1985, approximately 158 refineries ceased operations. The typical closed refinery had a capacity of less than 50,000 barrels per day, with no cracking or other major crude petroleum upgrading facilities. During the period 1981–83, the refineries remaining open were primarily sophisticated units that operated at about 68–70 percent of capacity, compared with an average of 85 percent in 1979.

During the first half of 1984, the refinery capacity utilization rate averaged about 76 percent, as a result of higher gross inputs of crude petroleum to refineries and lower total refining capacity. Another factor contributing to the decrease in U.S. production of refined product and the subsequent decline in capacity utilization is an increase in offshore refinery operations. Currently, the world crude petroleum market is witnessing a situation of oversupply as well as excess refinery capacity. Some of the excess production of these offshore refinery facilities enters the U.S. market, which is already faced with decreased demand for these refined products.

U.S. production of motor gasoline has dropped from 7.0 million barrels per day (MBD) in 1977 to 6.5 MBD in 1984. Distillate fuel oil had dropped form 3.3 MBD to 2.7 MBD over the same period and residual fuel oil production has dropped even more precipitously from 1.75 MBD to .9 MBD over the period. The only product to show a gain in production over the period was LP gas which increased from 1.5 MBD to 1.7 MBD.

According to the 1977 Census of Manufacturers, 349 U.S. refineries were in operation in that year; however, as of January 1, 1983, the number of operating refineries had fallen to 225, with a total capacity to process 16.2 million barrels of crude petroleum per day. As of January 1, 1985, there were 191 operating refineries in the United States, with a crude petrroleum capacity of 15.9 million barrels per day. The decrease in the number of operating refineries since 1977 is believed to result from a combination of factors, including decreased domestic demand for petroleum products, market shifts, increased transportation costs, consolidation of refinery operations, the end of the Federal entitlements program for small refineries, and the decontrol of crude petroleum prices in 1981. Of the total refineries in operation, 131 are operated by independent refiners, which account for 30 percent of U.S. refining capacity.

Employment in the petroleum refining industry decreased from 108,300 workers in 1979 to 100,600 in 1983. The number of production workers declined from 72,800 in 1979 to 64,700 in 1983.

The major states producing petroleum products are Texas, California, and Louisiana. As of January 1, 1985, these states accounted for about 41 percent of the total number of U.S. refineries and 57 percent of the total refining capacity.

The United States is a net importer of petroleum products, primarily from Venezuela and refineries in the Caribbean nations. As a result of increased prices, the value of imports of all petroleum products increased from $11.4 billion in 1980 to $18.6 billion in 1984. U.S. imports of petroleum products could increase further as additional refinery capacity begins to be used in the OPEC nations as well as other conventional-energy-rich nations. As of January 1, 1985, the OPEC nations had the capacity to refine 4.8 million barrels per day of crude petroleum and are expected to have a refining capacity of 7.7 million barrels per day by 1987.

Residual fuel oils accounted for about 38 percent of the total value of U.S. imports of petroleum product in 1984. The major sources of U.S. imports of residual fuel oils in 1984 were the North Antiles (except the Bahamas) and Venezuela, together accounting for 41 percent.

U.S. import of distillate fuel oils increased irregularly from 15 million barrels, valued at $552 million in 1980 to 103 million barrels, valued at $3.3 billion in 1984. Venezuela, Mexico, and Canada supplied about 54 percent of total 1984 U.S. imports of distillate fuel oils.

U.S. imports of motor fuel increased irregularly from 19 million barrels in 1980 to 102 million barrels in 1984; however, during the same period the value of these imports increased from $716 million to $3.2 billion. In 1983, the major sources of U.S. imports of motor fuels were the Netherlands, accounting for 20 percent, and Venezuela, accounting for 16 percent. In 1984, this situation was reversed, with the Netherlands supplying 14 percent and Venezuela 22 percent.

The value of U.S. exports of petroleum products increased by 265 percent during 1980–82. The reasons for this apparent dramatic growth include an increase in the unit value of petroleum product export and the 1982 relaxation of export restrictions. However, U.S. exports in 1984 declined by 25 percent to a value of $3.6 billion, because of the strength of the U.S. dollar in relation to other currencies and an oversupply of products on the world market.

The major markets for petroleum products have been other developed nations lacking significant reserves of crude petroleum for use as a raw material base, especially Japan, Canada, the Netherlands, and Singapore. These four nations together accounted for nearly 50 percent of U.S. exports of petroleum products. A notable exception to this rule is Mexico, which was the third largest market in 1984.

Consumption of petroleum products decreased from 18.5 MBD in 1979 to 15.7 MBD in 1984. This resulted from consumer movement to conservation and use of alternative energy sources. Consumption of motor gasoline accounts for about 42 percent of total domestic consumption of petroleum products.

It is unlikely that the enactment of the legislation would effect annual customs revenues, since motor fuel blending stocks have been and are currently being dutied at the motor fuel rate of 1.25 cents per gallon.

SECTION 120. SLABS OF IRON OR STEEL

(Originally Introduced as H.R. 4547 by Mr. Schulze)

Currently, the TSUS defines iron and steel slabs as having a thickness of not less than 2 inches and not over 6 inches. This section would strike out "and not over 6 inches" from the definition, which is set forth in headnote 3(c), part 2–B of schedule 6.

Slabs, along with ingots, billets, blooms, and sheet bars, are the semifinished stock from which finished steel mill products are formed. The slabs are generally processed into such other products as sheets, strip, and plates, which may then be further fabricated into other products such as welded pipes. Slabs are produced by two methods: (1) Ingot molding or (2) continuous casting. In ingot molding, molten steel is poured into ingot molds and allowed to cool. When the steel has solidified, the mold is removed, or stripped, from the ingot. Stripped ingots are then generally reheated and rolled into slabs. Continuous casting bypasses the making reheating of ingots in the production of slabs. In this process, molten steel flows through an open-ended mold that forms the steel into slabs or other semifinished shapes. Continuous-cast slabs are generally regarded as higher quality products than their ingot-molded counterparts.

According to the sponsor, this section is intended to make the definition of steel slabs in the TSUS consistent with the steel industry's common practice of producing slabs exceeding 6 inches in thickness.

The TSUS defines a slab of iron or steel as a semifinished product of rectangular cross section, having a width of at least 4 times the thickness, not less than 2 inches and not over 6 inches in thickness. Slabs are classified in TSUS items 606.67 and 606.69. Products exceeding 6 inches in thickness, but otherwise meeting the TSUS definition of slab, are classified (a) as "ingots" under TSUS items 606.67 and 606.69, if they have been continuously cast, or (b) as "plates" under TSUS items 607.66, 607.72, 607.76, and 607.78, if they have been rolled from ingots. The bill would change the tariff treatment of these latter products, i.e., "plates" rolled from ingots.

In the case of such carbon steel slabs, the column 1 duties would be reduced from 6.3 percent ad valorem to 4.5 percent, while the LDDC rate would decrease from 6 percent to 4.2 percent. For stainless steel and tool steel slabs, the column 1 duties would be reduced from 9.5 percent ad valorem to 5.6 percent, while the LDDC rate would decrease from 9.5 percent to 5.1 percent. For alloy steel slabs other than stainless or tool steel, the column 1 duties would be increased from 4.8 percent to 5.6 percent, while the LDDC rate would increase from 3.8 percent to 5.1 percent. None of these products are eligible for GSP benefits; however, duty-free entry is afforded all these products under the CBERA and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Agreement.

While slabs are produced by many domestic steel mills, they have not been a significant article of commerce. They are primarily produced by steel mills for captive consumption in the production of more advanced steel mill products. Separate data on the production of slabs are not available; however, production is estimated to have been 55–60 million short tons per year during 1983–85.

Imports of slabs more than doubled from 908.650 tons ($176 million) in 1984, to over 2 million tons ($358 million) in 1985. The sharpest increase occurred in slabs greater than six inches in thickness, the volume of which more than quadrupled, rising to 1.1 million tons, or 53 percent of total slab imports.

Data on exports of slabs are not separately collected.

Apparent U.S. consumption of slabs is estimated to have closely paralleled U.S. production.

Estimated revenue losses are about $1.8 million per year.

SECTION 121. TELEVISION APPARATUS AND PARTS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2349 by Mr. Rostenkowski)

This section would amend headnote 3(a) to part 5 of Schedule 6 to define the term "complete" when used in reference to a television receiver as a receiver "fully assembled in its cabinet". The current headnote defines complete as "fully assembled."

Next, the bill adds another headnote to part 5, Schedule 6. It would require that picture tubes imported in combination with other articles are to be classified under the tariff provisions for picture tubes (TSUS item 687.35 through 687.44) unless they are to be incorporated into complete television receivers, word processors or ADP terminals or they are put up in kits containing all parts necessary for assembly into complete television receivers, word processors or ADP terminals. Because of the change in language of headnote 3 from "fully assembled" to "fully assembled in its cabinet", the kit exception would only apply if all parts, including, a cabinet, were imported.

In an amendment offered by Mr. Rostenkowski, two temporary suspensions were added to the scope of this section. The first added 912.14 to TSUS to provide for an 11% duty until 10–31–87 for television picture tubes which would have been included in assemblies (provided for in 684.96) except for the changes made by this section in headnote 4 to part 5 and except for the second temporary provision. The second provision adds TSUS item 912.16 and provides temporary duty free treatment, until 12–31–90, for color picture tubes having a video display diagonal of less than 12 inches.

The purpose of these amendments was to provide a phase-in period for the application of the 15% rate of duty on those picture tubes which Customs had ruled were eligible to be dutiable at 5% as assemblies and to suspend the duty on small TV picture tubes which are not currently produced in the United States.

The purpose of this legislation is to prevent importers from taking advantage of what the Committee believes to be a loophole in the TSUS. Japanese picture tubes are sent to Mexico where they are paired up with, but not assembled with, chassis and control panels. The merchandise is then shipped to the United States where it is entered as color television receiver assemblies at a duty rate of 5 percent ad valorem. The domestic industry believes that the picture tube portion of the entry should receive the 15 percent duty rate applicable to color television picture tubes.

Cathode ray tubes (CRT's) are used in a variety of products including television receivers, monitors for television studios, monitors for security systems, certain types of data display terminals for automatic data processing uses, video games, oscilloscopes and terminals for word processing applications. Television picture tubes are a type of CRT.

The principal differences between imported and domestic television picture tubes are in the screen size designations and physical mounting dimensions for the various tubes.

Until recently domestically-produces data processing and word processing products, including those incorporating video display terminals, have been considered qualitatively better than the imported products. However, foreign producers, particularly in Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Singapore, are progressing rapidly and are approaching the level of sophistication of U.S.-produced video display terminal producers.

Color television picture tubes are classified under TSUS item 687.35 dutiable at a column 1 rate of 15 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of 60 percent ad valorem. Imports are not eligible for GSP but are eligible for CBERA.

Color assemblies (including kits containing all parts necessary for assembly into complete receivers) are classified under TSUS item 684.96, dutiable at a column 1 rate of 5 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35 percent. Imports are not eligible for GSP, but may qualify for duty-free treatment under the CBERA.

Domestic shipments of color television picture tubes increased from 11.6 million units, valued at $881 million, in 1980 to 12.3 million units, valued at $938 million, in 1984. This closely tracks the trend for all CRT's.

Despite a slight slump in 1982, domestic shipments of television receivers increased steadily form 1980 to 1984. Shipments increased from 10.3 million units, valued at $3.3 billion, in 1980 to 13.3 million units, valued at $4.1 billion, in 1984 for a total increase of 29 percent in terms of quantity and 25 percent in terms of value for the period. The average unit value of domestic shipments decreased slightly from $319.50 in 1980 to $309.40 in 1984.

The CRT producing industry (including television picture tubes) is a concentrated industry. There are some thirty manufacturers of CRT's in the United States. Many are captive producers, i.e., they make CRT's for their own use, and others rebuild old CRT's. The leading six noncaptive producers (G.E., Philips, RCA, Sony, Westinghouse, Zenith) of new CRT's represent more than 80 percent of domestic shipments of such CRT's.

Producers of CRT's generally buy the components they need to assemble the CRT's rather than making them. Producers of CRT's tend to be large corporations which also make many other products. Specific data on employment in the production of CRT's is not available. Employment in the production of all electronic tubes amounted to 35.5 thousand persons in 1982, the last year that data was available.

The U.S. industry producing television receivers consists of 17 firms. Of these, 5 are U.S.-based firms, 1 is Netherlands-based, 8 are subsidiaries of Japanese firms, 2 are Taiwanese-owned and the last is a South Korean based company.

Employment in the receiver industry has been declining in recent years and currently stands at about 25,000 persons. In 1983, the last year for which there were data, U.S. producers had gross profits amounting to over $240 million.

Matsushita Industrial Co., located in Franklin Park, Illinois, produces approximately 55 percent of the Panasonic and 82 percent of the Quasar color television sets sold in the United States. Most of the color televisions produced use imported television chassis and control panels assembled in Mexico. The assembled chassis and control panels are shipped to the United States together with color television picture tubes manufactured in Japan. The imported merchandise is then assembled into U.S.-produced cabinets with other U.S. and foreign components at Franklin Park.

U.S. exports of color television picture tubes decreased from 942,000 units, valued at $86.5 million, in 1980 to 347,000 units, valued at $32.4 million, in 1984. The largest export market in 1984 for U.S.-produced color television picture tubes was Canada. Exports to Canada in 1984 amounted to 313,000 units, valued at $28.1 million, or 90 percent of the total units exported.

Apparent consumption of color television picture tubes increased from 11.3 million units, valued at $827.8 million, in 1980 to 12.7 million units, valued at $952.2 million, in 1984. The ratio of imports to consumption, in terms of quantity, fluctuated between 5.2 percent and 8.1 percent during the period 1980 to 1984, with a ratio of 6.2 percent in 1984.

The effect of this legislation on revenues would depend upon the dutiable value of the picture tube portion of the merchandise. If we assume that one-half of the value of each color television kit imported in 1984 was attributable to the tube, the estimated revenue increase resulting from the duty increase on the tube from 5 percent to 15 percent would be approximately $2.9 million.

SECTION 122. EXTRACORPOREAL SHOCK WAVE LITHOTRIPTERS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4533 by Messrs. Gephardt and Campbell)

This section would reduce the column 1 and column 2 rates of duty on extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters. This would be accomplished by amending the article description for TSUS item 709.15, under which imports of such apparatus are classified as "electro-surgical apparatus, and parts thereof", to "electro-surgical apparatus other than extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters . . .". This amendment would change the TSUS classification of extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters from item 709.15 (column 1 rate of 9.2 percent ad valorem) to TSUS item 709.17 (column 1 rate of 4.4 percent ad valorem) "other electro-medical apparatus, and parts thereof". It would also reduce the column 2 rate of duty from 55 percent ad valorem to 35 percent ad valorem.

The extracorporeal shock wave lithotripter is a sophisticated medical apparatus designed to disintegrate kidney stones without an incision by generating shock waves focused on the area of the patient's body where the kidney stone is located. The litho-tripter system includes two shock wave generators, a dual-axis X-ray system, a stainless steel tub incorporating an ellipsoidal reflector and window at the bottom to permit the passage of X-rays, a platform on which the tub rests, a patient-positioning hydraulic system, a water-treatment system, and a control cabinet.

According to the sponsor, the purpose of this section is to remove an anomaly in the TSUS under which extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters are classified as "electro-surgical" apparatus at a duty rate higher than that for other "electro-medical" apparatus. At the same time, the Federal government, in its Medicare reimbursement procedures, classifies the lithotripter treatment as a "medical" rather than a "surgical" procedure, which results in a substantially lower reimbursement to providers of the treatment than would be the case if it were considered a surgical procedure. This inconsistent treatment for customs tariff and Medicare reimbursement purposes not only puts the provider at a disadvantage, but lessens the availability of the procedure at a reasonable cost to the patient.

Extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters are classified under TSUS 709.15 as electro-surgical apparatus, and parts thereof, dutiable at 9.2 percent ad valorem under column 1. The column 2 rate is 55 percent ad valorem, and the LDDC rate is 7.9 percent.

The articles covered by items 709.15 and 709.17 are eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP, CBERA, and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Agreement.

There are four known companies in the United States currently developing extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters. None has yet received pre-market approval by the FDA to market its product in the United States. There has been no U.S. production of extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters, except for investigational use.

In 1985, 50 extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters with a total value of $90 million were imported into the United States. During January-March 1986, 18 additional lithotripters valued at about $32 million were imported.

There were no U.S. exports of extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters during 1981–85, or in the first 3 months of 1986.

Apparent U.S. consumption of extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters was accounted for entirely by imports during 1984, 1985 and in the first 3 months of 1986.

Based on an estimated $85 million in imports during 1986, it is estimated that the annual revenue loss would be $4,128,000.

SECTION 123. BICYCLE-TYPE AND EXERCISER-TYPE SPEEDOMETERS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2913 by Mr. Quillen)

The proposed legislation would delete item 711.93 from the TSUS and insert a new item 711.92, covering bicycle-type and exerciser-type speedometers and parts thereof. The column 1 rate of duty would be 18.3 percent ad valorem, 110 percent ad valorem for column 2 imports, and 17 percent ad valorem for imports from LDDC's. Staged rate reductions scheduled for item 711.93 would be made applicable to the new item 711.92.

A speedometer is generally an accessory for a bicycle, but it is usually standard equipment on an exercycle.

According to representatives of Stewart-Warner Corp., the private sector advocate of the bill and sole U.S. manufacturer of this type of speedometer, the provision would enhance the price competitiveness of the U.S.-made product by closing a TSUS loophole that unables importers to bring in speedometers that are identical to bicycle speedometers except for a 10 cents plastic gear that enables them to be mounted on the opposite side of a bike's front wheel (which is where exercycle speedometers go) and enjoy a 1.3 percent tariff treatment instead of the 19 percent tariff treatment that should apply.

The Department of the Treasury initiated an antidumping investigation on bicycle speedometers from Japan (TSUS 711.93) in June 1971; in June 1972 it made an affirmative dumping determination. As a result of this determination, the ITC instituted investigation No. AA1921-98 in June 1972. In September 1972, the ITC determined that a U.S. industry was injured by reason of such imports.

The Department of Commerce, in an administrative review dated July 2, 1982, ruled that speedometers used on exercisers and classified in TSUS item 711.98 would also be covered under the LTFV findings on bicycle speedometers and would be included in subsequent reviews. The amount of the antidumping duty currently imposed on the subject speedometers from Japan ranges from zero to 25% ad valorem.

Speedometers, other than for bicycles, which are covered by TSUS item 711.98 are assessed a column 1 rate of duty of 0.6 percent ad valorem. Bicycle speedometers (TSUS 711.93) are assessed a column 1 rate of 18.3 percent ad valorem. Articles under TSUS 711.98 are eligible for duty-free entry under GSP, if imported from designated beneficiary developing countries. Also, products of beneficiary countries entered under both tariff items are eligible for duty-free entry under CBERA.

Data on U.S. producers' shipments are not available, since their publication would constitute the disclosure of the operations of the sole firm in the industry, Stewart Warner Corporation.

U.S. imports of bicycle speedometers and their parts increased, in terms of value, from $2.6 million in 1980 to $4.4 million in 1984, or by 69 percent. Japan was the major supplier during 1980–84, accounting for 72 percent of such imports during the period. No CBERA-eligible countries supplied such articles during 1980–84.

Data on imports of speedometers for exercisers are not separately reported; however, such imports (included in TSUSA statistical annotation 711.9820) are estimated to have increased from $2.2 million to $3.8 million, or by 73 percent during the period. As with bicycle speedometers, Japan was the principal supplier of speedometers, tachometers and parts other than for bicycles during 1980–84, with a 6.3 percent share of such U.S. imports.

Data on exports of bicycle speedometers and exercise speedometers are not reported separately. Industry sources indicate that exports of such articles are negligible.

Data on apparent U.S. consumption of bicycle and exercise speedometers cannot be made available.

Estimated customs revenues would probably increase substantially if the new tariff item were enacted. Estimates of duties collected, based on 1984 imports of exercycle speedometers, indicate the revenues would increase from about $49,000 to $750,000, should the rate of duty increase from 1.3 percent to 19.6 percent on these articles.

SECTION 124. MARKING OF WATCHES AND WATCH COMPONENTS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2029 by Mr. Anthony)

Section 124 amends headnote 4 to schedule 7, part 2E of TSUS, to retain present marking requirements except for the following changes:

Dials would no longer be subject to marking requirements.

The work "conspicuously" would be replaced by the word "legibly," because a conspicuous marking may not be possible on the bezel.

A fifth mode of marking—mold-marking—would be added.

The requirement concerning adjustments would be deleted.

The manufacturer would be given the option of marking either the watch case or the bezel.

The purchase of a particular watch or clock is partly dependent on the reputation of the country of manufacture for quality. Since the consumer rarely inspects watch and clock components, the labeling of internal parts of a timepiece offers no perceptible advantage to the consumer in differentiating quality. Accordingly, this legislation purports to reduce regulatory requirements which provide no apparent advantage to the consumer.

The duty on watches and clocks varies from a fairly straight forward duty on the assembled clock or watch to a duty equal to the sum of duties attributable to case and movements. With only a few minor exceptions these articles are not eligible for benefits under the GSP but are eligible for CBERA treatment unless they contain any material that is the product of a column 2 country. Watches and watch movements produced or manufactured in an insular possession of the U.S. are eligible for duty free treatment if they conform to the quota and other requirements of headnote 6 to schedule 7 which details a rather complex program of preferences enacted into 1982 designed to assist the watch industry in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The estimated value of U.S. producer's shipments of watches, clocks and components decreased from $996 million in 1980 to $841 in 1984. Quantity data are not available due to the product mix included in the legislation.

U.S. imports of watches, clocks, and components, in terms of value, increased from $1,025 million in 1980 to $1,227 million in 1981. Such imports then dropped to $658 million in 1983 and increased to $887 million in 1984, or by 34 percent. The leading supplier of watches, clocks, and components in 1984 was Japan, accounting for $347 million, or 39 percent of the total. Switzerland and Hong Kong followed with $180 million and $164 million (20 and 19 percent) respectively.

U.S. exports of watches, clocks and components, in terms of value, increased from $67 million in 1980 to $84 million in 1981. Since then, they have steadily declined to $60 million in 1984, or by 30 percent since 1981. The Philippines was the leading market, receiving $13 million, or 22 percent of the total in 1984. Canada and Taiwan were the second and third largest market, receiving $11 million and $6 million (18 and 10 percent) respectively.

Apparent U.S. consumption rose from $1,954 million in 1980 to $2,094 million in 1981. It then declined to $1,534 million in 1983. Apparent U.S. consumption rose 9 percent in 1984 over that in 1983, to $1,669 million.

There would be no revenue effect of enactment of this legislation.,

SECTION 125. IMPORTATION OF FURSKINS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3019 by Mr. Gibbons)

Section 125 would end the prohibition on imports into the United States of ermine, fox, kolinsky, marten, muskrat, and weasel furskins which are the product of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR). This would be accomplished by deleting headnote 4 to subpart B, part 5 of schedule 1 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TUSUS). The import ban has been in effect since January 5, 1952, with respect to products of the USSR.

Following is a brief description of each of the skins covered by this legislation:

Ermine.—These furskins are derived from small weasel-like animals found most commonly in the USSR. These furskins are used chiefly in the manufacture of expensive jackets and coats.

Fox.—These skins come from silver, black, and platinum foxes (grown on ranches) or red and grey foxes (from wild catch).

Kolinsky.—These skins come from kolinskies which are animals closely resembling minks. They are found in and near Siberia and Manchuria and these pelts are used more for trimming than for coats and jackets.

Marten.—These skins come from animals closely resembling sables. Marten are found in the U.S. and Canada, and certain closely related animals are found in the USSR and China.

Mink.—These furskins are obtained from both captivity and the wild. In the dressing process the skin is tanned and the fur is cleaned and brushed. Mink furskins are used almost exclusively in the manufacture of fur coats, fur jackets, fur stoles, and wraps, and as fur trim on cloth or leather jackets.

Muskrat.—These skins are obtained from animals resembling beaver although smaller and lacking wide, flat tails. These skins are less expensive than the above skins and are used in the production of coats and jackets.

Weasel.—These animals are found throughout the world. Their skins are commonly used for fur trim.

The Administration seeks passage of this legislation as described in a letter from Malcolm Baldrige to George Bush to .."furthur the President's policy of seeking a more constructive working relationship with the Soviet Union, and to reciprocate a commitment by Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Patolichev to improve the market access for business firms in the Soviet Union."

The column 1 rates of duty for the furskins covered by this legislation vary from free (raw or not dressed skins except fox) to 9.3 percent ad valorem (silver, black, or platinum fox whether or not dressed). The column 2 rates are free for raw or undressed skins to 50 percent for the above mentioned fox furskins. These articles are eligible for GSP (except raw or not dressed skins) and CBERA.

Only limited data are available concerning domestic production of furskins of the type involved in this legislation. Data on the number of mink pelts produced on U.S. mink farms and the value of such production, as collected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, indicates that pelt production increased from 3.5 million pelts valued at $123.6 million in 1980 to 4.2 million pelts valued at $119.0 million in 1984.

Data on the wild catch during the 1979-80 season as collected by the American Fur Resources Foundation, indicates that in 1980 (the lastest year data is available) the predominant catch was muskrat (9.2 million animals valued at $79.5 million), fox (790,000 animals valued at $39.0 million) and mink (430,000 animals valued at $9.6 million).

Two domestic industries exist, one producing furskins and one dressing furskins and manufacturing garments.

Furskins are derived from animals (in this country usually mink and, to a lesser extent, foxes) either raised in captivity on fur farms or ranches or obtained from the wild catch of trappers and hunters, In 1984, there were 1,069 mink farms in the United States. Foxes were raised on 14 percent of these farms in 1984. The leading mink producing state was Wisconsin with 241 farms in 1984 followed by Utah and Minnesota.

In 1984, there were approximately 1,390 fox farmers in the United States. The leading fox-producing state was Wisconsin, with 185 farms in 1984; other leading fox-producing states included Pennsylvania, Minnesota, and Utah.

Officials of the National Board of Fur Farmers, an industry trade association, indicate that almost all fur farms are small-scale, family-owned businesses and that no individual or small group accounts for a significant share of the industry's sales.

An estimated one to two million individuals trap and hunt for furskins in the United States. Only a small portion derive a significant income from such activities, and no one individual or firm accounts for a significant part of the trapping industry. The estimated income derived from all wild furskins has totaled $350 million to $500 million annually in recent years. Most trappers, hunters and dressers handle furskins of a variety of species of animals.

The number of U.S. furskin dressers has been in a long-term decline. According to industry sources the number of U.S. furskin dressers is between 15 to 20 companies, concentrated in the New York City area, and the number of fur garment manufacturing companies is approximately 350.

Complete data concerning U.S. imports of the subject furskins are not available. Furskins of four of the species covered by the import ban (ermine, kolinsky, muskrat, and weasel) are not separately provided for, but instead are classified with other species not covered by the headnote under several residual or" basket" tariff items.

Data is available on three of the skins that are separately provided for in the TSUS (fox, marten, and mink). Imports of mink increased from $85.2 million in 1980 to $102.6 million in 1984. Fox increased from $19.8 million to $37.9 million over the same period and the increase of marten imports was $.9 million to $1.8 million.

The leading suppliers to the United States of mink, fox, and marten furskins in 1984 were Finland, Demark, Canada, and Sweden. U.S. imports of furskins of the types enumerated in the headnote from countries receiving the column 2 rate of duty amounted to about $0.5 million in 1984, or less than 1 percent of total imports of the subject furskins.

Data concerning U.S. exports of the subject furskins are reported only for whole fox furskins, not dressed; whole muskrat furskins, not dressed, and whole mink furskins, dressed or not dressed. The value of exports of these skins dropped from $232.8 million in 1980 to $143.2 million in 1984.

The value of U.S. exports of furskins classified in the residual tariff items (including an unknown quantity of exports of furskins of the type covered by the import restrictions) and of furskins classified on the basis of their forms, (plates, mats, and so forth) decreased from $208.5 million in 1980 to $125.6 million in 1984.

Data on U.S. consumption is not available.

To the extent that ending the prohibition of U.S. imports of the enumerated furskins from the USSR would result in an increase in total U.S. imports of such furskins, there would be a gain in customs revenues. However, since U.S. imports of these furskins have been prohibited since 1952, any projection of the quantity of imports that may result from ending the prohibition is highly speculative. Such furskins would be dutiable at column 2 rates of duty. Since articles classified in TSUS item 124.10 are free of duty, ending the prohibition on imports from the USSR of articles classifiable in that tariff item would have no effect on customs revenues.

SECTION 131. COLOR COUPLERS AND COUPLER INTERMEDIATES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2474 by Mr. Duncan)

This legislation would amend item 907.10 and 907.12 of the Appendix to the TSUS to continue through December 31, 1990 the suspension of the column 1 rate of duty on photographic coupler intermediates provided for in item 907.10, an actual use provision; and on photographic color couplers provided for in item 907.12. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged. The description of item 907.10 is amended to exclude from suspension the color coupler commonly referred to as C-1.

Coupler intermediates are organic chemical compounds that are used in the production of color couplers. A color coupler is a more advanced organic compound that is incorporated in photographically sensitized material and reacts chemically with oxidized color developers to form a dye. Color couplers are used to make color photographic paper, film and graphic arts materials.

The bill would enable the Eastman Kodak Co., a domestic firm, to continue to import duty-free for a temporary period certain color couplers and coupler intermediates that it does not make and that cannot be obtained domestically. Continuing the duty suspension would help keep its products (.e., photographic color paper) competitive in U.S. and world markets. Eastman Kodak produces some color couplers and coupler intermediates for captive use; however, since its plants cannot meet all of its requirements, the company must import selected products.

The majority of imported coupler intermediates are currently classifiable in items 403.59, 404.90; and 406.42. Color couplers are classified in item 408.41, photographic chemicals. The column 1 duty rates vary from 11.7 percent ad valorem to 13.5 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rates vary from 7 cents per pound plus 50 percent ad valorem to 7 cents per pound plus 62 percent ad valorem.

Color couplers are eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP and for the LDDC rate but coupler intermediates are not. Both are eligible for duty free treatment under the CBERA.

Data on domestic production is not available as it would reveal business confidential information.

Eastman Kodak is the principal domestic producer of coupler intermediates and color couplers, and its total production is for captive use in the production of photographic color paper.

Formerly, the 3M Co. produced photographic color paper, color couplers and intermediates in the United States, but also imported intermediates and color couplers from its Italian and English subsidiaries. 3M had been producing color couplers in the United States from imported coupler intermediates to reduce its requirements for imported color couplers.

In 1982 it requested the introduction in Congress of the bill (S. 2889) that resulted in the suspension of duties on color couplers and coupler intermediates. According to industry analysts, despite the duty suspension, 3M found it increasingly difficult to produce these products profitably in the United States and in 1984 ceased domestic production.

Import statistics on coupler intermediates and color couplers are not separately maintained. Eastman Kodak reported that in 1983 it imported approximately 155,000 pounds of these products, mostly from Japan and Western Europe. Because color couplers and intermediates are continually changing, Kodak could not predict its future imports exactly. It estimates, however, that importers of these products will increase by approximately 10 percent per year during the next few years.

Exact data is not available but exports are estimated to be negligible.

Consumption data on coupler intermediates and color couplers are not available. The photographic color paper production in the United States, however, can be used to determine the trend in consumption of these chemicals over a certain period. During 1977-80, U.S. sales of photographic color paper increased from an estimated $72 million to an estimated $200 million, and industry sources estimate that this growth pattern continued through 1984.

Based on 1983 import data obtained from Eastman Kodak, the potential loss of revenue resulting from enactment of this legislation would probably be about $110,000 per year.

SECTION 132. POTASSIUM 4-SULFOBENZOATE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2332 by Mr. Evans of Iowa)

This section would suspend until December 31, 1990 the column 1 rate of duty for p-sulfobenzoic acid, potassium salt (potassium 4-sulfobenzoate). Column 2 would remain unchanged.

P-sulfobenzoic acid is used as an intermediate in the manufacture of probenecid which is a diuretic.

As one of two U.S. manufacturers of the drug probenecid, Salsbury Laboratories will use imported p-sulfobenzoic acid exclusively to produce probenecid. A company official states that by eliminating the duty on the subject chemical, U.S. manufacturers of probenecid will then be able to compete in the end-product market with low-cost imported probenecid. Approximately 26 percent of the U.S. apparent consumption of probenecid was accounted for by imports in 1983.

The column 1 rate of duty of p-sulfobenzoic acid is presently 1.7 cents per pound plus 17.9 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rates of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 57 percent ad valorem. It is not eligible for GSP but is eligible for CBERA.

The chemical p-sulfobenzoic acid, potassium salt is not produced in the United States. Use of this chemical by Salsbury Laboratories, Inc. as an intermediate in production of probenecid began in 1983.

No records exist to show either the quantity or value of imports of this chemical during 1980-85. An industry source estimates that approximately 7,300 pounds, valued at about $26,000, were imported in 1984. The same source estimates 1985 imports to be about 9,100 pounds, valued around $32,000.

U.S. export data for p-sulfobenzoic acid and its salts are not available as this chemical is classified in a residual (basket) Schedule B number. According to industry sources, there are no U.S. exports of the subject chemical.

U.S. consumption is estimated to be approximately that of imports.

Revenue losses for 1986 are estimated to be $15,000 in 1986.

SECTION 133. 2,2'-OXAMIDOBIS[ETHYL 3-(3,5'DI-TERT-BUTYL-4-HYDROXYPHENYL) PROPIONATE]

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2351 by Mr. Rowland)

The proposed legislation would temporarily suspend the column 1 rate of duty on imports of 2,2'-oxamido bis-[ethyl 3-(3-5-di-tert-butyl-4-hydroxyphenyl)propionate], classified in item 405.34 of the TSUS until December 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

The subject chemical is a synthetic organic chemical used by industrial processors and fabricators as a high-performance antioxidant and metal deactivator in various polymers, such as polypropylene, polyethylene, and poylstyrene.

Although other antioxidants are used in polymer applications, this chemical meets specifications in specific applications not served by any other antioxidant currently produced in the United States.

The temporary duty suspension is intended to permit Uniroyal, which is the major U.S. importer, to supply this chemical to its customers in a cost-efficient manner. It is not currently produced in the United States. The Uniroyal Chemical Division of Uniroyal Inc. has indicated it cannot produce the chemical domestically without diverting fully utilized production capacity and facilities from the manufacture of other chemicals.

This chemical is classified in item 405.34 of the TSUS. The column 1 rate of duty is 13.5 percent ad valorem, and no preferential duty rate is afforded to imports from LDDC's. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 58 percent ad valorem. Imports of this chemical are not eligible for duty-free entry under GSP. However, imports are eligible for CBERA.

There is no domestic production.

Data on imports is business confidential.

U.S. consumption is apparently equal to imports.

If the estimated import and price levels of 1984 remain unchanged, the potential annual customs revenue loss would be approximately $50,000.

SECTION 134. DICYCLOHEXYLBENZOTHIAZYLSULFENAMIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1265 by Mr. Campbell)

Section 134 would suspend the column 1 rate of duty for dicyclohexylbenzothiazylsulfenamide (DCBS), classified in item 406.39 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS), until December 31, 1990, and would add item 906.45 to subpart B of part 1 of the Appendix to the TSUS. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

DCBS is a rubber-processing accelerator which speeds the cross-linking reaction of rubber with sulfur. Sulfur bridge cross-links (vulcanization) makes the rubber harder and stronger, while eliminating the tackiness of untreated rubber. Rubber compounders use an average of 1.5 pounds of DCBS per 100 pounds of raw rubber.

The present duty on DCBS increases the manufacturing cost of steel-belted radial ply tires. At the present time, DCBS is not produced in the United States.

DCBS is classified in TSUS item 406.39, with a column 1 duty rate of 1.7 cents per pound plus 16.2 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate is 7 cents per pound plus 52 percent ad valorem. LDDC rates are provided for this item. DCBS is not eligible for duty free treatment under the GSP. However, imports from designated Caribbean countries could be eligible for duty free treatment under the CBERA.

There is no domestic production.

DCBS it is regarded as a specialty adhesion promoter, with specific application in the steel belting construction of radial tires. Domestic producers of other sulfenamide accelerators are American Cyanamid Co., B.F. Goodrich Chemical Co., the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Monsanto Corp., and Uniroyal, Inc. These producers regard DCBS as a low-volume specialty accelerator that will not adversely affect their production or sales of sulfenamide accelerators.

The major importer of DCBS is Mobay Chemical Co., which imports it from its parent company, Bayer A. G. of the Federal Republic of Germany. From 1979 to 1983 imports of DCBS ranged from 88,000 to 190,000 pounds. Industry sources estimate that imports of DCBS during 1984 were less than 500,000 pounds.

There were no U.S. exports in the past five years.

Date on apparent U.S. consumption are not available.

The estimated revenue losses for the three-year period from 1985 through 1987, set forth below, are based on ItC data and industry sources.

Estimated revenue loss

Year:
1985	$263,000

SECTION 135. 2,4-DICHLORO-5-SULFAMOYL BENZOIC ACID

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1734 by Mr. Jones of Oklahoma)

Section 135 would add item 906.48 to the TSUS to temporarily suspend the column 1 rate of duty on 2,4-dichloro-5-sulfamoyl benzoic acid (lasamid). The column 2 would remain unchanged. The duty suspension would be effective until December 31, 1990.

Lasamid is an intermediate chemical used to produce the drug furosemide. Lasamid is an oderless, white crystalline powder soluble in acetone, alcohol, and weak caustic solutions. As of 1985 only one U.S. pharmaceutical firm manufactured furosemide domestically and this same firm consumes about 95 percent of total imports of lasamid. Duty suspension would enable the company to be more competitive with imported furosemide.

Lasamid is currently tariffed at column 1 duty rate of 1.7 cents per pound plus 18 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate is 7 cents per pound plus 57.3 percent ad valorem. Lasamid has no LDDC rate and no GSP eligibility but does qualify for duty free entry under the CBERA.

American Hoechst is the only significant importer of lasamid and imports have ranged from 48,766 lbs. to 121,915 pounds over the past five years. In 1984 imports were 40,590 lbs. Lasamid cost approximately $10 per lb.

Data on U.S. consumption is not available.

Estimated revenue losses in 1986 are $190,000, in 1987, $198,000, and in 1988, $206,000.

SECTION 136. DERIVATIVES OF N-[4-(2-HYDROXY-3-PHENOXYPROPOXY)PHENYL]ACETAMIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2352 by Mr. Rowland)

The proposed legislation would add new item 907.11 to the Appendix to the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) in order to suspend the column 1 rate of duty on derivatives of N-[4-(2-hydroxy-3-phenoxypropoxy)phenyl]acetamide until December 31, 1990.

The subject product is a fortifier for epoxy resins that is capable of improving the strength and elasticity of the resin while avoiding brittleness. The subject product is not currently produced in the United States. The epoxy resins and articles of plastics that are capable of being improved by the fortifier are produced in the United States. Import duties on the fortifier increase the cost of the fortifier to domestic epoxy resin manufacturers.

The fortifier for epoxy resins is classified in TSUS item 407.16, covering other mixtures in whole or in part of any of the product provided for in subpart 1B of Schedule 4 of the TSUS (benzenoid industrial organic chemicals). The column 1 duty rate of the fortifier is 1.7 cents per pound plus 13.6 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material; the column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 43.5 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material. The fortifier is eligible for duty-free entry under CBERA and GSP, (unless it is imported from Venezuela).

If the active ingredient of the fortifier were imported in a form that is 95 percent or more pure, the active ingredient would be classified under TSUS item 405.34. The column 1 rate of duty of 13.5 percent ad valorem under this tariff item would not apply to the mixture since it is lower than the column 1 rate of duty for TSUS item 407.16. The column 2 rate of duty under item 405.34, 7 cents per pound plus 58 percent ad valorem, would apply to the mixture if it were the highest rate applicable to any component material.

There is no domestic production.

Separate import data for the fortifier are not available, since this mixture is one of many articles classified as "other benzenoid chemical mixtures". Since this product was patented in 1984, it is unlikely that there were any imports in commercial quantities. The only known source of this mixture is Canada. No imports were supplied by column 2 sources. The importer of this chemical is Uniroyal, Inc.; the firm has projected a growing U.S. market for this product.

Apparent U.S. consumption is estimated to be approximately equal to the level of imports.

If the import quantities and price levels projected for 1985–87 are realized, the potential annual loss of customs revenue would amount to approximately $38,000 in 1985, $94,000 in 1986, and $157,000 in 1987. The quantity of imports of the fortifier is expected to increase significantly because of the improved strength and reduced brittleness that it imparts to epoxy resins.

SECTION 137. 1,2-DIMETHYL-3,5-DIPHENYLPYRAZOLIUM METHYL SULFATE (DIFENZOQUAT METHYL SULFATE)

(Oriiginally introduced as H.R. 2693 by Mr. Roe)

This section would amend Subpart B of "part" of the Appendix to the TSUS by adding a new item, 907.24, described as 1,2-dimethyl-3,5-diphenyl-1-H-pryazolium methyl sulfate (difenzoquat methyl sulfate) provided for in item 408.22 of the TSUS. The column 1 and column 2 rates of duty would be "free" until December 31, 1990.

The chemical difenzoquat methyl sulfate is synthetically produced from benzene derivative and other chemicals. It is used as a selective postemergence herbicide for the control of wild oats in barley and wheat.

A member of the sponsor's staff stated that the bill was introduced on behalf of American Cyanamid Co., the only producer of this herbicide. A company official stated that elimination of the duty on this herbicide would result in a lower cost of the final product to U.S. consumers.

The herbicide difenzoquat methyl sulfate is currently classified in a residual "basket" category for herbicides, not artificially mixed, which are provided for in the Chemical Appendix to TSUS-item 408.19. Articles entered under item 408.19 are presently dutiable at a column 1 rate of 14.4 percent ad valorem, and LDDC rate of 13.5 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of 7 cents per pound plus 48.5 percent ad valorem.

The herbicide is currently eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP and also under CBERA. Since September 1, 1985, imports of this product from Israel may be entered free of duty.

There has been no domestic production in the past 5 years. American Cyanamid holds the patent on this product and produces it only through their subsidiary in Belgium.

In 1984, imports of this herbicide amounted to approximately 540,000 pounds. All of the imports in 1984 came from the Netherlands and were shipped to American Cyanamid.

Data for domestic consumption of this herbicide are not available; however, an industry source indicated that domestic consumption during the past five years was essentially the same as imports.

Based on data provided by an industry source, the following are estimated revenue losses: $360,000 in 1986; $365,000 in 1987; and $385,000 in 1988.

SECTION 138. DICOFOL

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2311 by Mr. Schulze)

Section 138 would temporarily suspend the duty on 1,1-bis(4-chlorophenyl)-2,2,2-trichloroethanol (Dicofol) for items entered between September 30, 1985 through December 31, 1990.

Dicofol is a synthetically produced chlorinated insecticide (more specifically, a miticide). It is currently being used on cotton, citrus fruits, field corn, beans, and approximately 60 other types of crops for the control of various species of mites. Other domestically produced miticides are also used to control mites on certain crops; however, Dicofol has the largest number of registered crop uses compared with other miticides. In many instances, Dicofol is the only registered miticide available.

Dicofol is classified in TSUS item 408.28, covering other insecticides. Articles covered by this item are dutiable at a column 1 rate of 14.9 percent ad valorem, an LDDC rate of 12.5 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of 7 cents per pounds plus 64.5 percent ad valorem.

On January 12, 1984, Public Law 97-446 was enacted, which in its section 133 temporarily reduced the rate of duty on Dicofol to the rate applied to articles classified in TSUS item 408.24. The column 1 duty rate now applied to Dicofol imports as a result of this temporary legislation is 8.6 percent ad valorem.

Dicofol, as an article classified in TSUS 408.28 is eligible for GSP and CBERA.

There is no domestic production.

According to industry sources, U.S. imports of Dicofol in 1984 amounted to approximately 2.6 million pounds, valued at $5.9 million. The majority of these imports came from Italy and were shipped to Rohm and Haas. U.S. imports of Dicofol from the other foreign sources in 1984, from Makhteshim-Agan in Israel, entered free of duty under the GSP. The exact quantity of GSP imports in 1984 is not available, since other chemicals are classified in the same tariff item.

Based on 1984 import levels, annual revenue loss is estimated to be $600,000 during 1986–1990.

SECTION 139. CERTAIN KNITWEAR FABRICATED IN GUAM

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2225 by Mr. Blaz)

Section 139 suspends duty on sweaters from Guam assembled by U.S. citizens, nationals, or resident aliens from preshaped parts within guidelines of headnote 3(a) and within quota levels through October 31, 1992. This section is intended to apply solely to sweaters imported from Guam. Notwithstanding section 603(c) of the Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States, it would not create new benefits or requirements for articles imported from the Northern Mariana Islands.

The articles in this legislation are full-fashioned sweaters, items of knit outerwear covering the body but not extending below mid-thigh. Full-fashioning is a method of construction in which the sweater parts are made to conform to the contours of the human body. The preshaped parts are then joined by a process known as looping or by sewing.

The purpose of the section is to reinstate existing practice with respect to country of origin determination for duty assessment purposes for knit to shape apparel imported into the U.S. from Guam. The existing country of origin determination allows products to be considered products of insular possessions (general headnote 3(a)(i) if they do not contain foreign materials amounting to more than 70 percent of their total value. Sweater imports from Guam and the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) have been able to benefit from this provision in the past.

Customs has recently, however, issued new final rules of origin for textiles which state that "trimming, and/or joining together by sewing, looping, linking, or otherwise completed knit-to-shape component parts produced in a single country . . . do not constitute a substantial transformation; therefore, a sweater completed by such a process is a product of the country of origin of the component part."

The interagency Committee for the Implementation of Textile Agreement (CITA) has established special quota exemptions for Guam and CNMI. However, the governments of these two insular possessions have protested that the quantities are too small and combined with the imposition of duties, will result in severe economic hardship.

This section addresses only the tariff, not the quota.

During 1984, the average rate of duty paid on sweaters was 27 percent ad valorem; the actual MFN rates ranged from 5 percent to 38.8 percent ad valorem. On February 27, 1985, CITA provided for special MFA quota exemptions for exports of sweaters from Guam and CNMI between November 1, 1984 and October 31, 1985. Exempted from quotas were 160,000 dozen sweaters of cotton, wool or man made fibers assembled in Guam and 70,000 dozen sweaters assembled in CNMI. Sweaters exceeding these limits are charged against the quota of the country of origin, usually where the parts were knit.

Domestic production of all sweaters and textile fibers increased from 9.2 million dozen in 1979 to 10.7 million dozen in 1983.

The number of establishments in the U.S. sweater industry declined from 837 in 1980 to 790 in 1983. At the same time employment decreased from 69,300 workers to 62,200. Much of the decline has been attributed to the increase in imported sweaters and the increased use of new high-technology, less labor-intensive machinery.

Imports of all sweaters of textile fibers rose from 12.5 million dozen in 1980 to 20.2 million dozen in 1984.

The four major suppliers—Taiwan, Hong Kong, Korea, and China—accounted for 76.5 percent of the 1984 imports. Faced with tight quotas, manufacturers in these countries have moved more production offshore to subsidiaries in smaller less-developed countries and to U.S. insular possessions in the Pacific that have less restrictive quotas or no quotas.

Imports from Guam and the CNMI, which together accounted for approximately one percent of all sweater imports in 1984, increased significantly from 1982 to 1984. In 1982, the first year of production, Guam exported 33,000 dozen sweaters, valued at $2.7 million. By 1984, shipments of sweaters from Guam had increased 245 percent to 114,000 dozen, valued at $10 million. Production of sweaters in the CNMI began in 1984, when exports to the United States totaled 40,000 dozen, valued at $5 million.

Total sweater exports were small compared with imports and declined during 1980–84. Producers attributed this decline to the increased strength of the U.S. dollar and the resulting decline in the price competitiveness of their sweaters abroad. Exports decreased by 42 percent in quantity and by 56 percent in value during 1980–84 to 77,000 dozen, valued at $2.6 million.

Consumption rose from 19.2 million dozen sweaters in 1979 to 26.3 million dozen in 1983.

No change in revenue effect is expected as currently these sweaters are entering the U.S. duty free.

SECTION 140. 3,7-BIS(DIMETHYLAMINO)-P HENAZATHIONIUM CHLORIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2312 by Mr. Schulze)

Section 140 would provide for a suspension of the column 1 rate of duty for methylene blue. The column 2 rate of duty would not be changed. The duty suspension would be effective with respect to articles entered or withdrawn for consumption on or after the 15th day after the day of enactment of the bill, and would be in effect until December 31, 1990.

Methylene blue is used as a dye for cotton and wool in the textile industry, as an indicator in chemical oxidation-reduction reactions, as a biological and bacteriological stain, as an antidote to cyanide poisoning, and as an anodyne and an antiperiodic. In addition, it is used as a processing stabilizer in the manufacture of acrylic monomers. Although other chemical stabilizers are produced in the United States, this chemical meets specifications in selected applications not served by the other stabilizers.

The purpose of this bill is to suspend the duty on methylene blue since there is no domestic production.

The column 1 rate of duty of methylene blue is 22.7 percent ad valorem; the LDDC rate is 20 percent ad valorem; and the column 2 rate is 7 cents per pound plus 70 percent ad valorem.

Imports of this product are not eligible for GSP but are eligible for CBERA.

There is no domestic production.

Imports have averaged 36,000 pounds per year in the period 1979–1983 with the exception of a spurt in imports in 1980 to 94,000 pounds.

Based on most recent import data, revenue loss would be approximately $3,000 per year during 1986–1990.

SECTION 141. DINITRO-O-TOLUAMIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2333 by Mr. Evans of Iowa)

Section 141 would temporarily suspend the column 1 duty on 3,5 dinitro-o-toluamide (TSUS 411.93). Column 2 would remain unchanged. The suspension would be until December 31, 1990.

The chemical 3,5-dinitro-o-toluamide (commonly known as zoalene), is a bacteriostat that is used specifically as an additive to animal fees to inhibit or delay the development of additive to animal fees to inhibit or delay the development of animal coccidiosis, a disease caused by protozoan parasites. The disease primarily affects domestic animals and birds and only occasionally affects man and horses.

Salsbury Laboratories is the only domestic producer of zoalene. Demand for the product is confined to a small segment of the overall market for coccidiostats. As such, the firm is of the opinion that it might prove to be more economical and competitive to import the product as needed, rather than maintain domestic production. The possible suspension of the duty may be a significant factor influencing their decision.

The column 1 duty rate for zoalene is 9.5 percent ad valorem; the LDDC rate of duty is 8.1 percent ad valorem; and the column 2 duty rate is 7 cents per pound plus 67.5 percent ad valorem. Zoalene is not eligible for duty free treatment under the GSP but is eligible for CBERA duty free treatment.

Since there is only one domestic producer of this product, production data cannot be published because they would reveal confidential business information.

Zoalene accounts for less than a 10 percent market share among coccidiostats. The overall U.S. market for coccidiostats is estimated to amount to about $75 million to $100 million annually. There are at least three other such drugs that are more commonly used and together hold approximately 70 to 90 percent of the market, according to industry sources. They could, conceivably, be substituted in place of zoalene. In general, however, the use of a particular coccidiostat in a given situation is determined by the species of coccidia involved and/or on whether the chemical agent is approved for use in the particular species and/or class of species needing treatment. Each of the coccidiostats has its own range of effectiveness. Thus, although some are used more commonly than others and may be able to be substituted for one presently in use, they do not necessarily cover the same scope in terms of species.

Import data are unavailable because this product is classified in a residual or "basket" TSUS category. According to an industry source, however, there have been no imports of zoalene in the last five years. The major sources for this product are Israel and Spain. An industry source has quoted an approximate market price of $2,00-$5.00 c.i.f. per pound for this product, using the current market price from Spain as an example.

Revenue losses are estimated to be $14,000.

SECTION 142. SECONDARY-BUTYL CHLORIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1546 by Mr. Broyhill)

This section would add item 907.55 to the appendix to the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) to provide for a suspension of the column 1 rate of duty for secondary-butyl chloride until December 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would not be changed.

The primary use of secondary-butyl chloride is in the production of sec-butyllithium a powerful chemical base and alkylating agent. Sec-butyllithium is in turn used by pharmaceutical and specialty chemical firms in the production of high-value-added chemicals.

Secondary-butyl chloride is not currently produced in the United States, nor is it likely to be in the near future because of the extensive capital investment required, the corrosive materials used in the process, and the risks the producers must take. Downstream products of secondary-butyl chloride, notably sec-butyllithium, are produced in the United States, and the suspension of import duties on secondary-butyl chloride would allow domestic firms to compete more effectively with foreign producers of downstream products.

Secondary-butyl chloride is classified under TSUS item 429.47, which has a column rate of duty of 18 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of 114.5 percent. Imports from eligible countries may qualify for the GSP and imports from beneficiary Caribbean countries may be eligible for duty free treatment under the CBERA.

Separate import data for secondary-butyl chloride is not available. Imports of secondary-butyl chloride are estimated to have remained at a level of about 400,000 pounds, valued at about $500,000, since 1980.

The only two known importers of secondary-butyl chloride are Lithium Corporation of America, located in Bessemer City, NC, and Foote Mineral and Chemicals, located in Johnsonville, TN. Both use secondarybutyl chloride in the production of sec-butyllithium and purchase from the only known foreign producer, Deutsche Texaco AG Chemie of West Germany.

Assuming the import quantities and price levels of 1984 remain unchanged, the potential annual loss would amount to $9,000. Import quantities are not expected to increase significantly because of limited demand for the downstream chemical products.

SECTION 143. CERTAIN NONBENZENOID VINYL ACETATE-VINYL CHLORIDE-ETHYLENE TERPOLYMERS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2309 by Mr. Roe)

Section 143 would suspend the column 1 rate of duty on imports of nonbenzenoid vinyl acetate-vinyl chloride-ethylene terpolymers, containing by weight less than 50 percent derivatives of vinyl acetate, until December 31, 1990.

Vinyl acetate-vinyl chloride-ethylene terpolymer is a graft polymer and is used mainly in the manufacture of protective sheathing for fiber optic telecommunications cable. Small quantities of the terpolymer are also used as impact modifiers in the manufacture of rigid plastic profile forms for the construction market.

The terpolymer covered by this legislation is not now produced domestically and reportedly has no directly competitive domestic counterpart in the fiber optics sheathing market. The terpolymer is known to be imported by two U.S. firms at present.

Pantasote uses imported graft polymers to manufacture a patented plastic compound used to manufacture protective sheathing for fiber optic cable. It is the sole supplier of this patented material which it sells to a leading U.S. telecommunications company. The purpose of the proposed duty suspension is to enable Pantasote to continue to profitably manufacture this product, and to enable the telecommunications company to produce fiber optics competitively. No other U.S. company is producing these graft polymers.

Vinyl acetate-vinyl chloride-ethylene terpolymers, containing by weight less than 50 percent derivatives of vinyl acetate, is classified under TSUS item 445.48, which provide for other vinyl resins. Item 445.48 has a column 1 duty rate of 5.7 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 43.5 percent. The rate for LDDC's is 5.3 percent ad valorem. It qualifies for GSP and CBERA duty free treatment.

There has been no domestic production since 1984 when the sole U.S. producer, Pantasote, decided to go offshore to fulfill its needs for the product.

Official import statistics for the terpolymers covered by this legislation are not available. Imports of this product come from a firm in West Germany that is reportedly the only source producing a terpolymer with the properties necessary to meet the strict standards of the fiber optics industry. Pantosote, Inc. is the principal importer of the product. It began importing this material at the end of 1984 and projects that imports will be less than 5 million pounds in 1985, and will be less than 10 million pounds by 1989. Prior to 1984, imports of this terpolymer were negligible.

Based on projected imports, annual revenue loss is estimated to be from $196,000 to $419,000 in 1989 depending on how much of each type of the product is imported.

SECTION 144. TUNGSTEN ORE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2360 by Mr. Flippo)

The legislation would suspend the column 1 rate of duty on tungsten ore until December 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would not be affected.

Tungsten ore is the crude mineral form from which tungsten metal is obtained. The extreme hardness of tungsten makes it a preferred metalworking material for cutting edges of machine tools subject to intense wear or abrasion, as well as for metal surfaces in forming and shaping dies. The mining and petroleum industries, for example, use considerable quantities of tungsten carbide in drill bits, in the cutting edges of earth moving equipment, and in crushing machinery.

Mill products made from tungsten metal powder are used by the electronics and electrical industries.

In 1984 the end uses of tungsten were as follows: metalworking, mining and construction machinery and equipment, 75 percent; electrical machinery and equipment, 9 percent; lamps and lighting, 7 percent; transportation, 5 percent; and other, 4 percent.

According to industry sources, in the past few years there has been very little domestic tungsten concentrate available for the processing industry since (1) mine production has been at low levels for three years due to low concentrate market prices, and (2) most mine production has been captively consumed by producers of ammonium partungsate. The United States relied on imports of tungsten ore and concentrate for over 55 percent of reported consumption for the past three years, with well over half of the imports entering duty-free as a result of GSP. Domestic mining/processing companies purchase imports to augment their own production and could, therefore, benefit from the temporary duty suspension which would have the result of lowering the cost of the imported raw material.

U.S. imports of tungsten ore and concentrate are classified in TSUS item 601.54 with a column 1 duty of 17 cents per pound. Tungsten ore is eligible for duty-free entry under both the GSP and CBERA.

The tungsten industry is highly concentrated, and most companies are vertically integrated. In 1984, about 95 percent of the domestic tungsten concentrate production came from three mines in California and Colorado. Most major domestic mines operated below capacity or were temporarily closed, primarily due to low concentrated prices and demand. Mine capacity utilization was 24 percent in 1984.

U.S. imports of tungsten ore increased from 11.3 million pounds in 1980 to 12.8 million pounds in 1984. In 1984, tungsten ore was supplied by Canada (25 percent), Bolivia (22 percent), Thailand (13 percent), Portugal (10 percent) and Peru (10 percent). There were no imports of tungsten ore from column 2 sources. Of the GSP imports, Bolivia accounted for 32 percent; Thailand, 18 percent; Portugal, 15 percent; and Peru, 15 percent.

U.S. exports of tungsten ores decreased from 2.0 million pounds in 1980 to .3 million pounds in 1984. The market for tungsten ore in 1984 were West Germany, 38 percent; Austria, 22 percent; Brazil, 19 percent; Mexico, 16 percent; and France, 5 percent.

Apparent U.S. consumption of tungsten concentrates (pounds of contained tungsten) decreased from 20.4 million pounds in 1980 to 18.9 million pounds in 1984.

Based on the levels of total and GSP imports of tungsten ore in 1984, it is estimated that enactment of this legislation would result in the loss of customs revenues of approximately $659,000 annually.

SECTION 145. CERTAIN STUFFED TOY FIGURES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2335 by Mr. Gradison)

Section 145 would temporarily suspend the column 1 rate of duty applicable to imports of toy figures of animate objects, not having a spring mechanism and not exceeding 25 inches in either length, width, or height and valued over 10 cents per inch of height, classified in item 737.30 of the TSUS. The duty suspension would be in effect through December 31, 1990.

These products are stuffed toy animals or figures having predominantly humanoid or animal-like features and are not commonly known as dolls. Stuffed toy figures of animate objects range from small inexpensive curiosities to larger-than-life-size animals and characters costing many hundreds of dollars. One category of stuffed animal is the low-quality, inexpensive animal of rather simple design, generally used as prizes in carnival games. However, the proposed legislation only covers those figures valued over 10 cents per inch of height, a category in which few carnival stuffed toys fall. The remaining stuffed toys either have a smooth cloth exterior or are plush—a trade term referring to a soft and pliable stuffed toy generally having a furry or velvet-like exterior that may simulate the coat of a living animal.

Although this product group consists of toys both for children's use and for collection or decoration, most stuffed toys are intended for use as children's toys.

Complete stuffed toy figures and skins for such figures are domestically produced. Because stuffed toy animals are often large in size, reduced freight costs are often more important than higher labor costs in encouraging domestic production. Therefore, domestic production is generally concentrated in the largest toys and imports in the smaller sizes. However, the freight cost for skins is a much less important factor than the labor cost, so that there is significant domestic production consisting of stuffing imported skins. In general, imports are said to be comparable in quality to domestically produced stuffed toys. The duty suspension proposed by this legislation was originally proposed as a part of broader legislation that eventually resulted in a temporary duty suspension on stuffed dolls, doll skins and stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects. These items are the subject of H.R. 2238 introduced by Congresswoman Schneider. Items covered by TSUS 737.20 were removed from the 1982 legislation because of opposition from some importers and producers.

This new proposal results from the varied application of duty-free treatment of the subject articles under GSP and CBERA. Korea, the leading foreign supplier exceeded its competitive need limitations and Taiwan lost its duty free eligibility on July 1, 1985 for the same reason. China, the third largest supplier is not eligible for any preferential tariff programs. The remaining suppliers are a mixed bag, some having only GSP eligibility and some having that and CBERA. Most of the larger U.S. firms in the stuffed toy industry source from more than one of these countries, some from all seven.

The subject toys are currently dutiable at a column 1 rate of 5.9 percent ad valorem, column 2 of 70 percent and an LDDC rate of 5.5 percent.

For the purposes of Customs classification, the term "animate" has traditionally included only animals or humanoid figures (other than dolls) that are predominantly earthly in nature. Nonearthly creatures, robots, machines, and vegetable or mineral objects vested with human or animal features are excluded, as are creatures that are hybrids of two or more earthly creatures.

The production of the subject articles was $86 million in 1980 and increased to 163.1 million in 1984. This includes the value of imported part incorporated in the toys. Production using imported skins increased by approximately 75 percent between 1983 and 1984.

Specific information concerning the domestic industry producing only the products covered by the legislation is not available. However, there were approximately 200 U.S. firms producing all types of dolls and stuffed toys in 1984. Employment in the doll and stuffed toy industry, which prior to 1982 had been declining, recovered somewhat in 1984, rising to about 7,800 employees, including about 6,600 production and related workers. The industry is concentrated in New York, New Jersey, California, and the New England states.

Nearly all domestic producers, including all the major firms, import to some extent. These activities range from the importation of skins to significant investment in foreign production facilities for supplying both U.S. and foreign markets. Although there is some production of complete stuffed toys in the United States, most domestic producers of the toys covered by the legislation rely on imported skins. Those toys that are entirely manufactured in the United States are either the very large toys or those toys sold as specialty items that do not usually compete in the "children's" toy market.

Imports of the subject articles increased from 38.7 million units in 1980 to 166.7 million units in 1984. As previously stated the top 3 importing countries were Korea (58 percent), Taiwan (27 percent) and China (6 percent). Imports under the GSP were 47.1 million units in 1984. CBERA imports were 600,000 imports in 1984.

U.S. exports of stuffed toy figures of animate objects consist primarily of (1) unfinished goods intended for further processing and reexport to the United States and (2) high-priced specialty items that compete in other markets in the same manner that U.S. imports from developed countries compete in the U.S. market. As such, U.S. exports were extremely limited, not exceeding 7 percent of producers' shipments in any year of the period 1980–84, and usually far less than that.

Consumption increased from $145.4 in 1980 to $456.5 million in 1984. Imports as a share of consumption (in value) rose from 43 percent in 1980 to 65 percent in 1984. If the import value is inflated to the first U.S. billing value the 1984 figure swells to 80 percent.

Assuming that imports from Korea and Taiwan remain ineligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP during 1986–90 and that China does not gain GSP eligibility during the period, the enactment of the legislation would result in an estimated customs revenue loss of $25 million to $30 million in 1986 and an estimated annual loss of $20 million to $25 million during 1987–90.

SECTION 146. DUTY FREE ENTRY OF PERSONAL EFFECTS AND EQUIPMENT OF PARTICIPANTS AND OFFICIALS INVOLVED IN THE 10TH PAN AMERICAN GAMES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2723 by Mr. Jacobs)

The proposed legislation would add a new temporary provision to the Appendix to the TSUS to grant duty-free entry into the United States for the personal effects, equipment, and other articles of foreign participants coming to Indianapolis, Indiana in 1987 for the Tenth Pan American Games. Similar duty treatment would also be provided to articles entered by officials for the Games, accredited members of delegations, immediate family members of any of the above, and any servants to such persons. The duty suspension would be administered under the terms of regulations promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury and would continue through September 30, 1987. The new tariff item, designated as Appendix item 915.10, would be for articles entered after May 31, 1986.

The proposed legislation is similar to a previously enacted provision which granted temporary duty-free entry to articles brought to the United States for use during the Los Angeles Olympic games held in 1984. Specifically, proposed TSUS item 915.10 would utilize the same article description (other than the different reference to the title of the Games) as was employed in prior TSUS item 915.00, which expired on September 30, 1984. The duty suspension is conditional that the articles are required to be consumed, destroyed or exported and not to be sold commercially in the United States. The Secretary of the Treasury is empowered to issue regulations concerning the scope and operation of item 915.10.

With the duty suspension provision, persons eligible to use it would not be compelled to obtain a temporary importation bond for the amount of customs duties otherwise applicable, then wait for a duty refund following proof that the articles had been exported from the United States.

There would be no effect on revenue.

SECTION 147. CARDING AND SPINNING MACHINES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2310 by Mr. Schulze)

This legislation would amend the Tariff Schedule of the United States (TSUS) to suspend the existing column 1 rate of duty on spinning, twisting, doubling, and other machines specially designed for wool. The provision would also cover machines used to prepare for spinning wool intended for specified applications. Machines for making combed wools (worsted) yarn would be excluded.

The subject machines are used in the preparation of wool and the manufacture of yarns.

Spinning machines are used to reduce the roving (soft strand of loosely assembled fibers made from silver for spinning into yarn) to the required fineness, and to twist and then wind the yarn into a cap, bobbin, or paper tube.

Doubling machines simply take two, three, four or more single strands of sliver (untwisted continuous brand of fibers resulting from the carding process) or yarn and wind them onto one cone. The purpose of this operation is to increase the uniformity of the strand which is ultimately to be transformed into finished yarn.

The legislation was introduced on behalf of the members of the Northern Textile Association (NTA), textile fabric manufacturers located primarily in the Northeastern States. The association was primarily interested in machines specifically intended for spinning and carding wool into yarns, since it reports few such machines are domestically produced.

Spinning, twisting, doubling, and other machines specially designed for wool are provided for in TSUS item 670.04. This provision includes all machines used to produce yarns from wool; however, the Customs National Import Specialist indicates that identifying those machines which are "specially designed" can be difficult. The column 1 rate of duty is 5.3 percent ad valorem ad the column 2 rate is 40 percent. Imports are eligible for GSP and CBERA.

According to industry sources, between 30 and 40 domestic firms produce spinning, twisting, doubling or other machinery designed for producing yarn from wool, cotton, synthetics, or blends.

Estimated U.S. production of all spinning, twisting, doubling, or other machinery designed to prepare yarns (including those from wool) increased by 12.5 percent from $57.5 million in 1980 to $64.7 million in 1984. Since the majority of these machines are capable of processing wool, cotton, and synthetics, it is not possible to differentiate based on fiber type. Few of these machines are manufactured or designed solely to produce wool, according to industry officials.

The quantity of imports increased irregularly from 262 units valued at $398,000 in 1980 to 391 units valued at $2,151,000 in 1984.

In 1984, the principal sources of U.S. imports of these machines were West Germany (accounting for 37 percent of total imports), France (accounting for 36 percent of total imports), and Belgium (representing 22 percent of total imports).

U.S. exports of these machines averaged about 1,500 units per year during 1980–1984. (Exports of machinery based on type of yarn produced are unavailable.) Canada and Mexico were the principal markets for these exports.

During the period 1980–84, apparent U.S. consumption of all spinning, twisting, doubling, and other machines designed for preparing and producing yarn (including wool yarns) increased from $134.7 million in 1980 to $236.7 in 1984.

Based on 1984 import levels, annual revenue loss would average approximately $104,000 during 1986–88.

SECTION 148. CERTAIN BICYCLE PARTS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2350 by Mr. Rostenkowski)

The proposed legislation would affect the customs treatment of bicycle parts in two areas. First, it would continue the duty-free treatment of certain parts from June 30, 1986, until December 31, 1990. Some bicycle parts would be deleted from the enumeration of articles now afforded duty-free entry, while others would be added to that list. With the exception of caliper brakes, none of the parts which would be covered by the amended duty suspension provision are produced on a commercial scale in the United States. Second, the legislation would continue during the same time period the prohibition on the application of the Foreign-Trade Zones Act to bicycle component parts unless those parts are reexported, either as parts or as components of complete bicycles.

Most bicycle parts are made from steel, alloy metals, rubber, or plastics materials.

U.S. bicycle manufacturers either produce parts in their plants or purchase from domestic or foreign sources the parts needed to manufacture bicycles. With one exception, certain parts (primarily those for multispeed lightweight bicycles) are not produced in the United States and currently enter duty-free under temporary TSUS item 912.05 and 912.10. Many of the imported parts are said to be a higher quality than similar U.S. parts; U.S. producers of bicycle components face significant direct price and quality competition for all of the parts they supply.

Most bicycle parts, when imported separately, are classified as "parts of bicycles" in TSUS item 732.30 through 732.42. Other components, however, are classified in accordance with general headnote 10(ij) under more specific (often eo nomine) provisions elsewhere in the TSUS. The column 1 rates of duty on the subject parts are currently suspended but absent suspension these parts range from approximately 5 percent AVE to 11 percent AVE. Some of the items are GSP eligible and all are eligible for CBERA.

Two industries produce articles involved in the proposed legislation: the domestic industry manufacturing bicycle components and that producing bicycles. Manufacturers of bicycles also make certain basic parts, such as tubing for frames, handlebars, rims for wheels, and other parts requiring basic bending and pressing operations.

With the exception of caliper brakes, there are no U.S. firms known to be producing on a commercial scale any of the articles which would enter duty-free under this legislation. One firm, Dia-Compe, Inc. a wholly owned subsidiary of Yoshigai-Kikai Co., Ltd., Osaka, Japan, produces caliper brakes. However, all the caliper brakes produced by Dia-Compe are assembled from parts imported free of duty from its parent company. The only product which the firm produces is caliper brakes.

The bicycle component parts industry consists mainly of small businesses, the number of which is believed to have decreased below fifty in 1984; employment was estimated to be about 1,500 in that year.

In 1984, eight firms accounted for virtually all of the domestic output of bicycles. According to their estimates in recent annual reports, Huffy accounted for "in excess of 40 percent" and Murray-Ohio for about 36 percent of U.S. producers' shipments. In 1984, total employment in the bicycle industry amounted to an estimated 4,500 employees.

Imports of bicycles increased from 2.2 million units in 1980 to 4.7 million in 1984. On a quantity basis, Taiwan and Japan were the two principal suppliers of bicycles in 1984, providing the United States with 3.7 million units, or 78 percent, and 584,000 units, or 12 percent, respectively, of total imports. In 1984, U.S. imports of bicycles from sources assessed the column 2 duty rate amounted to 38,245 bicycles, valued at $927,647. Complete data on U.S. imports of bicycle component parts are not available; as a result of general headnote 10(ij), certain articles are classified in broad or residual TSUS items covering many other types of articles. Imports of those items for which data are available decreased from $208 million in 1980 to $204 million in 1984. The principal sources of such imports in 1984 were Japan, $88.7 million or 46 percent; Taiwan, $72.3 million, or 35 percent; Italy, $13.7 million, or 7 percent; and the Republic of Korea, $11.7 million, or 6 percent.

A substantial proportion of parts of bicycles provided for in various TSUS items in schedule 7, part 5, subpart C, now enter free of duty under TSUS item 912.10. Complete separate data are not currently available on the volume of such duty-free imports in 1984. However, partially estimated data for such imports recorded $1.1 million under TSUS item 912.05 (generator lighting sets) and an estimated $60.0 million under item 912.10. In 1984, duty-free imports entering under item 912.10 accounted for 44 percent of total imports dutiable and duty-free, of all parts entered in subpart C, part 5, of schedule 7.

Data on U.S. exports of bicycle parts are available only for those parts of bicycle classified in the TSUS under schedule 7, part 5, subpart C of the TSUS, and for bicycle tires and tubes. Exports of these parts decreased from $14.5 million in 1980 to $12.0 million in 1984. The articles covered in the proposed duty suspension are not exported because they are not produced in the U.S. with the exception of Dia-Compe caliper brakes which are not exported.

Exports of bicycles decreased from 92,000 units in 1980 to 31,000 units in 1984. The data illustrate that exports of bicycles have not been important for the U.S. bicycle industry. Thus, the continued restriction of FTZ operations to the manufacture or reexport of finished bicycles or parts would appear for practical purposes to preclude the use of zones for bicycle production or assembly.

Consumption of parts increased from $226.9 million dollars on 1980 to $236.2 million dollars in 1984. Consumption of bicycles increased from $680.4 million dollars in 1980 to $822.4 million in 1984.

Based on 1984 data, apparent U.S. consumption of caliper brakes was about 3.3 million brakes, 2.3 million of which were supplied by imports. Consumption of bicycle tires and tubes decreased from 11.8 million units in 1980 to 9.5 million units in 1983.

Using several assumptions it is estimated the extension of the FTZ provision would result in a savings of $1.5 million.

The extension of the duty free status of certain bicycle parts would result in a revenue loss of $5.8 million in 1986.

SECTION 149. 1-(3-SULFOPROPYL) PYRIDINIUM HYDROXIDE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4196 by Ms. Oakar)

This section, would suspend for two years the column 1 rate of duty on imported 1-(3-sulfopropyl) pyridinium hydroxide, classified in item 406.42 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS). It would amend subpart B of part 1 of the Appendix to the TSUS to add a new item 906.48, with dutyfree entry for articles from column 1 countries. The suspension would commence 15 days after the date of enactment and end on Dec. 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

The chemical, 1-(3-sulfopropyl) pyridinium hydroxide, is a liquid with a density of approximately ten pounds per gallon. It is synthesized from propane sultone and pyridine. The subject chemical is used exclusively in a proprietary formulation for copper and nickel electroplating baths.

At the present time, this chemical is classified in TSUS item 406.42 (other heterocyclic compounds and their derivatives) with a column 1 rate of duty of 13.5 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate of duty is seven cents per pound plus 52 percent ad valorem. The product is not eligible for duty-free entry under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP); however, it is eligible for duty-free treatment under Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) and under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985 as indicated in the Special column. No least developed developing countries rate of duty is provided.

Industry sources and Commission records show that there were no U.S. producers of 1-(3-sulfopropyl) pyridinium hydroxide, in the past five years. The Shell Chemical Co., the only U.S. producer of propane sultone, one of the raw materials used to synthesize 1-(3-sulfopropyl) pyridinium hydroxide, stopped production of propane sultone due to the associated industrial hazards.

As the subject chemical is classified in a residual (basket) TSUS item, the separate quantity or value of imports during 1980–85 are not available. Industry sources estimate that during this period a total of approximately 250,000 pounds of the subject chemical, valued at about $625,000, were imported into the United States. It is estimated that imports can be expected to grow by approximately ten percent each year during 1986–88.

According to industry sources, there are no U.S. exports of the subject chemical.

Domestic consumption during 1980–85 was essentially the same as imports.

Based on estimates from industry sources, the expected customs revenue losses are $19,000 in 1987 and $20,000 in 1988.

SECTION 150. D-6-METHOXY-α-METHYL-2-NAPHTHALENEACETIC ACID AND ITS SODIUM SALT

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4283 by Mr. Wirth)

The proposed legislation would establish a new item in the Appendix to the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) in order to afford temporary duty-free treatment to imports of d-6-methoxy-α-methyl-2-naphthaleneacetic acid from countries entitled to column 1 rates of duty. The column 2 rate of duty would not be affected by the bill, and the suspension of the column 1 of duty would continue through December 31, 1990.

The subject products are pharmaceutical intermediates which are covered by U.S. and foreign patents and are utilized in the manufacture of anti-inflammatory drugs used to treat arthritis. According to the proponent of the legislation—the owner of the patents—basic materials are exported from the United States to the Bahamas and to Ireland, which grant duty-free entry thereto on the basis that there is no domestic supplier of the materials (because of the patents). In those two countries, the basic materials are manufactured into the subject intermediates, which are then shipped to Puerto Rico for further processing and packaging; the intermediates contain both U.S. and foreign component chemical products. It is believed that no substitute for the finished drugs exists for those persons for whom it is prescribed. Because of the patents, no U.S.-produced alternative source for the subject intermediates exists. The acid, known as naproxen, has the chemical formula C14H1403 and the sodium salt has the formula C14 H13Na03.

These products are classified in item 412.22 of the TSUS, which covers nonenumerated analgesics, antipyretics, and nonhormonal anti-inflammatory agents. These articles are dutiable at a column 1 rate of 7.6 percent ad valorem, a least developed developing countries rate of 6.8 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of seven cents per pound plus 47.5 pecent ad valorem. Imports from beneficiary countries under the GSP and the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) are eligible for duty-free entry, as are products of Israel. The column 1 rate of duty for this tariff item will be reduced as of January 1, 1987 to 6.8 percent ad valorem as a result of consessions granted in the Tokyo round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations.

There is no known domestic production of the subject products. Syntex Corp., the owner of the patents on these products, manufactures some of the raw materials for the subject products at their facility in Boulder, Colorado.

Because there is only one firm involved in trading these intermediates, such data cannot be included since they would reveal confidential business information.

It is believed that the maximum customs revenue loss annually during the period of the duty suspension would range from $150,000 to $325,000, varying with the quantities of the subject products imported and with the amount of drawback of customs duties claimed by the U.S. importer-exporter.

SECTION 151. CERTAIN PESTICIDES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4372, H.R. 4374, and H.R. 4377 by Mr. Schulze)

The first provision of this section would suspend the column 1 rates of duty for dinocap and mixtures of dinocap with application adjuvants classified under items 408.16 and 408.38 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) until Dec. 31, 1990. The bill would amend subpart B of part 1 of the Appendix to the TSUS to add items 907.26 and 907.29 with free entry for articles from countries entitled to MFN treatment commencing on or after the 15th day of enactment and ending on or before Dec. 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

Dinocap is a fungicide-miticide used to control powdery mildew and mites, primarily on apples and other tree crops, vine crops, curcubits, and ornamentals. It is imported as both the technical grade and as a finished product containing application adjuvants. There are U.S.-produced fungicides and other U.S.-produced miticides; however, there are few, if any, pesticides that are effective in both of these areas. In addition, use of dinocap-resistant strains as has occurred with other fungicides and miticides, according to statements from the producer.

Dinocap is presently classified under item 408.16, fungicides, not artificially mixed. Articles entered under this item number are presently dutiable at a column 1 rate of 11.5 percent ad valorem, LDDC of 11.1 percent ad valorem, and a column 2 rate of 7 cents per pound plus 40 percent ad valorem. Effective July 1980, the present item number was established with concessions for a staged reduction in the column 1 rate to a final rate of 11.1 percent ad valorem as of January 1987.

Mixtures of dinocap with application adjuvants are currently classified under item 408.38, other pesticides, The column 1 rate and LDDC rate are currently 0.8 cents pound plus 9.7 percent ad valorem, while the column 2 rate is 7 cents per pound plus 31 percent ad valorem. The column 1 rate was not subject to annual staged reductions as a result of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979. Prior to the enactment of this Act, these products were classified in item 405.15, with a column 1 rate of 1.7 cents per pound plus 12.5 percent ad valorem. Articles classified in either item 408.16 or item 408.38 are eligible for duty-free treatment under the CBERA, the GSP, and the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

During 1981–84, dinocap and its preparations were produced in the United States by Rohm and Haas, at their plant in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In 1985, Rohm and Haas stopped production of dinocap, but continued to manufacture the preparations using imported material. The data, however, is not available because to do so would reveal business confidential material.

According to an industry source, U.S. imports of these products in 1985 amounted to approximately 276,000 pounds, valued at $1.2 million. All of these imports came from Italy and were shipped to Rohm and Haas. There were no imports from any other sources. The Commission staff was not able to identify any imports of these products during 1981–84 as these products were classified in "basket" TSUS item numbers.

Exact export data for these products are not available as they are classified in residual Schedule B item numbers.

Data for domestic consumption of these products are not available; however, an industry source indicated that domestic consumption in 1985 was nearly the same as imports.

Based on data provided by an industry source, the estimated annual revenue loss during 1986–90 would be approximately $10,000.

The second portion of section 253 would suspend the column 1 (MFN) duty on mixtures of 1,1-bis(4-chlorophenyl)-2,2,2-trichloroethanol (dicofol) and application adjuvants through Dec. 31, 1990. The column 2 (statutory) duty is not affected by the bill. The technical grade (active ingredients) dicofol already is subject to a duty suspension which expires Dec. 31, 1990. Continuation of that suspension is covered by separate legislation.

Mixtures of dicofol and application adjuvants currently enter the United States under Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) item 408.36 at a MFN duty of 0.9 cents per pound plus 9.7 percent ad valorem. This MFN duty will be reduced to 0.8 cents per pound plus 9.7 percent ad valorem on January 1, 1987, as a result of concessions made in the Tokyo Round of trade negotiations. Imports under TSUS item 408.36 are eligible for duty-free treatment under the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences.

Dicofol is not produced in the United States. It is imported both as a technical grade (active ingredient) and as mixtures of the technical grade and application adjuvants. Dicofol is a cholorinated hydrocarbon developed specifically as a broad spectrum miticide. There are no other uses. After entry into the United States, the technical grade and the mixtures are further processed or formulated to produce a variety of miticide products.

Because the subject products enter in a basket category, determination of the revenue effect is not possible. It is estimated that revenue foregone would be approximately $85,000 per year for the period 1986 through 1990.

The third portion of section 253 would suspend the column 1 (MFN) duty on mixtures of mancozeb, dinocap, stabilizer and application adjuvants through Dec. 31, 1990. Currently, imports of mancozeb/dinocap mixtures would enter under item 408.38 at an MFN duty of 0.8 cents per pound plus 9.7 percent ad valorem. Imports under TSUS item 408.38 are eligible for duty-free treatment under the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences.

There are no U.S. manufacturers of mancozeb/dinocap. These mixtures are produced in Europe, under patents which expire in 1991, by subsidiaries of a U.S. firm. There is no single product manufactured or sold in the United States that is a direct replacement for the mancozeb/dinocap mixtures marketed domestically as Dikar. There are no commercial end used for mancozeb/dinocap products control one or more pests controlled by Dikar but no single product has as broad a control spectrum of fungi and mites.

The revenue impact is undetermined because the subject products enter in a basket category. It is estimated that revenue foregone would be approximately $300,000 per year for the period 1986 through 1990.

SECTION 152. CHOLESTYRAMINE RESIN USP

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4376 by Mr. Schulze)

Section 152 would temporarily suspend the column 1 rate of duty for cross-linked polyvinylbenzyltrimethylammonium chloride (cholestyramine resin USP) classified in item 412.70 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS). The bill would amend subpart B of part 1 of the Appendix to the TSUS to add item 907.30 with free entry for articles from countries entitled to MFN treatment commencing on or after the 15th day of enactment and ending on or before December 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

Cholestyramine resin is a synthetic, strongly basic, anion-exchange resin consisting of a copolymer of styrene and divinylbenzene with quaternary ammonium groups. According to an industry source, the resin is available in both the USP grade and "regular" grade. The letter has a water content of 70 percent, compared with 12 percent for the USP grade. The resin is used medicinally as a cholesterol lowering agent and is marketed domestically by Mead Johnson under the brand name "Questran." The orally ingested resin, a white to buff-colored, fine hygroscopic power, absorbs bile acids in the intestine, without being absorbed from the digestive tract. As bile acids are removed from the enterohepatic circulation, increased oxidation of cholesterol to bile acids occurs.

Several patents are presently in effect that relate to the product as well as its applications. These patents are effective into the next century, according to an industry source. As of May 14, 1985, however, the patent on method-of-use expired. This was considered the main patent on the product since a patent on the polymer itself expired several years ago.

Rohm and Haas Company stated that there are no U.S. manufacturers of finely ground, polyvinylbenzltrimethylammonium chloride, anion-exchange resins approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for use as antihyperlipoproteinemics. As such, the firm maintains that a tariff on this product is unnecessary.

Cholestyramine resin USP is presently classified under item 412.70. The duty rate for column 1 countries and for least developed developing countries (LDDC's) is 6.9 percent ad valorem. The column 2 duty rate is 7 cents per pound plus 45 percent ad valorem. The item number has no concession for a staged reduction in duty rates. The resin is not eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP; however, it is eligible for duty-free treatment under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) and under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985 indicated in the special column.

The market for hypolipidemics, agents used to reduced cholesterol and lipid levels in the blood, was valued at $60 million in 1984, an increase of 20 percent from 1983. Two of the hypolipidemics are anion-exchange resins. These resins are commonly called bile-acid sequestrants. One is cholestyramine resin USP and the other is colestipol hydrochloride, marketed under the brand name "Colestid Granules." The latter, although identical in end use to cholestyramine resin, has a different polymer structure. Of the approximately 2.4 million prescriptions for hypolipidemics written in 1984, "Questran" and "Colestid" accounted for 15 percent and 1 percent, respectively. "Questran" is expected to account for 25 percent of the projected $300 million market for hypolipidemics in 1990.

There is no significant medical difference between the two anion-exchange resin products. The preference in prescriptions was attributed to product loyalty, the length of time the product has been on the market, and the patient's tolerance of either product. Price is not considered a significant factor.

As the anion-exchange resin is classified in a residual (basket) TSUS item, the quantity or value of imports are not available. According to an industry source, however, there were no imports of this product prior to 1985. Approximately 250,000 pounds were imported in 1985, valued at $1-2 million. The industry source stated that projected total imports for 1986 will amount to 400,000-500,000 pounds, valued at $2-4 million. During 1987-90, imports are expected to amount to 550,000 pounds per year, valued at approximately $2-4 million per year. The current source of these imports is Italy, although the product is also available from France.

Data for domestic consumption are not available; however, industry sources indicate that domestic consumption in 1985 was estimated to amount to between 250,000 and 500,000 pounds, valued at $1-3 million.

Based on estimates from industry sources, annual revenue losses are expected to be approximately $190,000.

Year	Estimated loss ($1,000)

SECTION 153. 3 AMINO-3-METHYL-1-BUTYNE

(Originially introduced as H.R. 4375 by Mr. Schulze)

Section 153 would suspend the column 1 (MFN) duty on 3-amino-3-methyl-1-butyne through December 31, 1990. The column 2 duty is not affected by the bill. This chemical intermediate presently enters the United States under Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) item 425.52 at a MFN duty of 7.9 percent ad valorem. Imports under this item are eligible for duty-free treatment under the U.S. Generalized System of Preferences.

There is no domestic production of this intermediate, and no directly competing product. 3-amino-3-methyl-1-butyne is employed as a chemical intermediate in the manufacture of pronamide, a herbicide used to control grass and weeds for selected crops. Pronomide is manufactured by a single U.S. firm which imports the intermediate from subsidiaries abroad.

The revenue impact is undetermined because the subject chemical enters in a basket category. It is estimated that revenue foregone would be approximately $50,000 per year for the period 1986 through 1990.

SECTION 154. MANEB, ZINEB, MANCOZEB, AND METIRAM

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4373 by Mr. Schulze)

This section, would suspend temporarily the column 1 rate of duty for mixtures of maneb, zineb, mancozeb, and metiram, under item 432.15 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS). The bill would amend subpart B of part 1 of the Appendix to the TSUS to add item 907.60 with free entry for articles from countries entitled to MFN treatment commencing on or after the 15th day after the date of enactment and ending on or before Dec. 31, 1990. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

The products covered include derivatives of ethylenebisdithiocarbamate (EBDC) registered for use as agricultural fungicides. These mixtures consist of active ingredients, related reaction products, and application adjuvants such as suspension agents, dispersants, inert liquid and/or solid diluents, thickeners, defoamers, solvents, stabilizers, colorants, water, and antifreeze. EBDC fungicides are used to control wide spectrum of diseases on most agronomic crops including vegetables, fruits, vine crops, field crops, ornamentals, nursery stock, and seed. There are no commercial end uses for these products other than as agricultural fungicides. Currently, there are a number of other fungicides produced in the United States; however, EBDC-based fungicides are usually the most cost-effective, broad-spectrum fungicides available to U.S. farmers. Target fungi have not developed resistance to these fungicides as has been the case with some newer systemic fungicides.

Mixtures of maneb, zineb, mancozeb, and metiram, are currently classified under item 432.15, mixtures of pesticides not specially provided for. Articles entered under this item number are presently dutiable at a column 1 rate of 3.9 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material, an LDDC rate of 3.7 ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material, and a column 2 rate of 25 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material.

Articles classified in item 432.15 are eligible for duty-free treatment under the CBERA, the GSP, and the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

Only one U.S. firm, Rohm and Haas Company in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, produced the specified EBDC derivatives within the United States during the past five years. Production of these chemicals in the United States by Rohm and Haas was discontinued in 1985.

Data on U.S. production of these products are not available because to do so would reveal business confidential material.

Exact import data on these products are not available as they are classified in a "basket" item number. However, since Rohm and Haas was the only U.S. importer of these products during 1980-85, their import data reflect trade in these products. A company spokesman said that imports were 1.6 million pounds in 1981, 2.6 million pounds in 1984, and 6.7 million pounds in 1985. Rohm and Haas did not import these products during 1982 and 1983.

U.S. export data for these products are not available as they are classified in a residual (basket) schedule B item number. However, according to Rohm and Haas, exports of these products ranged from approximately 2.4 million pounds in 1981 to 2.7 million pounds in 1985. There were no exports of these products in 1980.

Data on the domestic consumption of these products are not available.

Based on estimates from industry sources, $1,000,000 is the estimated annual revenue losses during 1987-89.

SECTION 155. NICOTINE RESINS

(An amendment offered by Mr. Duncan)

The Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 provided for a temporary duty suspension for nicotine resin complex in the form of chewing gum pieces. The intent of the provision was to allow duty-free entry of a trademarked substance know as Nicorette, imported by Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

Subsequent classification interpretations by the Customs Service since the duty suspension was enacted have negated the intent to provide duty-free treatment for Nicorette. This amendment clarifies the definition of nicotine resin complex so as to include "measured doses in chewing gum form (provided for in item 438.02, part 3B, Schedule 4). Thus, Nicorette would be covered by this duty-free classification as originally intended by Congress.

This amendment has been reviewed by the Customs Service and International Trade Commission, who have reported that there are no problems with this language. It is basically a technical change.

The second part of this amendment extends the current duty suspension from December 31, 1987 to December 31, 1990. The patent on this item applies through 1992, so the extension of this suspension would not negatively impact any manufacturer.

SECTION 156. DOUBLE-HEADED LATCH NEEDLES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2166 by Mr. Broyhill)

This section provides temporary suspension for single and double-headed latch needles provided for in TSUS item 670.58 and compound needles provided for in TSUS 670.62. Both the Department of Commerce and the International Trade Commission have investigated this change and found that there is no longer domestic production of the needles covered in 670.62.

Hosiery Knitting needles in 670.62 have been covered by temporary suspension in item 912.09, which is repealed in this amendment. By providing temporary suspension in items 912.18 and 912.19, the current suspension is continued and the scope enlarged.

Double-headed latch needles, or "links" needles, are used in the manufacture of machine-knitted fabric. These needles each consist of a shank with a hook at each end.

The manufacturing process for needles generally includes a series of up to thirty hand and machine operations, including pressing, swaging, tempering, polishing, and straightening. The duty free treatment is sought as there is currently no domestic production.

Double-headed latch needles are classified in TSUS item 670.58 as latch needles for knitting machines. The column 1 rate of duty is 16 cents per thousand plus 11.7 percent ad valorem and the column 2 rate is $2.00 per 1,000 plus 60 percent ad valorem. These needles are eligible for GSP and such imports totaled $2.7 million in 1984. These needles are also eligible for CBERA.

There has been no U.S. production of latch needles since 1980, when the Torrington Co. divested itself of its needle operations.

Imports increased from 128 million units in 1980 to 161 million units in 1984. West Germany and Japan accounted for 69 percent of U.S. imports.

The average annual customs revenue loss that would result from the continuation of the duty suspension as to imported double-headed latch needles would be approximately $2.2 million. This estimate is based on 1984 import levels and on the staged reductions of the tariff rates schedules for 1985-90.

SECTION 157. SILK YARN

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4875 by Mr. Roe)

This section would suspend the column 1 rate of duty on silk yarn.

This provision would affect the following types of silk yarn: (1) continuous filament yarn not more advanced than organzine, singles, or tram, entering under TSUS item 308.30; and (2) colored, plied 100 percent silk yarn spun wholly from noncontinuous fibers, entering under TSUS item 308.51.

Most of the continuous filament yarn produced in this country or imported is used in the production of woven silk fabric, much of which is used for the manufacture of silk neckties.

The purpose of this provision is to assist U.S. manufacturers of silk fabric to compete with imports of silk fabric from Italy and other European countries by removing the tariff on the silk yarn used in producing the fabric.

The column 1 and column 2 rates of duty applicable to imports of the subject yarn are 10 percent ad valorem and 20 percent ad valorem, respectively. Yarn of 100 percent silk is not subject to restraints under the MFA. It enters duty-free from Israel, and is eligible for duty-free entry under the GSP and the CBERA.

There are no domestic companies known to be producing 100 percent spun silk yarn. There are believed to be 7 companies producing continuous filament silk yarn. Industry sources estimate that 1985 production of the latter product amounted to 430,000 pounds, valued at $8.4 million.

Imports of silk yarn under TSUS item 308.30 increased sharply from $108,000 in 1981 to $3.4 million in 1985. Those under TSUS item 308.51 jumped from $209,000 in 1981 to $1.4 million in 1983, but then declined to $740,000 by 1985.

Specific data for exports of the silk yarns covered by this provision are unavailable; however, industry sources estimate that exports of the subject silk yarn accounted for approximately $2 million in 1985.

It is estimated that annual domestic consumption is about $10 million.

The estimated revenue losses would be approximately $189,000 per year.

SECTION 158. 3-ETHYLAMINO-P-CRESOL

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4549 by Mr. Vander Jagt)

This section would suspend for three years the column 1 rate of duty for 3-ethylamino-p-cresol classified under item 404.96 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS).

The chemical 3-ethylamino-p-cresol is an intermediate chemical used in the production of certain dyes such as basic red 1. Minor uses for the subject chemical include the manufacture of certain fluorescent brightening agents used in paper processing.

The purpose of the duty suspension is to permit domestic production of basic red 1 to be price competitive with the imported product.

3-Ethylamino-p-cresol is classified under TSUS item 404.96, where it is one of eight chemicals listed by name. The column 1 rate of duty is 9 percent ad valorem, and the column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 65 percent ad valorem. Imports of the subject chemical from LDDC countries and from Israel are eligible for a preferential rate of duty of 7.8 percent ad valorem. The chemical is eligible for duty-free treatment under the CBERA, but is not eligible for GSP preferences.

There is no U.S. production or exports of the chemical.

Separate import data on the chemical are not available. However, industry sources estimate that approximately 150,000 pounds valued at $720,000 were imported into the United States in 1985. This accounts for all U.S. consumption in that year.

Based on estimates from industry sources, expected revenue losses would be about $60,000 per year.

SECTION 159. CHLOR AMINO BASE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4651 by Mr. Jenkins)

This section would suspend through December 31, 1990, the column 1 rate of duty for 4-chloro-2,5-demethoxyaniline (also known as chlor amino base).

The chemical, 4-chloro-2,5-demethoxyaniline, is a benzenoid intermediate chemical used to manufacture Pigment Yellow 83. Because of the unique chemical properties of the subject chemical, no other product can be substituted in the production of Pigment Yellow 83.

The suspension of duty will act to lower the overall cost of producing textiles in the United States since the chemical is used as a precursor in the production of printing ink and dyes for textiles.

Chlor amino base is classified under TSUS item 405.01 with a column 1 rate of duty of 6.7 percent ad valorem and an LDDC rate of 6.1 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 41.5 percent ad valorem. The product is not eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP; however, it is eligible for duty-free treatment under CBERA and under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

Only one domestic manufacturer, Pfister Chemical, Inc., produces 4-chloro-2,5-demethoxyaniline. Production data cannot be included because their publication would reveal confidential business material.

Industry sources estimate that imports of chlor amino base in 1985 were 254,247 pounds, valued at $1.2 million.

Separate U.S. export and consumption data are not available.

Estimated revenue losses are expected to average about $80,000 per year.

SECTIONS 160, 162, 165, 166, 168, 171. CERTAIN CHEMICALS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4599, by Mr. Torricelli)

This section would provide temporary duty-free treatment for the following chemicals: 2,2-bis-(4-cyanatophenyl), aminomethylphenylpyrazole, benzethonium chloride, malononitrile, metaldehyde, and paraldehyde USP, classified in TSUS items 405.82, 406.36, 408.32, 425.42, 427.58, and 439.50, respectively.

All of the chemicals affected by this bill are produced synthetically from petroleum products. These chemicals have a variety of primary uses. The chemical 2,2-bis-(4-cyanatophenyl) is used exclusively in the production of a specialty resin which is, in turn, used to manufacture printed circuit boards.

U.S. Pharmaceutical (U.S.P.) grade paraldehyde, also known as paracetaldehyde, is a rapidly acting hypnotic which has been in use for over a century, primarily to treat delirium tremens.

Benzethonium chloride is a cationic surface active agent used as a germicide.

Malononitrile is usually considered a specialty chemical and used in laboratory or pilot plant organic syntheses.

Metaldehyde is a crystalline solid chiefly used in the western United States to protect vineyards from destruction by snails and slugs.

The column 1 duty rates on these chemicals range from 0.6 percent ad valorem (malononitrile) to 11 percent ad valorem (benzethonium chloride). LDDC rates range from free to 10.7 percent ad valorem. Melononitrile, metaldehyde, and paraldehyde USP are eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP, the CBERA, and the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985. Imports of benzethonium chloride from Israel are currently subject to annual staged reductions in duty until January 1989, when they will be eligible for duty-free treatment. The current rate for these imports from Israel is 10.7 percent ad valorem.

There was no domestic production of any of the subject chemicals during 1981-85.

Imports of malononitrile during 1981-85 fell from $1.9 million in 1981 to $157,000 in 1982, and reached $848,000 in 1985. As industry source has estimated the value of 1985 imports of the other chemicals as shown in the following tabulation.

Chemical:	Value
Aminomethylphenylpyrazole	$100-200,000
Benzethonium chloride	500-600,000
2,2-bis-(4-Cyanatophenyl)	50-100,000
Metaldehyde	1,000,000
Paraldehyde USP	20-30,000

U.S. export data for these chemicals are not available. Apparent domestic consumption during 1981-85 paralleled imports.

Expected annual revenue losses for 1986 are as follows:

Estimated loss

[In thousands of dollars]

Chemical:
Aminomethylphenylpyrazole	6.7-13
Benzethonium chloride	55-66
2,2-bis-(4-Cyanatophenyl)	7-14
Malononitrile	5
Metaldehyde	60
Paraldehyde USP	0.75-1

SECTION 161. NITRO SULFON B

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4664 by Mr. Jenkins)

This section would suspend through December 31, 1990, the column 1 rate of duty for 3-nitrophenyl-4-beta-hydroxysulfone (also called nitro sulfon B).

Nitro sulfon B is a benzenoid intermediate chemical used in the production of certain dyes known as fiber-reactive dyes. These dyes are used in the domestic textile industry to dye principally cotton fabrics.

The suspension of duty will act to lower the overall cost of producing textiles in the United States since the chemical is used as a precursor in the production of dyes for textiles.

Nitro sulfon B is classified under TSUS item 406.00 (Organo-sulfur compounds) with a column 1 rate of duty of 7.5 percent ad valorem and an LDDC rate of 6.7 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 40.5 percent ad valorem. The product is not eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP; however, it is eligible for duty-free treatment under CBERA and under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

During 1981-85, there was no domestic production of nitro sulfon B.

Industry sources estimate that in 1985 imports of nitro sulfon B were 84,454 pounds, valued at $384,266.

During 1981-85, domestic consumption was essentially the same as imports.

Based on estimates from industry sources, expected revenue losses during 1987-90 will be $88,000 to $96,000 per year.

SECTION 163. 1-(4-(1,1-DIMETHYLETHYL) PHENYL)-4-(HYDROXYDIPHENYLMETHYL-1-PIPERIDINYL)-1-BUTANONE

(Originially introduced as H.R. 4404 by Mr. Gradison)

This section would suspend through December 31, 1990 the column 1 rate of duty on imports 1-(4-(1,1-dimethylethyl)phenyl)-4-(hydroxydiphenylmethyl-1-piperidinyl)-1-butanone (also known as terfenadone) classified in TSUS item 406.42. The column 2 rate of duty would remain unchanged.

Terfenadone is a patented intermediate chemical used in the manufacture of terfenadine, a nonsedating antihistamine. The latter chemical is a patented prescription drug sold under the trademark Seldane by Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

The temporary suspension of duty would reduce the cost of importing terfenadone, thereby allowing increased utilization of existing domestic manufacturing facilities producing terfenadine and Seldane and providing new jobs at Merrell Dow's facilities in Cincinnati, Ohio. Merrell Dow intends to export approximately one-third of the terfenadine manufactured from the imported terfenadone over the next 3 years.

Terfenadone is classified in TSUS item 406.42 (other heterocyclic compounds and their derivatives) with a column 1 rate and an LDDC rate of 13.5 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 52 percent ad valorem. Imports of terfenadone are not eligibile for duty-free treatment under the GSP; however, they are eligible for duty-free treatment under CBERA and under the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

There was no U.S. production of terfenadone in the past five years. Terfenadone is currently under U.S. patent to Dow Chemical Company, the only U.S. importer of this product.

Separate import data are not available for terfenadone, but industry sources estimate that 1985 imports amounted to approximately 24,000 pounds, valued at about $3 million.

According to industry sources, there are no U.S. exports of terfenadone and that domestic consumption during 1981-85 was essentially the same as imports.

Based on industry trade estimates, expected revenue losses would amount to $729,000 in 1987, and $1.46 million in subsequent years.

SECTION 164. FLUAZIFOP-P-BUTYL

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5057 by Mr. Carper)

This section suspends, through December 31, 1990, the column 1 rate of duty on a chemical commonly known as fluazifop-p-butyl.

Also called butyl 2-[4-(5-trifluoromethyl-2-pyridinyloxy) propanoate, this chemical is produced synthetically by a series of proprietary chemical reactions using benzenoid chemicals as starting materials. It is used in various herbicide formulations to control grassy weeds.

According to industry sources, fluazifop-p-butyl is currently produced solely in England; the concentrate is imported into the United States and formulated for commercial sale. Suspending import duties on this herbicide could lower the cost of the finished product to consumers. Further, because this herbicide is used primarily in cotton and soybean farming, a suspension of duties could reduce the U.S. farmers' costs and make them more competitive in the world market for soybeans.

Fluazifop-p-butyl is currently classified in TSUS item 408.23, with column 1 rate of duty of 13.5 percent ad valorem and a column 2 duty rate of 7 cents per pound plus 48.5 percent ad valorem. No LDDC rate is provided. Imports of this herbicide are eligible for duty-free entry under the GSP, CBERA, and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement.

Fluazifop-p-butyl is not produced in or exported from the United States.

Annual imports of this herbicide are estimated to be about 2.0 million pounds, valued at about $28.0 million.

Apparent U.S. consumption is essentially determined by the level of imports.

The estimated revenue losses would amount to about $1 million per year.

SECTION 167. SETHOXYDIM

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4219 by Mr. Vander Jagt)

This section would suspend the duty on mixtures of sethoxydim through December 31, 1990.

Sethoxydim, more specifically referred to as 2-[1-(ethoxyimino)butyl]-5-[2-(ethylthio) propyl]-3-hydroxy-2-cyclohexen-1-one, is an unstable oily liquid produced by a series of proprietary chemical reactions using nonbenzenoid starting materials. In commercial terms, sethoxydim is a formulated chemical product typically distributed in various forms, such as dust or concentrate, for application in no-till agricultural control of grassy weeds among alfalfa, cotton, peanuts, and some other types of vegetable crops.

Imports of unmixed sethoxydim would enter under TSUS item 425.52. However, sethoxydim is unstable and generally imported as a 50 percent solution in xylene or in other benzenoid solvents. The xylene solution is classified in TSUS item 430.20, with a column 1 duty rate of 3.9 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component compound (in this case, the highest component rate is that for sethoxydim, or 7.9 percent ad valorem). Other benzenoid solutions would enter under TSUS item 407.19, with a column 1 rate of 1.7 cents per pound plus 13.6 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material. Both types of solution are eligible for duty-free treatment under the CBERA and for preferential treatment under the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement. Only the later is eligible for GSP treatment.

Sethoxydim is not produced in the United States. Its method of manufacture is considered highly proprietary, and it is not likely to be licensed for production elsewhere.

Separate import data for sethoxydim are not available. Annual imports of sethoxydim are estimated to have remained at a level of about 2.0 million pounds, valued at about $28.0 million, since 1983, the first year in which this chemical was entered. The only known source of imports of this chemical in 1985 was West Germany.

The estimated annual loss of customs revenues would amount to approximately $2.2 million during the proposed suspension.

SECTION 169. POLYACRYLATE POLYMER MIXTURES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5421 by Messrs. Jones of Oklahoma and Frenzel

This section provides suspension of the column 1 rate of duty for certain mixtures of cross-linked sodium polyacrylate polymers through December 31, 1990.

Sodium polyacrylate polymers are colorless, oderless powders which are used principally to absorb large amounts of liquids or as additives to water-based mixtures to form flocculants. Additional properties associated with polyacrylate polymers are increased viscosities of water-based mixtures with limited lubricity. There are many special varieties and proprietary formulations used in many different industries, including boiler treatment compounds, water purification, and in drilling muds. There are few real differences between polyacrylate polymers used in the various industries, although some manufacturers claim proprietary features which make their products unique.

Sodium polyacrylate polymer mixtures are provided for in TSUS item 430.20, with a column 1 rate of 3.9 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component compound. The LDDC rate is 3.7 percent ad valorem but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component compound. The column 2 rate is 25 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component compound. Imports are eligible to duty-free treatment under the GSP and the CBERA.

Separate production data are not available for cross-linked sodium polyacrylate polymers. However, industry representatives estimate that total domestic production about 50 million pounds per year.

Significant imports of this product did not begin until 1984, when levels reached about 50 million pounds, valued at about $77 million. Imports are thought to have remained at this level in 1986, accounting for about one-half of total U.S. consumption.

Industry sources indicate that U.S. exports are negligible.

The estimated annual revenue loss would amount to approximately $3 million per year.

SECTION 170. CYCLOSPORINE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5034 by Mr. Frenzel)

This section would suspend through December 31, 1990, the column 1 rate of duty for cyclosporine, an immunosuppressive agent used for the prevention of rejection of kidney, liver, or heart transplants. Clinical trials are underway for other applications of the drug, including a potential treatment for AIDS.

The bill was introduced at the request of the University of Minnesota Medical School. Although the column 1 rate of duty is relatively low, the duty, combined with a customs broker's fee, can be large for a research facility with scare resources.

Cyclosporine can be classified in either TSUS item 439.30 (advanced natural drugs, not elsewhere specified) or item 439.50 (other drugs, n.e.s., including synthetic drugs), depending on the form in which it is imported. If imported as the bulk powder, the form used by the University of Minnesota, the drug is classified in item 439.30 with a column 1 rate of duty of 1.5 percent ad valorem. The Column 2 rate of duty for this tariff item is 10 percent ad valorem. Products entering under this tariff item are eligible for duty-free treatment if they are imported from LDDC's or under GSP, CBERA, or the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement.

If the cyclosporine is imported as an oral solution or a concentrate for intravenous injection, it is classified in TSUS item 439.50 with a column 1 rate of duty 3.7 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 25 percent ad valorem. This TSUS item has the same Special rates of duty as does TSUS item 439.30 for products from LDDC's, beneficiaries of GSP and CBERA, and Israel.

There was no domestic production or export of cyclosporine during 1981–85.

Industry sources estimate that the U.S. market for this product was valued at $55 million in 1985; the market is supplied entirely by imports.

Based on estimates from industry sources, expected annual revenue losses during 1987–90 will range from $0.8 million to $1.1 million per year.

SECTION 172. GLASS INNERS FOR VACUUM FLASKS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3925 by Mr. Gejdenson)

This section would lower the column 1 duty on glass inners from 12.4 percent ad valorem to 9 percent ad valorem. The reduction would remain in effect through December 31, 1990.

The bill is intended to reduce the rate for glass inners to bring them into conformity with the rates for completed vacuum bottles, thus providing tariff equity for U.S. manufacturers of vacuum bottles.

Domestically manufactured glass inners, which are inserted in vacuum bottles to keep food and beverages at selected temperatures for up to 8 hours, are composed of two blanks, one of which fits inside the other. The blanks are silvered, yielding a mirror-like surface that maintains the temperature of the food or beverage inside by reflecting heat. As the inner blank is inserted in the outer blank, an asbestos pad is placed between the two walls and all air between the two walls is evacuated, creating a vacuum, The two blanks are then neck-sealed (sealed at the top), creating a double-walled cylinder which is placed in a vacuum bottle. Glass inners can also be manufactured in a 1-step process, such as that used by Thermos at their British plant, and my more labor-intensive hand-blown methods, more commonly in countries with low labor costs.

Glass inners generally vary in capacity from less than one pint to more than 4 pints; they also differ in design, depending upon the specifications of the vacuum bottle manufacturer. Most inners are installed in new vacuum bottles with a limited number used as replacements.

Glass inners enter the United States under TSUS items 545.31,, 545.34, 545.35, and 545.37. The column 1 duties for these categories are 2.3 cents each plus 11.6 percent ad valorem, 3.3 cents each plus 9.5 percent ad valorem, 4.8 cents each plus 9.5 percent ad valorem, and 7 cents each plus 9.5 percent ad valorem, respectively. The ad valorem equivalent of these compound rates are 15.1 percent, 14.3 percent, 14.3 percent, and 10.2 percent, respectively. Imports under these TSUS items are eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP and CBERA. They all receive preferential duty treatment under the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement.

There is no U.S. production or export of glass inners.

Total U.S. imports of glass inners during 1985 were 2,894,000 units valued at $2,240,000

The revenue loss due to enactment of this provision would be approximately $80,000.

SECTION 173. CERTAIN OFFSET PRINTING PRESSES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3797 by Mr. Frenzel)

This section would amend TSUS item 668.21 to reduce the column 2 rate of duty on offset printing presses of the sheet-fed type weighing 3,500 pounds or more, from 25% to 10% ad valorem: The reduction would remain in effect through December 31, 1990.

An offset press operates on the principle that one impression is made with each revolution of its cylinders. A sheet-fed offset press has three printing cylinders of the same size (plate, blanket, and impression) as well as inking and dampening systems. The plate is clamped to the plate cylinder. As that cylinder rotates, the plate comes in contact with the dampening rollers first, then the inking rollers. The dampeners wet the plate so the nonprinting area will repeal ink. The inked image is then transferred to the rubber blanket on the blanket cylinder. Paper is printed as it passes between the blanket cylinder and impression cylinders.

During 1981–85, there were only three known U.S. producers of these presses. Each of these firms sells to different segments of the market. Currently, import competition is reported from the GDR and from Czechoslovakia, both subject to column 2 rates of duty.

The value of U.S. imports of these presses rose annually from $145 million in 1981 to $266 million in 1985. In 1985, by far the largest supplier, by value, were West Germany (63 percent of total import value) and Japan (28 percent of total import value).

The value of U.S. exports of these presses declined sharply from $6.0 million in 1981 to $0.6 million in 1984, then rose to $1.6 million in 1985.

During 1981–85, apparent U.S. consumption of these sheet-fed offset presses rose slightly, on a value basis, from an estimated $192.6 million in 1981 to $196.5 million in 1983. Apparent consumption then increased sharply to $261.1 million in 1984 and $319.1 million in 1985.

Estimated revenue loss would amount to $200,000 per year.

SECTION 174. JACQUARD CARDS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5198 by Mr. Roe)

This section would suspend the column 1 rate of duty on jacquard cards through December 31, 1990.

Jacquard cards consist of a series of punched cardboard strips which are used to control the weaving pattern of jacquard looms. Each card controls the action of one warp thread for the passage of one pick. The holes in the cardboard strips control the weaving mechanism. The number of cards attached to a jacquard loom depends on the intricacy of the weave design. The cards are joined together by lacing to form a chain pattern. Jacquard looms are used to produce tapestries, brocade, brocatelle, figured neckties and dresses. Today, these cards have been replaced by heavily reinforced, treated paper rolls which, after machine punching, resemble player piano rolls. The paper rolls are still referred to by the industry as jacquard cards.

The purpose of this provision is to reduce the cost of imported jacquard cards through the elimination of tariffs. Industry sources indicate that they have been unable to locate domestic manufacturers of jacquard cards.

Jacquard cards are provided for in TSUS item 670.56 with a column 1 duty rate of 14 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 35 percent ad valorem. The LDDC is 7 percent ad valorem. Imports from designated beneficiary countries are eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP, the CBERA, and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade agreement.

There are no domestic manufacturers of jacquard cards presently in operation. Jacquard cards are used on jacquard looms which have been replaced by the more efficient and faster shuttleless rapier, air jet, and water jet looms.

Imports of jacquard cards increased from $179,000 in 1981 to $268,000 in 1984, before declining to $226,000 in 1985. Estimated imports in 1986 amount to $290,000. The majority of imports, according to industry officials, are unfinished rolls, many of which are finished and re-exported.

U.S. consumption of jacquard cards during 1981–85 was satisfied entirely by imports.

The average annual revenue loss during 1986–90 would be approximately $15,000.

SECTION 175. CERTAIN PARTS OF INDIRECT PROCESS ELECTROSTATIC COPYING MACHINES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4532 by Messrs. Duncan and Crane)

This section would suspend through December 31, 1990, the column 1 rate of duty on certain parts of and lenses for direct process electrostatic copying machines, provided for in TSUS items 676.56 and 708.23.

The duty suspension would affect parts of and mounted lenses for indirect process electrostatic copying machines, commonly referred to as plain paper copiers (PPC's). These copiers reproduce documents by placing an image on an intermediate (typically an electrostatically charged photoconductor drum) and then transferring that image onto paper. The particular parts involved are quite varied and admit of no general description, other than their use in indirect process electrostatic copying machines. The parts are made of metal, plastic, and/or glass and include both assemblies and individual components. The mounted lenses used in PPC's are photographic quality lenses which transfer the image of an original document to the copying machine photoconductor drum.

According to industry sources this duty suspension is intended to help maintain the competitiveness of Xerox Corporation's manufacturing facilities (which employ 6,700 people), encourage Xerox and other domestic manufacturers to expand domestic production, stem the tide of American manufacturers transferring assembly operations overseas, encourage foreign investment in U.S. manufacturing facilities, and allow time for Xerox's major domestic suppliers to improve their quality and price competitiveness.

Parts of indirect process electrostatic copying machines are classified in TSUS item 676.56 and mounted lenses in TSUS item 708.23. The column 1 rates of duty for these items are 4.1 percent ad valorem and 7.3 percent ad valorem, respectively. The column 2 rates of duty are 35 percent ad valorem and 45 percent ad valorem, respectively. The LDDC rates are 3.9 percent and 6.6 percent, respectively.

Copier parts from Hong Kong, Mexico, the Republic of Korea, Singapore, and Taiwan are ineligible for GSP benefits because of the "competitive need" limitations. Otherwise these products are eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP, CBERA, and the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985.

No identifiable industry, per se, produces parts for indirect process electrostatic copying machines. Domestic copier manufacturers contract with a large number and variety of individual firms for the supply of specific components. There are only three known companies in the United States currently producing mounted lenses for use in indirect process electostatic copying machines. Industry sources estimate that the value of U.S. producers' shipments of mounted lenses for use in indirect process electrostatic copying machines have fallen from about $5 million in 1981 to $1.5 million in 1985. No estimates are available for the remaining products.

Separate consumption figures for copier parts, other than mounted optical lenses, are not available. Imports in 1985 are estimated to have ranged from $140 million to $175 million.

Apparent consumption of mounted optical lenses for copiers in 1985 estimated at $8 million, based on estimated production of $1.5 million, imports of $7.2 million, and exports of $700,000.

Estimated revenue losses are estimated to be $7 million per year; about $525,000 of that figure is attributable to mounted lenses, and the remainder, to other parts.

SECTION 176. EXTRACORPOREAL SHOCK WAVE LITHOTRIPTERS IMPORTED BY NONPROFIT INSTITUTIONS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4533 by Messrs. Gephardt and Campbell)

This section provides duty-free treatment for extracorporeal shock wave lithotripters imported by nonprofit institutions between July 31, 1985 and December 31, 1986. This provision was offered as an amendment to Section 122 and further details about lithotripters may be found in the description of that section.

SECTION 177. EXTENSION OF CERTAIN EXISTING SUSPENSIONS

SECTION 177(1). MIXTURES OF HOT RED PEPPERS AND SALT

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3867 by Ms. Boggs)

This section extends the duty suspension for certain mixtures of hot red peppers and salt from June 30, 1985 through December 31, 1990. The duty on such imports was previously suspended from October 24, 1978, through June 30, 1981 and reinstated from July 1, 1981, through June 30, 1985. The only known U.S. importer of pepper mash imports this product from Central and South America.

Mixtures of mashed or macerated hot red peppers and salt, currently provided for in TSUS items 141.77 and 141.98, are often referred to as "pepper mash" and are used in the production of hot red pepper sauce. Pepper mash is made by crushing any of several varieties of hot, red peppers and preserving the resulting pulp in salt, usually an 8 percent salt solution, in wooden kegs. The varieties of peppers commonly used in this process include cayenne, tobasco, serrano, and chili. The end product, hot red pepper sauce of "Louisiana hot sauce," is made by adding vinegar to this preserved mixture of macerated peppers and salt.

The mixtures of hot red peppers and salt which are the subject of this legislation are provided for in items 141.77 and 141.98 with column 1 rates of duty of 12 percent and 17.5 percent ad valorem, respectively, and a column 2 rate of duty of 35 percent ad valorem. The column 1 rates were not changed as a result of the Tokyo Round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations.

The domestic hot sauce industry is comprised of approximately six firms, mostly in Louisiana, which produce hot red pepper sauces from pepper mash, and at least another 30 hot sauce makers scattered around the United States that use ingredients other than hot red peppers. The ingredients used by these other firms usually consist of jalapeno peppers (a hot, green pepper) or an oleo-resin (a synthetic) and tomato sauce mix, and are generally used to make taco or enchilada sauces for Mexican-style foods.

Both taco and enchilada sauces are somewhat competitive with the hot red pepper sauces, especially those lower-priced red pepper sauces made from non-tabasco peppers. Pure tabasco sauce is a higher priced sauce and, according to those firms processing it, a higher quality sauce. The McIlhenny Company produces only tabasco sauce and probably accounts for the bulk of the U.S. production of this article, but it is not known what share of U.S. production of hot sauces is accounted for by that company.

The growers of hot red peppers are concentrated in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas. Approximately 4,000 acres are devoted to the production of such peppers in these States. Most of these growers do grow some specialty crops as well as hot peppers.

Data on U.S. production of pepper mash or hot sauces are not available, but it is believed that such production is trending upward. The production of hot sauces is not seasonal but the production of pepper mash, the major ingredient of hot red pepper sauce, follows the seasonal pattern of the hot red pepper harvest during the summer and fall months.

The only known imports of pepper mash in recent years have been of the tabasco pepper variety for the account of the McIlhenny Company. Colombia and Honduras together account for almost two-thirds of McIlhenny's imports; the supplies from Mexico constitute less than one-fifth. U.S. imports from Colombia and Honduras are entitled to duty-free treatment under the GSP.

According to domestic industry sources, there have been no exports of pepper mash in recent years; however, a significant amount of the U.S. output of hot sauces is shipped abroad. Precise figures are not available, but an estimated 30–40 percent of U.S. production is sold in foreign markets. Japan and Europe are the principal markets for the higher-priced hot sauces and the Middle East is a leading outlet for the lower-priced products.

Consumption of hot sauce in the United States is believed to be in a long-term uptrend because of (1) the evolution of American taste toward spicier foods in general, and (2) the increased consumption of Mexican-style food specifically.

The column 1 rate of duty on imports of mashed or macerated hot red peppers has been suspended for most of the period since late 1978; thus, there would be no substantial change (loss) in revenue. The estimated loss in revenue would have been $12,000 in 1985.

SECTION 177(2). CANTALOUPES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 207 by Mr. de le Garza)

The proposed legislation would extend the suspension of duty on fresh cantaloupes entered during January 1 through May 15 from May 15, 1985 through December 31, 1990.

Cantaloupes, the most important melon types marketed in the United States, are generally used fresh as an appetizer, snack, or dessert, or may be cut into pieces for use in fresh fruit salads. Fresh cantaloupes are nonstorable and generally maintain their quality for only several weeks after harvest. This characteristic makes the marketing of cantaloupes seasonal.

This legislation would impose no duties on imported cantaloupe during the period when domestic production is nil.

Cantaloupes are imported with a column 1 rate of duty of 20 percent between August 1 and September 15 and 35 percent the rest of the year. The column 1 rate is 35 percent year round. Cantaloupes entered between August 1 and September 15 are eligible for GSP although Mexican cantaloupe imports exceed the "competitive need" limits. All cantaloupe is eligible for CBERA duty free treatment.

Domestic production increased from 1.2 billion pounds in 1980 to 1.5 billion pounds in 1984. Production during January 1, to May 15 is believed to account for about 5 percent of annual U.S. production.

The cantaloupe harvest is highly seasonal. While the shipping season normally begins in late April or early May for cantaloupes produced in Arizona, California, and Texas, the bulk of domestic shipments are made from June through August.

Cantaloupes are produced commercially in at least 25 states, with more than 90 percent of the crop harvested in California, Texas, and Arizona. Cantaloupes require a long growing season and are susceptable to a number of diseases that limit the areas where they can be grown.

During 1980–84, total U.S. imports of cantaloupes rose irregularly from 170 million pounds in 1980 to 247 million pounds, in 1984. Data are not separately reported for the period January 1–May 15. However, imports during January 1-May 30 increased from 162.3 million pounds in 1980 to 228.7 million pounds in 1984. On a quantity basis, 88 percent of the cantaloupes imported into the United States during 1980-84 entered during the period January-May. Mexico is by far the leading source of imported cantaloupes, supplying 89 percent of the total annual imports in 1984. Mexico was ineligible for GSP benefits due to its predominant share of total imports.

In recent years, over 100 firms imported fresh cantaloupes, with 25 of them accounting for the bulk of such imports in 1984. The large volume firms are located in the southwestern United States.

During 1980-84, U.S. exports of cantaloupes averaged 52.1 million pounds annually; exports amounted to 46.9 million pounds in 1984. Canada is the principal market for U.S. export of cantaloupes, accounting for 98 percent of total U.S. cantaloupe exports in 1980-84. Exports during the first 5 months of 1980-84 were equivalent to about 10 percent of total exports in each of those years.

During 1980-84, apparent U.S. consumption of fresh cantaloupes rose steadily and averaged about 1.5 billion pounds annually. The ratio of imports to consumption averaged 12 percent throughout the period. About 70 percent of consumption during January-May, roughly the period covered by the proposed legislation, was supplied by imports.

Assuming 1984 import levels, revenue loss would be about $9 million.

SECTION 177(3). CERTAIN WOOLS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1696 by Mr. Frenzel)

This section extends suspension of coarse wools (defined as finer than 44s but no finer than 46s) from June 6, 1985 through December 31, 1990. Column 2 rates of duty would be those prescribed by items 306.30 through 306.34.

The system most commonly used in the United States to grade wool is referred to as the count system, which classifies wool numerically according to fineness. Under the count system, mid to upper 60s, 70s, and 80s are fine; low 50s to low 60s are medium; and 30s to high 40s are coarse.

Wool fibers finer than 44s but not finer than 46s are coarse and virtually all domestic consumption of such wool is imported. It is largely used to produce blankets and to a lesser extent fabrics for coats, carpets, and home furnishings.

Wools finer than 44s but not finer than 46s have been eligible for duty-free treatment under temporary tariff provisions since November 8, 1977.

U.S. imports of wools finer than 44s but not finer than 46s had been granted a temporary duty suspension (along with other types of wools) from November 8, 1977 to June 30, 1985. Effective July 1, 1985 the rates of duty as negotiated in the Tokyo round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations became effective.

Imports of wools covered by this legislation are not subject to control under the Multifiber Arrangement (MFA), nor are they eligible for duty free treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP). Additionally, U.S. imports of such wool from least developed developing countries (LDDCs) are not eligible for preferential duty rates, but they are subject to duty free treatment under the CBERA.

There is no domestic production of this wool.

Imports of the subject wools increased from 6,227,000 pounds in 1980 to 16,747,000 pounds in 1984. More than 80 percent of the total quantity and value of the subject wools was shipped from New Zealand.

Apparent U.S. consumption is equal to level of imports.

If duties on the coarse wools covered by the legislation had been in effect in 1984, revenues would have amounted to $1.7 million.

SECTION 177(4). NEEDLECRAFT DISPLAY MODELS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2972 by Mr. Gibbons)

The proposed legislation would extend temporary duty-free treatment through December 31, 1990 to imports from countries entitled to most-favored-nation (MFN) status of needlecraft display models, primarily hand stitched, or completed mass-produced kits. The proposed legislation would be retroactive to June 30, 1985.

Needlecraft display models are finished replicas of the articles that can be made from needlecraft kits, which a consumer may purchase at retail. The domestic manufacturers of needlecraft kits export the kits principally to Haiti, for completion and then import the stitched or worked articles for sale to retailers. The models are as displays in retail stores to stimulate consumer interest and to promote sales of unfinished kits. In addition, the models allow the consumer to assess the difficulty of the stitching in light of his or her ability.

The models (and kits) represent a variety of articles, including pictures, decorative pillow covers, latch hook rugs, Christmas ornaments and stockings, wall hangings, tablecloths, napkins, and purses. The majority of the models are believed to consist of pillow covers, wall hangings, and Christmas ornaments of needlepoint, crewel embroidery, or counter cross-stitch.

According to industry sources, cost considerations largely preclude the manufacture of models from kits in the United States.

U.S. imports of the subject needlecraft display models from column 1 countries were free of duty from January 27, 1983 to June 30, 1985, when temporary TSUS items 906.10 and 906.12 expired. The MFN rates of duty otherwise applicable to such articles vary from approximately 7 percent ad volorem to 25 percent ad valorem.

There are no MFA quotas on these kits. Only 3 of the 23 articles covered by this legislation are eligible for GSP or CBERA.

U.S. production and exports of needlecraft kit models from commercial sale are believed to be negligible. However, some small retailers specializing in needlecrafts have models stitched by their employees during work hours or by persons working in their homes. Compensation for the home workers may be in the form of either monetary payment or the return of the articles after their use for display purposes.

There is no commercial production of the completed display models in the United States because such production is labor intensive and, therefore, costly. Industry sources estimate that about 80 percent of the models are stitched in Haiti, primarily because of its available labor force, low wage rate (about $0.70 per hour), and proximity to the United States.

The National Needlework Association (TNNA) estimates that about one-half of its 425 member firms in the United States manufacture needlecraft kits. These producers vary from small firms specializing in only one type of needlework, such as crewel, cross-stitch, or needlepoint kits, to larger firms which produce a variety of needlecraft articles. Five producers together account for roughly three-fourths of U.S. production of needlecraft kits.

Several kit producers report that they sell their completed models to retailers at a loss of almost 20 percent, in anticipation that the models will increase kits sales. Some producers require retailers to purchase a minimum number of kits of a given design before the model can be purchased. However, the small producers are often unable to offer models to retailers because of the expense of having the models stitched and carrying them in inventory.

U.S. imports of needlecraft display models are not separately reported since imports of articles covered by TSUS items 906.10 and 906.12 are statistically reported under the 23 Schedule 3 provisions enumerated therein. However, TNNA estimates that the value of imports of these models amounts to $5 million to $10 million annually. About 5 firms account for 75 to 85 percent of the imports.

All but a small number of the imported models are made from U.S.-produced materials (e.g., yarn, fabric, matting, and thread). The models are stitched abroad and are then imported into the United States where framing or other finishing is completed.

Since data on the specific types of needlecraft kit models being imported are unavailable, it is impossible to provide a precise estimate of the potential revenue impact of this legislation; many different MFN rates of duty would apply to such articles, since 23 TUS items are involved. However, on the basis of an estimated value of imports of these models of between $5 million and $10 million annually, the legislation would be likely to result in a loss of customs revenues of approximately $830,000 to $1.7 million in 1985. This range would likely decline to from $790,000 to $1.6 million in 1988, as a result of scheduled staged reductions of the applicable duty rates.

SECTION 177 (5). TRIPHENYL PHOSPHATE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2300 by Gephardt)

This section would extend the temporary column 1 suspension of duty for TSUS item 409.34. The extension would be effective from September 30, 1985 through December 31, 1990.

Triphenyl phosphate (TPP) is a colorless, odorless crystaline powder used principally as a fire-retarding agent and as a plasticizer for cellulose acetate and nitrocellulose used in the manufacture of photographic and other films. TPP functions to reduce the flammability of these films, as well as increasing the flexibility, making them safer and easier to handle. More than 75 percent of all TPP produced is used in these applications.

The market for the major end-uses for TPP, nitrocellulose films and cellulose acetate, has been declining for several years. Domestic manufacturers of TPP have virtually abandoned production of the product. Since imports of TPP supply most, if not all, domestic open-market demand, U.S. importers contend it would make sense to remove any impediment to access to the only remaining source of supply.

TPP has a column 1 rate of duty is 0.5 cents per pound plus 17.7 percent ad valorem. The rate for LDDC's is 0.1 cents per pound plus 17.7 percent ad valorem. The column 2 duty rate is 7 cents per pound plus 57 percent ad valorem. Imports may be eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP and CBERA.

Separate production data are not available for TPP. However, industry representatives estimate that total domestic production during 1980–84 was substantially less than 10 million pounds annually.

Monsanto Company, St. Louis, Mo., and Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N.Y., were the only producers of TPP in 1981. Monsanto permanently ceased production of TPP in 1981. Borg-Warner Corp., Morgantown, W. Va., and FMC, Nitro W. Va., also have the ability to produce TPP, but neither have reported production of this product during 1980–84 and both indicate that they have no immediate interest in this market. It is estimated by industry observers that most of Eastman Kodak's production is consumed captively in its photographic film manufacturing operations. U.S. open-market demand for TPP is likely to be satisfied principally by imports in the future.

Separate import statistics on TPP were not available prior to 1984 when TPP was broken out as a statistical classification in item 409.3425. Imports of TPP in 1984 amounted to about 1.1 million pounds, valued at $764,000. The United Kingdom supplied 82 percent of total U.S. imports of TPP in 1984, while the Netherlands and South Korea each supplied about 8 percent.

In 1984, the only year for which import data are available, the calculated revenue lost as a result of the current duty suspension legislation amounted to $198,354. Since the U.S. market for TPP is a declining market, substantial increases in imports are unlikely and total revenue losses as a result of this legislation are not expected to exceed $110,000 per year in the near future.

SECTION 177(6). MENTHOL FEEDSTOCKS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5063 by Mr. Hartnett)

This section extends the current suspension of the column 1 rate of duty for certain menthol feedstocks through December 31, 1989.

The menthol feedstocks covered by this provision are mixtures of synthetic organic chemicals produced from m-cresol. These feedstocks, which are used to produce two methol isomers, 1-menthol and 11-menthol, are crude mixtures of all eight optical isomers of menthol. These mixtures have no other commercial use in the United States.

The stated purpose of this continued duty suspension is to help preserve the American menthol industry by allowing it to remain competitive with foreign manufacturers that receive protection through government subsidies.

Mixtures of optical isomers of menthol are classified under item 407.19 with a column 1 rate of duty of 1.7 cents per pound plus 13.6 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any individual component of the mixture. No LDDC rate is provided. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 43.5 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material. Imports of the subject mixture are duty-free under the GSP and CBERA. Under the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Agreement, imports of this product from Israel are dutiable at the column 1 rate of duty, but will be staged over a 5-year period to free.

There are no U.S. producers and no exports of these chemical mixtures.

Industry sources estimate that imports of this product declined from $3.0 million in 1981 to $2.4 million in 1985.

Domestic consumption during 1981–85 was essentially the same as imports.

Expected revenue losses would be about $350,000 per year.

SECTION 177(7). ISOMERIC MIXTURES OF ETHYLBIPHENYL

This section extends the temporary suspension of the column 1 rate of duty for isomeric mixtures of ethylbiphenyl from June 30, 1985 through December 31, 1986.

These mixtures consist of the positional chemical isomers, 3-ethylbiphenyl and 4-ethylbiphenyl, which are produced synthetically from petroleum. These chemicals are used primarily as heat transfer agents in the production of various plastics resins (e.g., polystyrene).

According to an industry source, the suspension of duties on these chemical mixtures is needed to enable the Dow Chemical Company to remain competitive worldwide in the heat transfer fluid market. The ethylbiphenyl mixture is the primary ingredient in Dow's new heat transfer fluid DOWTHERM LF, a product with unique thermal characteristics.

Isomeric mixtures of ethylbiphenyl are classified under TSUS item 409.19 with a column 1 rate of duty of 1.7 cents per pound plus 13.6 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any individual component of the mixture. The column 2 rate of duty is 7 cents per pound plus 43.5 percent ad valorem, but not less than the highest rate applicable to any component material. Imports of the subject mixtures are eligible duty-free treatment under the GSP and CBERA. Under the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act of 1985, imports are dutiable at the column 1 rate but are scheduled to be staged over a 5-year period to free.

There is no U.S. production of ethylbiphenyl.

Dow Chemical estimates that imports of the isomeric mixtures of ethylbiphenyl declined from a high of 458,000 pounds, valued at $453,000, in 1981 to 290,000 pounds, valued at $287,000, in 1985. Imports for this mixture during 1986 are estimated to be 400,000 pounds, valued at about $400,000.

According to industry sources, there are no exports of the subject mixtures.

Domestic consumption during 1981–85 was essentially the same as imports.

Estimated revenue loss for 1985 is $265,000 and that for 1986 is $735,000.

SECTION 177(8). SULFAPYRIDINE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2228 by Mr. Evans of Iowa)

This section would extend the existing suspension of the column 1 duty rate for sulfapyridine (TSUS 411.27) through December 31, 1990 and would be effective for entries made after December 31, 1985.

Sulfapyridine, is classified in a group of chemicals known as anti-infective sulfonamides.

At one time sulfonamides were widely used in the treatment of infections. However, the development of resistance in formerly susceptible organisms has greatly limited the clinical usefulness of these drugs. In addition, substantial quantities have been used as growth promoters in animal feeds. Use of sulfapyridine in animal feeds, as approved by the FDA, accounts for about 15 to 30 percent of annual consumption. The remainder of annual consumption is used in the production of other sulfa drugs, particularly sulfasalazine and sulfadiazine.

Sulfapyridine is classified in TSUS item 411.27. The current column 1 duty rate is 16 percent ad valorem, the LDDC rate—11.6 percent ad valorem, and the column 2 rate is 7 cents per pound plus 128.5 percent ad valorem.

Imports are not eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP but are eligible for CBERA.

Sulfapyridine is not presently produced in the United States. American Cyanamid Co. and Napp Chemicals Inc. produced sulfapyridine until 1980–81. Industry sources maintain that sulfapyridine cannot be substituted in the production of certain sulfa drugs, particularly sulfasalazine.

During 1980–1982 imports of sulfapyridine ranged from about 106,000 pounds to about 70,000 pounds. According to industry sources, in 1983, the first year of the suspension of duty on sulfapyridine, imports amounted to about 120,000 pounds. Imports increased to about 145,000 pounds in 1984. The current market price for sulfapyridine is approximately $11.40 to $12.30 per pound.

Export data are unavailable because sulfapyridine is classified in a residual (basket) Schedule B number.

According to industry sources, annual U.S. consumption of sulfapyridine amounts to about 120,000 to 160,000 pounds.

Revenue losses in 1986 are expected to be $247,000 and are expected to total $687,000 for the period 1986–1988.

SECTION 177(9). SYNETHETIC RUTILE

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3468 by Mr. Jenkins)

This section would suspend until December 31, 1990, the column 1 duties on synthetic rutile, provided for in item 603.70 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS), by amending item 911.25 in part 1B of the Appendix to the TSUS to show the new expiration date for the effective period. The column 2 rate of 30 percent remains unchanged. Duties on synthetic rutile were suspended almost continuously between October 26, 1974 and June 30, 1982, when the last suspension expired. The amendment would be effective with respect to articles entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption 15 days after enactment.

Synthetic rutile is derived from ilmenite by chemically extracting iron and other impurities from the ilmenite. Ilmenite, an ore of titanium, contains about 55 percent titanium dioxide. The upgrading processes result in a product with a titanium dioxide content approaching that of natural rutile, also an ore of titanium, which contains about 96 percent titanium dioxide. Since natural rutile is much more costly than ilmenite, increasing quantities of ilmenite are being upgraded to produce synthetic rutile.

In 1984, almost 84 percent of rutile was used to make the titanium dioxide pigments essential to the production of paint, paper, rubber, and plastics. In 1984, U.S. production of these pigments amounted to 800,000 short tons.

Synthetic rutile is classified under TSUS item 603.70, a residual provision for other metal-bearing materials of a type commonly used for the extraction of metal or as a basis for the manufacture of chemical compounds. Current column 1 rate of duty is 5.3 percent ad valorem, staying to 5.0 percent in 1987.

Imports of synthetic rutile are eligible for preferential treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and are also eligible for duty-free treatment under the Caribbean Basic Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) and when imported from Israel. They also receive the preferential percent rate when imported from least-developed developing countries.

Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp., the only known U.S. producer of synthetic rutile, has produced this material at its plant in Mobile, Alabama since 1977. In 1978 and 1979, Kerr-McGee expanded the plant's capacity to 110,000 short tons per year. The firm intends to expand capacity by another 15 percent by 1989. Total employment at the Mobile plant is 125 people.

Over half of the Mobile plant's production is used to satisfy the raw material requirements for Kerr-McGee's titanium dioxide pigment plant in Hamilton, Mississippi. Production information is confidential, but output has expanded during the last two years.

Domestic consumption is approximately equal to U.S. production plus imports. Demand for synthetic rutile strengthened in 1984 and again in 1985 due to rising demand by the titanium dioxide industry.

Revenue loss based on 1984 imports of synthetic rutile, valued at $3.8 million, is estimated at approximately $224,790, based on 5.9 percent ad valorem duty.

SECTION 177(10). CERTAIN CLOCK RADIOS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4298 by Mr. Vander Jagt)

The section would extend the existing suspension of the column 1 rate of duty on certain clock radios by striking out "Dec. 31, 1986" in Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) item 911.95 and inserting in lieu thereof "Dec. 31, 1990."

The clock radios which are the subject of this bill are those solid-state (tubeless) radio receivers which incorporate a clock or timing mechanism within the same housing (or casing), hereinafter referred to as "clock radios." These radios may operate from batteries or electric current and are principally for consumer use, in that they are designed principally to receive radio signals from the entertainment broadcast bands. However, such bands are not restricted; the radios may receive on other bands, such as weather, police or fire, and aviation.

The clock portion of the radio may simply display time or may also sound an audible alarm. However, in most clock radios, the clock also controls the radio functions by turning the radio on or off at the present time or intervals. Many models also provide for the control of external electric devices such as coffee pots. Such radio timers may be used to start the morning coffee as well as wake the occupant.

If duties were currently not suspended two duty rates would apply to imported clock radios. The first duty rate is on the radio portion of the apparatus, while a different rate is applied to the clock or timer mechanism. Because of the terms of TSUS item 911.95, however, the subject radios are treated as an entirety for purposes of the duty suspension. If a clock radio incorporates an analog clock with movements, the clock portion is dutiable separately in accordance with headnote 5, part 2E of schedule 7 of the TSUS, which specifically provides for such constructive segregation.

Solid-state radio receivers (including those with solid-state timer mechanisms) are dutiable under TSUS item 685.14, covering entertainment broadcast band receivers not for motor-vehicle installation, at a column 1 rate of 6.6 percent ad valorem. This rate of duty is being reduced annually as a result of the recent Tokyo Round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations. The final reduction will be achieved on January 1, 1987, and result in a duty of six percent ad valorem. The six-percent rate is currently applicable to imports of clock radios from least-developed developing countries (LDDC's). The column 2 rate of duty, applicable to Communist controlled or dominated nations listed in general headnote 3(d), is 35 percent ad valorem on the radio part of the clock radio.

Merchandise imported under item 685.14 is eligible for duty-free entry under the provisions of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP). However, products of Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan, and the Republic of Korea are not currently eligible for GSP treatment because these countries have exceeded the "competitive need" limitations set forth in section 504 of the Trade Act of 1974.

Products of Israel classified in TSUS item 685.14 are dutiable at the rate of six percent ad valorem, which will be reduced in stages to a rate of free. Finally, products of designated Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA) countries enter free of duty.

There is currently no known U.S. industry producing clock radios.

Total U.S. imports of clock radios increased from $108.7 million in 1981 to $196.9 million in 1984, before dropping to $178.5 million in 1985. In 1985, the largest foreign sources of clock radios were Hong Kong ($77.6 million) and Malaysia ($52.8 million). The unit value of U.S. imports fluctuated during 1981–85 but averaged $13.00 over the period.

Since there is no domestic production and no exports, U.S. imports represent 100 percent of apparent U.S. consumptions.

Estimates of lost customs revenues for 1985–89 from the proposed duty-free entry of the subject clock radios average $8,000,000 per year.

SECTION 177(11). MACHINES DESIGNED FOR HEAT-SET, STRETCH TEXTURING OF CONTINUOUS MAN-MADE FIBERS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1849 by Mr. Broyhill)

This provision would extend the existing temporary duty-free treatment applied to column 1 imports of machines designed for heat-set, stretch texturing of continuous manmade fibers until December 31, 1990 and would be effective December 31, 1985.

Texturing is the process of crimping, imparting random loops, or otherwise modifying continuous filament yarn to increase cover, resilience, abrasion resistance, warmth, insulation, moisture absorption, or to provide a different surface texture. The stretch/heat-set machinery that would be affected by this proposed legislation uses a "false-twist" method for texturing.

The false-twist method involves stretching, twisting, heat-setting, and untwisting of the yarn. The result is a bulkier, more elastic yarn.

According to a 1978 survey, 94 percent of the texturing machinery in place at that time (measured in thousands of spindles) was of the false-twist type. Since 1978, nearly all of the machines using other methods (gear crimping, edge crimping, knit-de-knit, and stuffer box) have been replaced by false-twist machines.

Duty-free treatment under item 912.07 was orginally granted principally because the U.S. yarn industry was unable to locate a domestic company that manufactured machines designed for heat-set, stretch texturing of continous manmade fibers.

Machines for stretch/heat-set texturing of continuous manmade fibers are provided for in TSUS item 670.06 with a column 1 rate of duty of 4.7 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of 40 percent. The machines are eligible for duty free treatment under GSP and CBERA.

During the period 1974-83 U.S. firms did not produce heat-set, stretch texturing machines for general consumption. Two domestic companies have begun production of these machines since 1984. Enterprise Machinery & Development Co., located in New Castle, Del., produces heat-set and air-jet machines, and Thieler Corp. International (TCI) of Gastonia, N.C. reportedly produces a range of heat-set texturing machinery. According to TCI officials, domestic sales of these products ranged between $1 and $2 million during 1984. Sales data for Enterprise Machinery & Development Co. are not available.

Data as to amount of imports are not specifically available as these items are entered in a category that includes other types of textile machines.

If this legislation were enacted the average annual customs revenue loss that would result would be approximately $2.6 million. This estimate is based on 1984 import levels and on the staged reductions of the tariff rates scheduled for 1985–90.

SECTION 177(12). HOSIERY KNITTING MACHINES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 1547 by Mr. Broyhill)

The proposed legislation to provide for an extension of the existing temporary duty suspension on imports from column 1 countries of single cylinder fine gauge hosiery knitting machines and of double cylinder jacquard hosiery knitting machines for knitting women's hosiery. The duty suspension, would be effective on September 30, 1985, and would continue through December 31, 1990.

Knitting is the process of producing fabric by forming loops of yarn and pulling each newly formed loop through one that has already been made. These operations are performed by hooked needles.

Circular and noncircular knitting machines are used to make hosiery, although the use of the latter type has virtually ceased in the United States.

Circular hosiery knitting machines may be subdivided into two major categories—namely, single cylinder and double cylinder. In turn, single cylinder machines may be classified as either fine or coarse gauge machines. Currently, only single cylinder coarse gauge hosiery knitting machines are manufactured in the United States.

Double cylinder hosiery knitting machines are used to manufacture half-hose for men, women, and children. These machines are fitted with a distinctive double-headed latch needle which is transferred to one or the other of the superimposed cylinders as required, producing a more intricate pattern (including jacquard of three-color combinations) than single cylinder machines.

Single cylinder fine gauge hosiery knitting machines have a column 1 duty of 4.9 percent ad valorem and double cylinder jacquard hosiery machines a 5.8 percent duty. Both have a column 2 rate of 40 percent ad valorem and are eligible for GSP and CBERA.

There are no U.S. producers of the hosiery knitting machines covered by this legislation.

Separate data for different types of circular hosiery knitting and double cylinder jacquard machines are not available. However, imports of the TSUS item covering all circular knitting machines were almost totally from Italy (90%). Canada was the sole source of the TSUS item covering the latter category.

The effect on revenue is not available because volumes of imports are not specifically known. Estimated revenue loss for these items in 1986 would be $980,000.

SECTION 177(13). SMALL TOYS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4579 by Mr. Downey)

This section would extend the temporary suspension of the column 1 rates of duty on certain enumerated small toys and games (valued not over 5 cents per unit) and jewelry (valued not over 1.5 cents per piece).

The subject articles consist of small or miniature playing cards, puzzles, games, balls, models, dolls, toy animals, toy musical instruments, magic tricks, practical joke articles, confetti, paper spirals and streamers, and noisemakers valued not over 5 cents per unit. This value limitation was adopted in order to limit the scope of the provision to toys for bulk vending machines. Also included is costume jewelry valued not over 1.5 cents per piece, including rings, earrings, bracelets, necklaces, key chains, pendants, and similar articles of personal adornment. Most of these goods are made from plastics, although they can be of other materials.

As originally introduced, the purpose of this section was to make permanent the existing duty suspension fo these articles under TSUS item 912.20, which will expire on December 31, 1986. However, the sponsor and interested parties subsequently agreed to extend the existing temporary duty suspension through December 31, 1990.

The subject articles are provided for in various TSUS items in parts 5D, 5E, and 6A of schedule 7 of the TSUS. Column 1 rates vary from 2 percent to 12.7 percent ad valorem. All the articles, except dolls classified in TSUS item 737.24, are currently eligible for duty-free entry under the GSP; all are eligible for duty-free entry under the CBERA. Imports from LDDC's are granted reduced duty rates under all these tariff items. Imports of these articles from Israel, except for those classified in TSUS items 735.10, 737.15, 737.40, 737.60, enter free of duty pursuant to the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Agreement. Imports from Israel under items 735.10, 737.15, 737.40, and 737.60 are dutiable at the respective LDDC rates for these items.

No. U.S. firms regularly produce the subject articles. Domestic production is negligible.

The National Bulk Vendors Association has estimated that imports of small toy and novelty items for bulk vending machines averaged $7 million to $10 million annually during 1981–85. This average represents a decline in imports of these goods in spite of the duty-free treatment, in effect since early 1983; annual imports were an estimated $10 million to $15 million during 1977–81.

There are no known U.S. exports of the small toys and novelties covered by this legislation.

Apparent U.S. consumption is virtually all accounted for by imports.

Estimated revenue losses would be between $500,000 and $1 million per year.

SECTION 177(14). STUFFED DOLLS, CERTAIN TOY FIGURES AND THE SKINS THEREOF

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2238 by Mrs. Schneider)

The proposed legislation would be effective on December 31, 1985 and would extend to December 31, 1990 the temporary duty suspension afforded to imports of stuffed dolls with or without clothing, skins for stuffed dolls, stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects and skins for toy figures.

Stuffed dolls are representations of human beings and have a textile exterior filled with a stuffing material, such as shredded textile fabric. These dolls, generally known as rag dolls in the toy trade, are either one-piece entirely stuffed dolls or dolls having a stuffed body with a hard head and extremities, usually of plastic.

Stuffed doll production is highly labor intensive; pieces must be hand-cut and sewn to produce the doll skin.

Stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects either have predominantly nonhuman or nonearthlike features or are hybrids of more than one earthly creature. Stuffed or filled toy animals (earthly creatures) are excluded from this category. Stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects can range from small inexpensive curiosities to larger-than-life-size creatures and characters costing many hundreds of dollars.

As with stuffed dolls, there is little domestice production of stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects. Had these toys become popular a decade ago, a residual domestic industry might have produced them profitably in the larger size ranges (as is the case with stuffed animals), despite migration of other production to lower-wage countries. However, since inanimate figures have become popular only within the last several years, and remain concentrated in the smaller and medium size ranges, they have been sourced almost exclusively from abroad.

Doll and toy skins are the outer covering of a doll or toy or the unstuffed torso (basically the unstuffed doll or toy). In addition, a doll or toy having the arms, legs, or any incidental appendages filled or stuffed and the main portion of the body (the torso) unfilled would be considered a skin for Customs purposes.

The production of skins is highly labor intensive, requiring hand cutting and sewing. There is no known commercial production in this country of doll skins, negligible production of skins for toy figures of inanimate objects, and only minor production of skins for toy figures of animate objects (which is concentrated in skins for the largest toys).

Industry sources maintain that the production of these products is so highly labor intensive that the U.S. toy industry had resorted to sourcing almost exclusively from foreign production facilities. Thus, any duty is arguably an unnecessary addition to the final cost to the consumer. In addition, these sources assert that the duty suspension of imports of skins would encourage importers and manufacturers to finish the dolls and toys in the United States.

The subject articles are dutiable at rates ranging from 9.6 percent ad valorem to 13.4 percent ad valorem. All are eligible for duty free treatment under CBERA and GSP. Although products of Hong Kong, Taiwan and ROK are excepted in a few cases.

U.S. production of stuffed dolls increased from $4.8 million in 1980 to $44.9 million in 1984. Stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects increased from less than $1.0 million in 1980 to $2.0 million in 1984. Doll skin production was nonexistent and toy skin production was less than $1.0 million throughout the period.

Specific information concerning the domestic industry producing only the subject products is not available. However, there were approximately 200 U.S. firms producing all dolls and stuffed toys in 1984. Employment in the doll and stuffed toy industry, which prior to 1982 had been declining, had recovered somewhat in 1984 to about 7,800 employees, including about 6,600 production and related workers. The industry is concentrated in New York, New Jersey, New England, and California.

The twenty largest firms account for the bulk of domestic doll and stuffed toy production.

Nearly all domestic products, including all the major firms, import to some extent; their activities range from the importation of skins to significant investment in foreign production facilities for supplying both U.S. and foreign markets. There is no known U.S. production of skins for stuffed dolls, and very little production of any of the remaining products except skins for stuffed toy animals. Some U.S. manufacturers produce skins domestically for the largest stuffed toy animals or the very high priced smaller animals as part of their overall U.S. production of the completed animals. More often, however, the skins are imported. It is not uncommon for those producers, importing parts of finished stuffed dolls and toy animals to export the production equipment, particularly cutting and sewing machines, to their overseas facilities.

Imports of all categories covered by this legislation increased markedly in the period 1980–1984. Units imported increased from 1980 to 1984 as shown below:

Item	1980	1984
Stuffed dolls	10.9	79.6
Stuffed toys	(1)	7.5
Doll skins	(1)	7.5
Toy skins	(1)	37.3

[1] Not available.

The import share from GSP and CBERA countries was 78% for dolls and nearly 100% for the rest.

U.S. exports of these products is negligible.

Item	1980	1984
Stuffed dolls	17.9	261.1
Stuffed toys	less than 1	8–10
Doll skins	(1)	7.5
Toy skins	(1)	38.3

[1] Not available.

Assuming that imports of stuffed dolls from Hong Kong and Taiwan and of toy figures of inanimate objects and toy skins form Korea remain ineligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP during 1986–90, the enactment of the legislation would result in an estimated loss of customs revenues of $15 million to $20 million annually.

SECTION 177(15) CRUDE FEATHERS AND DOWN

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4255 by Mr. Jenkins)

This section would extend the existing suspension of duty on crude feathers and down to December 31, 1990.

TUSU item 903.70 and 903.80 (and the corresponding schedule 1 item—186.15) cover feathers and downs, whether or not on the skin, crude, sorted (including feathers simply strung for convenience in handling or transportation), treated, or both sorted and treated, but not otherwise processed.

The feathers and downs which are the subject of this legislation are provided for in item 186.15, with a column 1 rate of duty of 7.5 percent ad valorem and a column 2 rate of duty of 20 percent ad valorem. The column 1 rate is not scheduled for further reduction.

The current rates under the "Special" rates of duty are free for imports of feathers and downs from developing countries under the Generalized System of Preserences, from countries provided for under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act and from Israel.

The suspension was enacted in 1975 to correct an anomaly in the TSUS in that certain feather- and down-filled garments were dutiable at seven percent ad valorem while feathers and downs, the principal input, were dutiable at 15 percent ad valorem.

Almost all domestically produced feathers and downs are obtained as a by-product of raising chickens, turkeys, ducks, and geese for meat. U.S. poultrymen, except those raising ducks and geese, give realtively little consideration to the price of feathers and downs in determining the size of their flocks, as the price for chicken and turkey feathers is quite low. At current price levels, the sale of waterfowl feathers and downs appears to provide a significant source of income for domestic duck and goose producers. The bulk of chicken feathers are collected at broiler-processing plants in the Southeast; most of the waterfowl feathers and downs are collected at duck-processing plants on Long Island, N.Y. and at goose-processing plants in the Midwest. A small quantity of feathers and downs is salvaged annually from wild pheasants and ducks.

U.S. production of feathers and downs affected by this legislation is estimated to have been about 15 million pounds annually in recent years. The bulk of such production is of chicken feathers. The total also includes an estimated three million to five million pounds of waterfowl feathers and downs; the bulk of which is from ducks, with U.S. production of goose feathers and downs estimated at less than 0.5 million pounds annually. A small amount of feathers from pheasants is produced. As the prices of different types of feathers and downs vary greatly, no value can be reasonably estimated for domestic production.

U.S. imports of feathers and downs decreased from 17 million pounds, valued at $74 million, in 1981 to 11 million pounds, valued at $51 million, in 1982 then rose to 19 million pounds, valued at $77 million, in 1984. Such imports declined slightly to 18 million pounds, valued at $65 million, in 1985. Virtually all U.S. imports consist of waterfowl feathers and downs which are largely imported in the unprocessed and crude state. Most are baled and shipped in the unprocessed state because if feathers and downs are baled after being cleaned they must be reprocessed to regain their bulk, thus adding an additional expense.

China, during 1981–85, generally was the leading U.S. supplier of feathers and downs in terms of quantity. Such imports consisted mainly of uncleaned feathers.

France generally was the leading U.S. supplier of feathers and downs in terms of value during 1981–85. Such imports from France consisted mainly of downs.

U.S. exports of feathers and downs declined during 1981–85, from six million pounds, valued at $47 million, in 1981 to three million pounds, valued at $23 million, in 1985. Taiwan was the principal U.S. export market for feathers and downs in terms of quantity, accounting for about 26 percent of the total during 1981–85. Other major U.S. exports markets during this period in terms of quantity included Korea (21 percent) and Canada (11 percent). Korea was the principal U.S. export market for feathers and downs in terms of value accounting for about 45 percent of the total. Other major export markets in terms of value included Japan (22 percent) and Canada and Taiwan (nine percent each).

No information is available on U.S. exporters of feathers and downs; however, it is believed that importers and processors also export when world market conditions are favorable.

During 1981–85, apparent U.S. consumption increased, rising from 26 million pounds in 1981 to 31 million pounds in 1984. Apparent U.S. consumption dropped slightly to 30 million pounds in 1985.

Based on the current rates of duty of crude feathers and downs and on the 1985 level of imports, the estimated annual loss of revenue would be approximately $5 million.

SECTION 201. GSP TREATMENT OF WATCHES

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2028 by Mr. Anthony)

In this provision, watches would remain ineligible for GSP except those watches which, if given preferential treatment, would not cause material injury to the watch manufacturing and assembly operations in the U.S. and U.S. insular possessions. Because the data necessary to develop this criteria are not publicly available, the determination of which watches fit this criteria would be made by the U.S. Trade Representative after studying the matters and taking into account public views.

Material injury, as used in this context, means substantial or significant injury to the watch manufacturing and assembly industry in the United States or the insular possessions.

Watches, as defined in headnote 2(a) to schedule 7, part 2E of the TSUS, are timepieces suitable for wearing or carrying on or about the person. While viewed primarily as functional articles, many watches are fashion items and are sometimes considered articles of jewelry.

Conventional watches use a balance wheel and hairspring as a time base, and may or may not be battery operated. Nonconventional watches use a quartz crystal as a time base and are energized by a battery or solar cells.

Solid state electronic watches are classified under TSUS item 688.36. Other watches (conventional and electromechanical) are classified under TSUS item 715.05.

Item 688.36 has a column 1 duty rate of 4.3 percent ad valorem, and column 2 rate of 35 percent ad valorem and qualifies for duty free entry under CBERA unless they contain products from column 2 countries.

Item 715.05 has a column 1 duty rate equal to the sum of the column 1 duty rates of the watch case and the movement. The column 2 rate is the sum of the applicable column 2 rates. The same CBERA criteria apply as for 688.36 items.

Watches classifiable under 715.05 produced or manufactured in an insular possession of the United States are eligible for duty-free entry if they conform to the quota and other requirements of headnote 6 to schedule 7 which details a rather complex program of preferences enacted in 1982, designed to assist the watch industry in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

When the Trade Act of 1974 was passed, the U.S. watch industry was considered import-sensitive. Therefore, watches were excluded from the list of articles eligible for the GSP.

Estimated shipments of watches by U.S. producers, in terms of value, decreased from $483 million in 1980 to $268 million in 1984, or by 45 percent.

Since the late 1970's the domestic watch industry has, for the most part, moved production offshore to areas (primarily the Far East) with lower labor costs. There is some manufacturing of watches and watch movements in the U.S. insular possessions. However, the value of this production is negligible when compared with apparent consumption. Domestic watch manufacturing consists primarily of assembling components produced abroad. Procedures performed include attaching dials and hands to movement assemblies, encasing movements, regulating, packaging, and marketing.

Domestic employment data are unavailable, although industry sources estimate current employment at 3,000 to 4,000 people. Workers in the actual manufacturing process are largely semi-skilled and nonskilled.

There are an estimated 150 companies performing assembly operations. The largest 5 companies account for an estimated 80 to 90 percent of production. Although the majority of watch producers are located in the New York area, the remaining companies are located in approximately 15 states.

U.S. imports of watches almost tripled in terms of quantity from 50 million units in 1980 to 140 million units in 1984. In terms of value, watch imports increased from $613 million in 1980 to $845 million in 1984.

The leading supplier of watches in terms of value in 1984 was Japan, accounting for $324 million, or 38 percent of the total. In terms of quantity, the leader was Hong Kong with 101 million units, or 72 percent of the total.

U.S. exports of watches increased from 920,000 units, valued at $18 million, in 1980 to 1 million units, valued at $20 million, in 1981. Since then, exports have steadily dropped to 437,000 units, valued at $7 million, in 1984. Hong Kong is the leading market for U.S. watches. Canada and Venezuela are the second and third leading markets, respectively.

U.S. consumption has been relatively flat in the period from 1980 to 1984 averaging approximately $1,100 million.

The effect on revenue is unknown at this time.

SECTION 202. MARKING OF CONTAINERS OF IMPORTED MUSHROOMS

(Originally introduced as H.R. 839 by Mr. Schulze)

This section would provide that imported preserved mushrooms would not be in compliance with the marking provisions of section 304 of the Tariff Act of 1930 unless the containers indicate in English the country in which the mushrooms were grown. This legislation would not amend any existing statute or affect any existing rates of duty on imported articles.

In the United States, about two-fifths of the mushrooms consumed are fresh, and the remainder are processed. The great bulk of processed mushrooms are canned.

U.S. imports of canned mushrooms enter in all conventional containers sizes and styles of pack.

Since early 1981, entries of prepared or preserved mushrooms packed in a heavy salt solution in large containers (primarily 50- and 20-gallon plastic and 55-gallon steel drums) have been increasing. These are fresh mushrooms grown in the People's Republic of China (China) which have been cooked and then saturated with a heavy salt solution. Upon arrival in the United States, the mushrooms are washed and desalted before being subjected to conventional canning processes by domestic firms. Since 1980, the principal foreign suppliers of all canned mushrooms have been Taiwan, China, Hong Kong, and the Republic of Korea (Korea), with Spain and the Netherlands shipping significant amounts in 1984.

Preserved mushrooms are imported into the U.S. under 3 separate TSUS item numbers which have rates of duty ranging from 1.8 cent per pound plus 5.5% ad valorem to 3.2 cents per pound plus 10% ad valorem. The column 2 rates are all the same—10 cents per pound plus 45% ad valorem. Two of the items are eligible for GSP and all 3 are eligible for CBERA.

During 1980–84, annual U.S. sales of prepared or preserved (canned and frozen) mushrooms averaged 117 million pounds. In 1984, sales were 119 million pounds. In recent years, the leading states in production/sales of canned mushrooms included Pennsylvania, Indiana, and California, while Pennsylvania and Indiana led in frozen mushroom production/sales.

U.S. imports of prepared or preserved mushrooms increased 44 percent from 117.3 million pounds valued at $121.9 million, in 1980 to a record high of 169.1 million, valued at $165.7 million, in 1984.

The leading foreign suppliers of prepared or preserved mushrooms in 1984 (and the share supplied by each) were Taiwan (37 percent), China (27 percent) and Hong Kong (13 percent), Spain (9 percent), and South Korea (7 percent). In 1984, the bulk of imported prepared or preserved mushrooms were canned mushrooms.

U.S. exports of prepared or preserved mushrooms rose irregularly from 578,000 pounds, valued at $392,000, in 1980 to 634,000 pounds, valued at $453,999 in 1984. In 1984, the four major markets for canned mushrooms, accounting for the bulk of total exports, were Hong Kong, Saudi Arabia, Spain, and Canada.

During 1980–84, apparent U.S. consumption of prepared or preserved mushrooms trended upward and averaged 234 million pounds annually; in 1984, consumption amounted to 287 million pounds.

The enactment of this legislation would likely have little or no effect on the annual revenues collected on imports of prepared or preserved mushrooms, other than potential marking duties under section 304. Any increased cost of production in changing container labels to conform to this bill would be minimal, resulting in no increase in the dutiable value of the finished product or that being paid by U.S processors of imports.

SECTION 203. CUSTOMS BOND CANCELLATION STANDARDS

(An amendment offered by Mr. Crane)

This section establishes a requirement for the Secretary of the Treasury to publish guidelines establishing standards for setting terms and conditions for the cancellation of bonds.

SECTION 204. THE W.M. KECK OBSERVATORY PROJECT, MAUNA KEA, HAWAII

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4254 by Mr. Heftel)

Section 204 would allow certain specified articles to be imported duty free for use in the construction of an optical telescope for the W.M. Keck Observatory Project in Mauna Kea, Hawaii. These articles would include the telescope structure, or frame, the obeservatory domes, and the primary mirror blanks.

The bill would not eliminate or change the current Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) rates of duty under which the articles would otherwise enter. Instead, it would grant a special exemption from the applicable tariff rates for the articles specified above. The exemption would apply to the Keck Observatory Project only.

The bill further provides for the refund of any duty that may have been paid on any of the specified articles before enactment of the proposed law.

The Keck Observatory will house a ten-meter reflecting telescope with infrared capabilities that will be the most powerful optical telescope in the world. The telescope will consist primarily of an observatory dome, primary mirror blanks, and a telescope structure.

The observatory dome will be a 120-feet diameter steel, hemispherical structure. Such domes typically enclose telescopes; therefore, they also contain moving shutter doors which permit the telescope to view the sky. Domes are generally built in sections. Structural steel shapes are cut into various configurations, attached to steel trusses, and welded together.

The mirror blanks are made of a special "zero expansion" ceramic material. Although the material is not glass, it has both glass-like and crystalline properties. It has such low thermal expansion rates over a wide temperature range that precision parts made of it are not subject to changes resulting from alterations in temperature. It is therefore an ideal mirror substrate mount for astronomical and infrared telescopes because changes in the reflector caused by temperature fluctuations would impair the quality of observations. Because of the difficulty of using a ten-meter mirror blank, the designers of the Keck telescope have developed mosaic of 36 hexagonal mirror segments only 1.8 meters in diameter.

The telescope structure is a high precision space frame which supports the primary mirror and provides ultra-precise movement to point the optical system to selected areas in the sky.

The Keck telescope will have a resolution three times that of any other telescope in the world. It will be used to veiw distant galaxies and will be able to collect enough light from them to determine their red-shifts, a measure of astronomical distance. Other uses include direct imaging in thermal infrared; thermal infrared spectroscopy; wide field imaging at optical and infrared wavelengths, spectroscopy and polarimetry of single objects and other experiments to discover the origin of stars, planets, and galaxies.

The steel observatory domes would be classified under TSUS item 653.00, which pertains to certain fabricated products of iron or steel suh as hangars, buildings, other structures, and parts of structures.

Currently, the column 1 rate of duty is 6.2 percent, which is the seventh stage of the duty reduction negotiated during the MTN. In the final staged reduction, effective January 1, 1987, the duty will be reduced to 5.7 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate under item 653.00 is 45 percent ad valorem, and the LDDC rate is 5.7 percent ad valorem.

The articles covered under item 653.00 are currently eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP (for all countries except the Republic of Korea), the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Act.

The telescope structure or frame and primary lens blanks are both classified under item 708.65 (frames, mountings, and parts of telescopes) and are dutiable at the rate applicable to the article of which the frames and mountings are part. In this case, it would be the rate applicable to item 708.61 (telescopes designed for use with infrared light).

Currently, the column 1 rate of duty is 2.6 percent. In the final staged reduction, effective January 1, 1987, the duty will be reduced to 2.2 percent ad valorem. The column 2 rate under item 708.61 is 35 percent ad valorem, and the LDDC rate is 2.2 percent ad valorem.

The articles covered under item 708.61 are currently eligible for duty-free treatment under the GSP, the CBERA, and the U.S.-Israel Free Trade Area Act.

Enactment of this legislation would result in a loss of customs revenues of about $610,000, based on the 1986 rates of duty under TSUS items 653.00 and 708.65 applied to the articles specified in the bill.

SECTION 205. RELIEF OF RUKERT MARINE CORPORATION OF BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3628 by Ms. Mikulski)

Section 205 provides that certain entries of synthetic methionine from Japan made between March 26, 1976, and March 10, 1977, shall be reliquidated without liability of the importer of record for antidumping duties, and that any such duty, if paid, shall be refunded. These duties were assessed by the Customs Service as a result of its determination under the antidumping law in effect at the time that synthetic methionine from Japan had been sold in the United States at less than its fair value, with a dumping margin of 44.14 percent ad valorem. Pursuant to the Customs Service determination, the Department of Commerce, which assumed responsibility for antidumping matters on January 1, 1980, issued an order for the assessment of the duties. Because the Rukert Marine Corporation was the importer of record for the merchandise, it became liable for payment of the additional duties.

The Rukert Marine Corporation ("Rukert") sought exemption from the collection of these duties because the corporation, which acted as the customs broker for entries of the merchandise, did not receive actual notice of its potential liability for the antidumping duties until after the period had expired during which it could have avoided liability by substituting the name of the actual consignee of the merchandise.

The assessed amount of antidumping duties is approximately $258,000.

SECTION 206. RELIEF OF MINEMET, INC., NEW YORK

(Originally introduced as H.R. 2506 by Mr. Lent)

The proposed legislation would instruct the Secretary of the Treasury to reliquidate, as free of duty under item 911.12 of the Appendix to the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS) (in effect at the time of entry), four entries of tubular tin products imported through the port of New York in March 1979. This would enable Minemet, Inc., to obtain the duties previously paid by submitting a certificate of actual use (in this instance a remelt certificate) for the products to the U.S. Customs Service, at the original port of entry, within 120 days from the date of enactment of this Act.

The Customs Service classified the subject products in TSUS 622.40, pipes and tubes and blanks therefor of tin. The column 1 rate the duty under this item in 1979 was 6 percent ad valorem, and the column 2 duty rate was 45 percent ad valorem; the current column 1 duty rate is 3.3 percent ad valorem. Imports under TSUS item 622.40 were then eligible for duty-free entry under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) if the product of a beneficiary country other than Brazil (as of March 1, 1979), while today all GSP-eligible countries may claim duty-free entry for such articles. The least developed developing countries (LDDC) duty rate, in effect since 1980, is 2.4 percent ad valorem. Such products from designated beneficiary countries are eligible, as of late 1983, for duty-free entry under the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act (CBERA). Imports under TSUS item 622.02 have been unconditionally free of duty since its enactment.

Enactment of this bill would cause a customs revenue loss of $216,000. This figure represents the amount of duty that Minemet paid on the articles in question, which it would be able to recover.

SECTION 207. PORNOGRAPHY

(Originally introduced as H.R. 3506 by Mr. Wolf)

This section explicitly defines as 30 days the time for instituting judicial proceedings on forfeiture of seized pornography imports. It also allows forfeiture proceedings to be instituted in the district to which the matter is addressed and permits a stay in civil forfeiture proceedings pending completion of any related criminal matter.

Current forfeiture law with respect to obscene material contains no express limitation on the time within which forfeiture actions must begin or be decided. The Supreme Court has interpreted the statute to include two fixed time requirements:

(1) judicial proceedings for forfeiture of material seized under the statute are required to be instituted no more than 14 days from the time the material is seized and

(2) the final decision in the action must be made within 60 days after the action is filed.

Forfeiture proceedings are currently allowed only in the district where the seizure takes place.

Because current law contains no express limitation on the time within which forfeiture actions must begin or be decided, the law has been interpreted by the Supreme Court to be 14 days from the institution of forfeiture proceedings and 60 days for the final decision. The extension of the time requirement from 14 days to 30 days would likely withstand constitutional scrutiny because (1) the Court in Thirty-Seven (37) Photographs indicated that 14 days was not the outer limit of constitutional delay, and (2) 30 days is less time than the 40-day and 6-month delays the Court did not wish to sanction.

SECTION 208. INTERNATIONAL COFFEE AGREEMENT

(Originally introduced as H.R. 5074 by Mr. Guarini)

This section amends section 2 of the International Coffee Agreement Act of 1980 (19 U.S.C. 1356k) by striking out "October 1, 1986" and inserting "October 1, 1989," thereby extending U.S. participation in the International Coffee Agreement (ICA) for 3 years.

Coffee is the bean of a tropical and subtropical evergreen tree or shrub. It is consumed as a beverage made from roasted and ground coffee beans. Most coffee enters international trade in the "green" unroasted form. Coffee extracts, essences, and concentrates consist of water-soluble solids derived from roasted coffee which has been ground and percolated with water, forming a liquid extract. The liquid concentrates (which are used for flavoring and beverage purposes) are minor products in the domestic and foreign trade of the United States.

According to the sponsor, the purpose of this provision is to provide for continued U.S. participation in the International Coffee Agreement. Continued U.S. participation in the agreement would provide the United States with "the opportunity to influence future marketing and production policies of coffee producing countries when consumers are most vulnerable." A halt in U.S. participation at this time would send "a negative signal" to producing countries and could trigger actions, such as efforts to form cartels, which would adversely affect the U.S. coffee industry and U.S. consumers.

The coffee products of the ICA are provided for in TSUS items 160.10, 160.20, and 160.21. All coffee provided for in TSUS items 160.10 and 160.20 enters free of duty. The coffee extracts, essences, and concentrates provided for in TSUS item 160.21 are free of duty under column 1 and are dutiable at 3 cents per pound under column 2.

The legislature of Puerto Rico has authority to impose its own duties on coffee imported into Puerto Rico from a foreign country, including coffee entering Puerto Rico from the United States, its territories and possessions, or other places under its jurisdiction. Puerto Rican rates of duty in 1985 were $1.40 per pound for ground or roasted coffee and $1.17 per pound (computed on a green (raw) basis) for coffee preparations (including instant coffee). Imports of green coffee were prohibited.

The International Coffee Agreement is a multilateral agreement that presently involves 71 coffee producing and consuming countries representing an estimated 98 percent of world coffee production and an estimated 85 percent of world coffee consumption. The present agreement, which entered into force on October 1, 1983, and remains in force through September 30, 1989, is the latest in a series of agreements that date back to 1962. The United States has been a participant in such agreements since 1962.

The objective of the agreements is to stabilize the price of coffee by means of a system of country export quotas which are decreased when prices are declining and increased when prices are rising. In periods of high prices, quotas are suspended altogether in order to encourage maximum exports. The quota system is enforced by the importing members. The agreement is administered by the International Coffee Council (ICC).

Section 2 of the International Coffee Agreement Act of 1980, initially codified at 19 U.S.C. 1356k, provided authority for U.S. implementation of its treaty obligations under the 1976 agreement. The act was amended in 1983 to reference the 1983 agreement and authorize U.S. participation for an additional 3 years, until October 1, 1986. Among other things, the act provides that the President shall seek to protect U.S. consumers against unwarranted price increases as a result of actions by the ICA or market manipulation by two or more members of the ICA and requires reports on the operation of the ICA and trade in coffee. This provision would authorize U.S. participation until October 1, 1989.

Domestic production of green coffee is limited to Hawaii and Puerto Rico. In crop years 1981–85, annual domestic production averaged about 32 million pounds. During the same period, an annual average of 2.3 billion pounds of green coffee was imported for roasting.

Total U.S. exports of all coffee (greenweight equivalent) amounted to 40 million pounds in 1985, or less than 1 percent of apparent domestic consumption.

During 1981–85, U.S. apparent consumption of all coffee was relatively stable at 2.4 billion pounds.

There would be little or no effect on U.S. customs revenues. Virtually all coffee products the subject of the bill enter free of duty. Only coffee extracts, essences, and concentrates imported from certain Communist countries, are dutiable. Such dutiable imports are negligible or nil.

The potential cost to the Federal Government would include the assessment on member countries of the International Coffee Organization to pay for expenses incurred by ICO and the regulatory costs incurred by the U.S. Customs Service in enforcing the import and export provisions specified in the International Coffee Agreement Act of 1980.

SECTION 209. SUGAR DRAWBACK

(Originally introduced as H.R. 4563 by Mr. Jenkins)

Currently, section 313 of the Tariff Act of 1930 provides for drawback (refund) of customs duties paid on (a) articles imported for manufacturing into other articles for export, (b) exported articles substituted for like imported ones, (c) articles not conforming to specifications, (d) certain exported spirits and medicinal preparations, (e) imported salt used to cure fish and meats for export, (f) materials used to produce vessels for foreigners, (g) articles exported in the same condition as imported, and (h) jet engines entered for repairs.

All drawback claims require that the article be exported within five years of importation. Where substitution drawback is claimed, the exported product or manufacture must have been made (from imported or like domestic merchandise) within three years from the receipt of the imported article.

Drawback provides for the refund of 99% of all customs duties paid on the imported merchandise.

This section would allow drawback of customs duties paid on cane sugar imported from November 1, 1977, to March 31, 1985, provided that the export of refined sugar or of sugar-containing products manufactured from cane sugar occurs before October 1, 1991. the provision would allow the recovery, via drawback, of both previously paid import duties and section 22 fees (imposed under section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended) for which the eligibility period for obtaining drawback has expired under current law.

The specified period in the legislative provision coincides with a period of time during which the column 1 rate of duty was at its highest permissible level and during which section 22 fees were in place. Since the provision would set an export time limit of October 1, 1991, it is possible that claims for drawback based on 1977 to 1985 imports could go on through September 30, 1994. It should further be noted that the period in which exports could be made (and drawback claimed) extends through the current expiration date of the domestic price-support program for sugar.

According to the sponsor of the original legislation, the purpose of this provision is to enable U.S. sugar refiners to continue to export refined sugar to the world market with benefit of previously expired drawback. According to the U.S. Cane Sugar Refiners' Association, whose members would be the primary beneficiaries of this provision, enactment of this provision would enable them to export about 500,000 tons of refined sugar per year to the world market. The annual refund by the U.S. Treasury for drawback is estimated by the refiners' association to be approximately $53 million.

The provision is narrowly drawn to apply only to imports of raw cane sugar, and exports of refined cane sugar or products manufactured or produced from refined cane sugar, to ensure its application only to products relating to cane sugar, and not beet sugar. It has come to the attention of the Committee that certain importers of raw cane sugar may be claiming drawback for exports of refined sugar made from sugar beets. The special drawback treatment provided in this legislation is intended not to apply in such a situation. The special benefits of drawback are intended only for imports of raw cane sugar and exports of products made from raw cane sugar.

The section also requires the Secretary of Agriculture, in conjunction with the Commissioner of Customs, to study and report back to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House and the Committee on Finance of the Senate by February 1, 1987 on circumvention of the U.S. sugar quota through the importation of sugar blends. The report must address the severity of the problem, or lack thereof, and suggest concrete steps, as necessary, to prevent such circumvention. The purpose of this subsection is to provide the Committee with detailed information on the nature and extent of any circumvention of the sugar import quota resulting from the importation of refined sugar in the form of blended products.

SECTION 210. PROTECTION UNDER THE TARIFF ACT OF 1930 (SECTION 337)

Injury to "Efficiently and Economically Operated" U.S. Industry

Section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930 provides for relief against unfair methods of compensation and unfair acts in the importation of articles into the United States or in their sale, if the effect or tendency of such actions is to destroy or substantially injure an efficiently and economically operated industry in the United States.

The U.S. International Trade Commission has the responsibility under section 337 to conduct an investigation of any alleged violation of this provision either upon a complaint being filed by an interested party or upon its own motion. If the Commission finds that a violation of this statute has occurred and determines that such relief is justified after considering the effect "upon the public health and welfare, competitive conditions in the United States economy, the production of like or directly competitive articles in the United States and United States consumers", it may provide relief in the form of an exclusion order or a cease and desist order.

Section 210 amends section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930 in several important respects. First of all, it eliminates the need to demonstrate injury to, or the impairment or prevention of the establishment of, an industry in the United States for intellectual property rights cases. Secondly, it eliminates in all cases the requirement to establish that an industry in the United States is "efficiently and economically operated." Finally, although the injury standard would be eliminated, petitioners in intellectual property rights cases would have to demonstrate that an industry in the United States relating to the articles or intellectual property right concerned "exists or is in the process of being established."

The changes described above relating to statutory intellectual property rights cases would apply to:

1. The unauthorized importation into the United States, or the unauthorized sale with the United States after importation, of articles that—

a. infringe a valid and enforceable United States patent or a valid United States copyright registered under title 17, United States Code; or

b. are made, produced, processed, or mined under, or by means of, a process covered by the claims of a valid and enforceable United States patent;

2. The importation into the United States, or the sale within the United States after importation, of articles that infringe a valid and enforceable United States trademark registered under the Trademark Act of 1946, if the manufacture or production of the article was unauthorized; and

3. The importation of a semiconductor chip product in a manner that constitutes infringement of a mask work registered under chapter 9 of title 17, United States Code.

In such intellectual property rights cases, an industry in the United States is considered to exist if there is, with respect to the articles, patent, copyright, trademark, or mask work concerned, in the United States—

1. significant investment in plant and equipment;

2. significant employment of labor or capital; or

3. substantial investment in its exploitation including engineering, research and development, or licensing.

The fundamental purpose for the amendments made by section 210 is to strengthen the effectiveness of section 337 in addressing the growing problems being faced by U.S. companies from the importation of articles which infringe U.S. intellectual property rights.

Infringing imports were not the primary concern of Congress when section 337 was initially enacted in 1922. As indicated by the scope of its language, section 337 was designed to cover a broad range of unfair acts not then covered by other unfair import laws. However, over the years, patent, copyright, and trademark infringement were recognized as unfair practices within the meaning of the section 337, and today, section 337 is predominantly used to enforce U.S. intellectual rights. According to a recent Government Accounting Office (GAO) study, 95 percent of the section 337 cases initiated since 1974 involve statutory intellectual property rights. The Committee believes that the injury and efficient and economic operation requirements of section 337, designed for the broad context originally intended in the statute, make no sense in the intellectual property area.

Unlike dumping or countervailing duties, or even other unfair trade practices such as false advertising or other business torts, the owner of intellectual property has been granted a temporary statutory right to exclude others from making, using, or selling the protected property for the purpose of encouraging innovation. Any sale in the United States of an infringing product is a sale that rightfully belongs only to the holder or licensee of that property. The importation of any infringing merchandise derogates from the statutory right and diminishes the value of the intellectual property. Under such circumstances, the Committee believes that requiring proof of injury, beyond that shown by proof of the infringement of a valid intellectual property right, should not be necessary.

The Committee recognizes that in very few cases have petitioners actually been denied relief because of failure to meet the economic tests relating to injury and economically and efficiently operated industry. However, the Committee is concerned that, because of these economic tests, some holders of U.S. intellectual property rights who seek relief from counterfeit or infringing imports are denied access to section 337 relief. Since 1974, according to GAO's survey, 11 complainants have been unable to meet all of the economic criteria and 6 of them were denied relief solely for this reason. The GAO survey further indicated, however, that firms have terminated their proceedings or accepted settlement agreements which they judged not in their interests because they could not meet all of the statute's economic tests. It has been claimed that many firms may even have been discouraged from initiating proceedings because of these tests. Further, the cost of section 337 litigation is extremely high (ranging from $100,000 to $1 million with a few costing as much as $2.5 million according to GAO) and the legal costs of satisfying the economic criteria are reportedly equal to more than half of the total litigation expenses, thus further discouraging the use of section 337 to address the problem of counterfeit imports.

The Committee notes that in adopting section 162, it is effectively eliminating the requirement that the domestic industry be "economically and efficiently operated" and the requirement that the infringement have the tendency or effect of destroying or substantially injuring the domestic industry from section 337 as it applies to intellectual property cases. The Committee does not intend that the USITC or the USTR will reintroduce these requirements in making their public interest determinations.

Although the injury test has been eliminated for intellectual property rights cases a petitioner must establish that a U.S. industry relating to the articles or intellectual property right concerned "exists or is in the process of being established." This requirement was maintained in order to preclude holders of U.S. intellectual property rights who have no contact with the United States other than such intellectual property rights from utilizing section 337. The purpose of the Commission is to adjudicate trade disputes between U.S. industries and those who seek to import goods from abroad. Retention of the requirement that the statute be utilized on behalf of an industry in the United States retains that essential nexus.

The Committee is concerned, however, that in recent decisions the Commission has interpreted the domestic industry requirement in an inconsistent and unduly narrow manner. This inconsistent application is best exhibited in the decisions in Certain Miniature Battery-Operated, Allterrain Wheeled Vehicles. Certain Cube Puzzles, and Certain Products With Gremlins Character Depictions. In order to clarify the industry standard a definition is included which specifies that an industry exists in the United States with respect to a particular article involving an intellectual property right if there is, in the United States—

1. significant investment in plant and equipment;

2. significant employment of labor or capital; or

3. substantial investment in the exploitation of the intellectual property right including engineering, research and development or licensing.

The first two factors in this definition have been relied on in Commission decisions finding that an industry does exist in the United States. The third factor, however, goes beyond ITC's recent decisions in this area. This definition does not require actual production of the article in the United States if it can be demonstrated that significant investment and activities of the type enumerated are taking place in the United States. Marketing and sales in the United States alone would not, however, be sufficient to meet this test. The definition could, however, encompass universities and other intellectual property owners who engage in extensive licensing of their rights to manufacturers.

The phrase "or in the process of being established" with regard to the industry requirement recognizes that there may be situations where, under the above definition, and industry does not "exist" but a party should be entitled to bring a 337 action. For example, if a new product is developed in the United States which is protected by a U.S. intellectual property right, the owner of the intellectual property right would not have to wait to bring an action under section 337 until he can satisfy the definition of industry, if he can demonstrate that he is taking the necessary steps to establish such an industry in the United States.

Finally, it is noted that the changes in this section are not intended to change existing law or practice regarding parallel imports or gray market goods. The substantive rights of intellectual property right owners with respect to this issue are unaffected by these amendments since the underlying statutes governing patents, copyrights, trademarks or mask works have not been changed. The law to be applied in section 337 cases raising this issue is the law as interpreted by Untied States courts.

Termination of Investigations by Consent Order or Settlement Agreement

Section 210(a)(2) amends section 337(b)(1) of the Act to authorize the Commission to terminate investigations, in whole or in part, by issuing consent orders or on the basis of settlement agreements.

The Commission has for a number of years terminated section 337 investigation in these ways without making a determination regarding whether the statute has been violated, under authority derived from the Administrative Procedure Act, specifically 5 U.S.C. subsection 554(c)(1). The amendment to section 337(b)(1) provides express authority in the Act for such terminations. It is intended to put to rest any lingering doubts regarding the Commission's authority to terminate investigations by issuance of consent orders or on the basis of settlement agreements without making a determination regarding violation of the statute.

Exclusion of Articles During Investigation

Under section 337, the Commission is empowered to issue both temporary and final exclusion orders prohibiting the entry of merchandise. There are no time limits for the issuance of temporary exclusion orders, however.

Section 210(a)(3) amends subsection (e) of the Act (1) to require the Commission to rule on petitions for a temporary exclusion order within 90 days (150 days in more complicated cases) of publication of the Commission's notice of investigation in the Federal Register, (2) to authorize the Commission to require the petitioner to post a bond as a prerequisite to the issuance of a temporary exclusion order, and (3) to authorize the Commission to grant preliminary relief in case involving alleged patent, copyright, registered trademark, or mask work infringement to the same extent as preliminary injuctions and temporary restraining orders may be issued be the federal district courts.

Experience under the present statute has shown that the Commission sometimes provides temporary relief to complainants too late to benefit them. This section addresses this problem by amending subsection (e) of the Act to require a Commission determination regarding issuance of a temporary exclusion order within 90 days (150 days in more complicated investigations) of institution of the investigation. It is expected that the Commission will decide whether to issue such orders using the standards and procedures employed by the federal district courts when they decide whether to issue preliminary injunctions.

Section 210 also authorizes the Commission to require the petitioner to post a bond as a prerequisite to the issuance of a temporary exclusion order. The purpose of petitioner's bond is to hold the respondents harmless if it is later determined by the Commission that there is no violation of the Act. If forfeited, petitioner's bond, is to go to the respondents.

Finally, in cases involving alleged patent, copyright, registered trademark, or mask work infringement, the section authorizes the Commission to grant preliminary relief to the same extent as preliminary injunctions and temporary restraining orders are granted by federal district courts under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Cease and Desist Orders

Section 337(f) provides for the Commission's use of cease and desist orders "in lieu of" the exclusion of articles. Penalties for the violation of such orders are set at the greater of $10,000 or the domestic value of the articles.

Section 218(a)(4) amends section (f)(1) of the Act in two respects. It authorizes the Commission to issue cease and desist orders in addition to exclusion orders and it raises the penalty for violation of such orders to "$100,000 or the domestic value of the articles."

In some investigations, the Commission has interpreted the current language as prohibiting it from issuing both an exclusion order and cease and desist order to remedy the same unfair act.

There are circumstances, however, where it is in the public interest to issue both an exlcusion order and cease and desist order for the same unfair act. For example, a cease and desist order probibiting a domestic respondent from selling the imported infringing product in the United States may be appropriate when the product has been stockpiled during the pendency of an investigation and an exclusion order may be appropriate to prevent future shipments of the infringing product. When the Commission determines that both remedies are necessary, it should be without legal question that the Commission has authority to order such relief. This amendment provides that authority.

Transfer from President to USTR Authority to Overrule USTR Decisions

Section 337(q) requires the Commission to transmit its determination to the President and allows the President to disapprove such determination "for policy reasons" within 60 days after receiving it.

Section 210(a)(5)(A) strikes "President" each place it appears in subsection (g) of section 337 and inserts "United States Trade Representative" in lieu thereof, thus transferring from the President to the U.S. Trade Representative the authority to overrule ITC determinations for policy reasons.

Section 210(a)(5)(c) adds a new subsection to the Act which requires the Commission, in cases involving defaulting respondents, to presume the facts alleged in the complaint to be true and, upon request, to issue relief against the defaulting respondents, unless the enumerated public interest factors (the public health and welfare, competitive conditions in the U.S. economy, the production of like or directly competitive articles in the United States, and U.S. consumers) preclude relief. However, a general exclusion order prohibiting the entry of unfairly traded articles regardless of their source may not be issued unless a violation of the Act has been established by substantial, reliable, and probative evidence.

This amendment is motivated by the fact that discovery is usually difficult or impossible to obtain from respondents who have chosen not to participate in a section 337 investigation. For this reason, the bill authorizes the Commission to presume the facts alleged in the complaint to be true insofar as they involve a defaulting respondent, and to then issue relief affecting only that respondent. The amendment will therefore not affect participating respondents. Relief in the form of a general exclusion order must be supported by a Commission finding of violations of the Act based on substantial, reliable, and probative evidence. Complainants would declare at the time the last remaining respondent is found to be in default whether they are pursuing a general exclusion order.

Abuse of Process

Section 210(a)(5)(c) also adds a new subsection to the Act authorizing the Commission to promulgate rules prescribing sanctions for abuse of discovery and abuse of process to the extent authorized by Rules 11 and 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The Committee believes that Commission rules prescribing sanctions for abuse of discovery and abuse of process are needed to provide the Commission and its administrative law judges with an additional tool by which to control the discovery processes.

Modification or Rescission of Exclusion Orders and Cease and Desist Orders

Section 210(a)(6) amends the Act to require that persons who have previously been found in violation of section 337 and who have petitioned the Commission for modification or rescission of a remedial order bear the burden of proof in any Commission proceeding regarding their petition. The bill also provides that the Commission may grant the petition only on the basis of new evidence or evidence that could not have been presented during the proceeding that resulted in the remedial order or on grounds which would permit relief from a judgment or order under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

This provision is intended to codify existing Commission practices.

Confidential Information

Section 210(a)(8) adds a new section to the Act prohibiting the disclosure, except under protective order or to employees of the Commission or the U.S. Customs Service, of confidential information submitted to the Commission or exchanged among the parties in connection with a section 337 investigation, without the consent of the person submitting the information.

A great deal of information, disclosure of which would harm the competitive position of the submitter, is collected as part of the record in section 337 investigations. This information is disclosed, under protective order, to counsel involved in the investigation, but not to their clients or to the public. Companies might change its present policy regarding release, and decide to release information it no longer considers confidential, but which the submitter does consider confidential. This amendment addresses that concern by providing that disclosure may not occur without the submitter's consent.

Effective Date

The amendments made by section 210 would become effective with respect to Commission findings made on or after the date of enactment of this Act. The Commission is authorized to extend for an additional 3 months the deadline for completing any investigation due to be completed within 6 months after enactment which it declares to be complicated.

SECTION 211. TARIFF AGREEMENTS WITH CANADA

Under section 102 of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended by the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984, the President has the authority to enter into a bilateral trade agreement with any country to reduce or eliminate tariffs, but such an agreement is subject to Congressional approval under the fast-track implementation procedures set forth in sections 102 and 151 of the Trade Act. The authority to enter into such an agreement expires on January 3, 1988.

Section 211 would add a new provision to the Trade Act of 1974 authorizing the President to enter into an agreement with Canada to reduce or eliminate the duties on a specific list of tariff items. The President would have the authority to proclaim the changes in duties on these products without seeking the approval of Congress. However, he is authorized to exercise this authority only to the extent that tariff concessions of approximately equivalent value are granted by the Government of Canada in exchange for the reductions authorized under this section.

The following products would be covered under the scope of this negotiating authority: frozen cranberries; dialysis cyclers; teapackaging paper; dried fababeans; cat litter composed of paper or gypsum; merchanics' tool boxes; medical tubing; synthetic fireplace logs; certain spirits; miners safety lamps, components, and battery chargers; and computerized paper cutter control retrofit units. The President's authority to negotiate on these products is limited to the specified tariff items accompanying each article description in section 211.

On December 10, 1985, the President notified the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance of his intention to enter into a comprehensive bilateral trade negotiation with Canada under the authority of section 102. Since neither Committee disapproved such negotiations during the 60 legislative-day period provided in section 102, the comprehensive talks are currently proceeding. However, these talks may take several years to complete.

In order to facilitate such negotiations and to create some momentum toward a comprehensive agreement, section authorizes the President to proclaim the reduction or elimination of duties on a finite list of articles which are of importance to the Canadian Government in exchange for tariff concessions of equivalent value on U.S. exports to Canada. If an agreement is reached, such tariff reduction can be implemented without further Congressional approval at any time within the 5-year period for which the President has been granted such authority.

SECTION 212. CUSTOMS SERVICES AT PONTIAC/OAKLAND MICHIGAN, AIRPORT

(Originally Introduced as H.R. 2381 by Mr. Carr)

This section amends Section 236 of the 1984 Trade and Tariff Act to specify that the airport located at Pontiac/Oakland, Michigan would become a reimbursable customs port. It would also eliminate the maximum number of locations that Customs may serve on a reimbursable basis.

The U.S. Customs Service discontinued its service in the early 1980's at a number of small airports as a cost-cutting measure. This move apparently disadvantaged some business interests that had come to rely upon the availability of a Customs operation at some of these locations. As a result of the pressure brought to bear by these interests, the Congress specified in the 1984 Trade and Tariff Act that the airport located an Lebanon, New Hampshire plus three non-designated other small airports (that would otherwise not qualify as a Customs location) could be provided with customs services on reimbursable basis. Since enactment of that provision, Customs has had many requests for establishment of these locations.

The Committee recognizes that many small airports, such as Oakland/Pontiac Airport in Pontiac, Michigan and the airport located at Lebanon, New Hampshire, presently have neither the volume nor the level of business to require the availability of full-time customs services. Therefore, the Committee urges the Secretary of the Treasury to provide customs services at the Oakland/Pontiac Airport and charge a fee based on actual hourly costs, equal to expenses incurred.

TITLE III. IMPLEMENTATION OF NAIROBI PROTOCOL

(Originally Introduced as H.R. 2885 by Mr. Gibbons)

The proposed legislation would make permanent changes to the TSUS to implement the Nairobi Protocol to the earlier Florence Agreement on the Importation of Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Materials. Such changes would become effective with respect to articles entered, or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, on or after the latest of: 1) August 12, 1985; 2) the 15th day following the date of enactment; or 3) the 15th day following the deposit of the U.S. ratification of the Protocol. The Protocol's intent is to contribute to the cause of peace through a freer exchange of ideas and articles across national boundaries. To achieve this goal, duty-free treatment would be extended to various printed materials, visual and auditory materials, tools for certain scientific instruments, and articles for blind and handicapped persons. The Protocol added new articles to the group receiving duty-free treatment under the Agreement and is aimed at ending the restrictions on the type of importers eligible to obtain such benefits.

Subtitle A and B describe the purpose of the act and amends, repeals and creates tariff provisions for articles to be afforded duty free treatment pursuant to the act.

Subtitle C would permit the President to modify portions of the duty free treatment authorized under the act. First, section 321 would empower him to terminate or narrow, or impose conditions on, the duty-free treatment granted to the tools for scientific instruments and articles for the handicapped. This authority would be in addition to that afforded by section 201 of the Trade Act of 1974 but it would be available only where the duty-free treatment of a type of article has a "significant adverse impact" on all or part of a U.S. industry producing the like or directly competitive article.

All actions to change the duty treatment of covered articles could occur only after public and private parties had an opportunity to present views. The section would further deem ongoing proceedings under the 1982 act, or any continuing action under it, to be proceedings or actions under the proposed section. (This includes the investigation on hearing aids.)

Section 322 would permit the President to expand the scope of the duty-free treatment of the visual and auditory material covered by section 313, within the interest of the United States. Such action could include the removal of or change in any conditions previously imposed as to those imports. The section is intended to permit the President to move from implementing the narrower Annex C-2 to the less restrictive Annex C-1; the latter lacks the limitations on the nature of articles and type of importers eligible to claim free entry that are present in C-2. Any such action would become effective in the fifteenth day after it is proclaimed.

Other sections of subtitle C would modify procedures to obtain duty free eligibility for scientific apparatus and would also provide for collection of statistical information for imports of articles for the handicapped to assist in the implementation of potential actions limiting duty free treatment under Section 321.

The Florence Agreement was adopted by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in July 1950 and entered into force as to ten countries on May 21, 1952. The Agreement provides for the exemption from customs duties of specified publications, other information materials, and objects of cultural and artistic interest in order to promote the free exchange of ideas. The Agreement entered into force as to the United States on November 3, 1966, upon issuance of Presidential Proclamation 3754; the duty-free treatment commenced on February 1, 1967.

The Nairobi Protocol, drafted between 1973 and 1976, was opened for signature on March 1, 1977 and represents both an extension of the Agreement to additional categories of articles and application of original provisions to new products. The Protocol has eight annexes, four of them mandatory for contracting parties, covering groups of articles to receive duty-free treatment. A fifth annex has two versions, one broader than the other; the proposed legislation would implement the narrower version.

Under the Protocol, a contracting party is obligated to exempt the following articles from customs duties and other charges:

(1) Printed books; printed publications and documents of a non-commercial character (Annex A)

(2) Works of art and collector's pieces of an educational, scientific, or cultural character (Annex B)

(3) Scientific apparatus or instruments imported by approved public or private scientific or educational institutions (Annex D)

(4) Articles specially designed for the use or advancement of the blind or other physically or mentally handicapped persons, when the article is imported by approved institutions (Annex E)

Contracting parties also agree to extend such free entry to either of the following:

(1) Visual and auditory materials, including films (or negatives); sound recordings; patterns, models (except toy models), and wall charts of an educational, scientific, or cultural character; video-tapes; holograms; multi-media kits; and other materials (Annex C.1—originally adopted by the United States through the 1982 act); or

(2) The same materials, when limited to those of an educational, scientific or cultural character imported by certain entities (Annex C.2—to be implemented by the proposed legislation with the potential of moving to Annex C.1 at a later date).

Parties may choose to grant free entry to sports equipment (Annex F), musical instruments and equipment (Annex G), or material and machines used for the production of books, publications, and documents (Annex H) under specified circumstances. The United States has not adopted these three annexes.

Restrictions on importation or subsequent circulation of these articles can be applied if directly based on national security, public order, or public moral considerations. In ratifying the Agreement, the United States was permitted to attach a reservation which allowed for the suspension of any obligation under the Agreement for those imported articles covered by the Agreement that prove injurious to domestic industry producing a like or directly competitive product.

The temporary tariff treatment afforded by the Protocol was provided in Proclamation 5021 of February 14, 1983 with an expiration of August 11, 1985.

In order to ascertain whether the domestic hearing aid industry has been harmed by the Protocol approved duty free importation of hearing aids the ITC instituted investigation No. 332-215 on June 11, 1985. Any modification of tariff treatment for hearing aids pursuant to the ITC findings and Presidential consideration would continue in effect after the enactment of Title III.

The existing column 1 tariff rates for those articles covered by the proposed legislation varies from free (this is the case for most of the articles) to 3.3 percent ad valorem. Approximately half of the articles are eligible for GSP and all of the articles (with the possible exception of some articles for the handicapped such as special watches) are eligible for CBERA. The temporary duty suspensions on these articles expired August 11, 1985.

In 1984, the value of shipments (receipts) by the commercial printing industry was estimated at $32 billion. Specific shipment data on catalogs, drawings and plans, and photographs and certain pictorial matter—the significant imported articles that would be given duty-free treatment—are not available. However, it is estimated that domestic receipts from catalogs, drawings, and plans account for approximately 5 percent of the annual value of receipts of the U.S. commercial printing industry.

U.S. production of motion-picture film cannot be accurately measured from the available statistical data. However, the manufacture of video products has expanded, mainly as a result of the increasing demand of video-taped films for use on home video systems.

Data are not available concerning the domestic production of tools specially designed to be used for the maintenance, checking, gauging or repair of instruments or apparatus for which no corresponding or alternative articles is manufactured in the United States. Such production is believed to be small.

Data are not separately available concerning the production of articles specially designed or adapted for the use or benefit of physically or mentally handicapped persons, since the range of products potentially included in that category is extensive.

Printers of catalogs, drawings and plans, and photographs and pictorial matter represent a relatively small portion of a substantial commercial printing industry. Commercial printing products are basically grouped into six major segments, each of which contains articles involved in the legislation. These six grouping are: magazines and periodicals; catalogs and directories; general job printing; advertising printing; labels; and legal work.

There were approximately 30,000 commercial printing establishments in 1984. Production employees accounted for 75 percent of all employment in the commercial printing establishments in 1984.

About two-thirds of all printing plants are located in the Eastern United States. About 20 percent of the plants are located west of the Rockies and on the Pacific Coast, and the remaining 15 percent are in the Central States. Domestic production accounts for the bulk of U.S. consumption, with imports making only a minor contribution.

Data are not reported concerning the number of establishments and employees in the motion picture industry.

Although there are many producers of the broad category of articles that are specially designed or adapted for the use or benefit of physically or mentally handicapped persons, no data can be included concerning such firms. Similarly, no data are available concerning production all the sound or combination recordings in proposed TSUS item 870.34.

U.S. imports of printed matter are relatively insignificant compared with domestic production. Imports of catalogs, drawings and plans, and photographs and certain pictorial matter were also only a small portion of domestic consumption of these products, with combined import valued at about $121 million in 1984. The leading source of imports of catalogs, drawings and plans in 1984 was Canada. Trade in printed matter occurs primarily because of unique content * * *

The value of imports of exposed motion-picture film, related sound recordings, and recorded video tape for distribution in the United States is insignificant in relation to the value of domestic production and is much less than that of exports. Imports increased from $18.1 million in 1980 to $23.2 million in 1984. The supplier of imported films vary depending upon whether U.S. pictures are filmed on location (which is determined in part by the foreign exchange rate) and the box office success of foreign productions in the United States. Imports by nonprofit institutions cannot be specified.

Total U.S. imports of sound recordings under TSUS items 724.20 through 724.40 in 1980–1984 grew consistently from $50,907,000 to $155,981,000, averaging $87,297,000. The imports entered by approved institutions cannot be separately identified.

Imports of the various educational, scientific, and cultural articles provided for in TSUS item 870.30 averaged $10 million during 1980–84. The leading source in 1984 was Norway, which provided 56 percent of the total.

U.S. exports of catalogs, drawings and plans, and photographs and certain pictorial matter (exposed film) were valued at a combined total of $80.2 million in 1984, up from $45.3 million in 1980. The largest of these categories, drawings and plans increased from $11.6 million to $42.0 million between 1980 and 1984. The major export markets were Denmark and the United Kingdom. Exports of exposed film increased from $17.1 million in 1980 to $22.0 million in 1982; in 1984 such imports amounted to $19.0 million. The major export markets were Canada and the United Kingdom. Exports of catalogs increased from $16.6 million in 1980 to $19.2 million in 1984. The leading export markets were Canada, the United Kingdom and Australia.

The United States is the world's largest exporter to motion-picture films. There are approximately 75 countries to which the U.S. exports motion-picture films, the most important being the major industrialized nations, which account for an estimated 45 percent of total foreign remittances. The top 15 markets for U.S. film exports account for about 75 percent of remittances from foreign film rentals.

No statistics are available concerning exports of articles specially designed or adapted for the use or benefit of physically or mentally handicapped persons.

U.S. consumption of catalogs, drawings and plans, and photographs and other pictorial matter is basically supplied by domestic production. Annual consumption data are not available but are estimated to be almost equal to annual production, or about 5 percent of the annual value of receipts of the U.S. commercial printing industry.

U.S. consumption, as well as production, exports, and imports, of motion-picture films cannot be accurately measured because of the nature of the statistical data available.

No information is available concerning the apparent U.S. consumption of tools specially designed for the maintenance, checking, gauging, or repair of instruments or apparatus for which no corresponding or alternative article is manufactured in the United States. However, it is believed that imports supply most, if not all, of U.S. consumption, since the machines are also imported.

Data are not available regarding the consumption of articles specially designed or adapted for the use or benefit of the blind or other physically or mentally handicapped persons. It is believed, however, that U.S. made articles supply the bulk of consumption.

Revenue losses from the proposed changes to schedule 2, part 5 are likely to be minimal. Total annual customs revenues generated in 1984 to articles classified there were approximately $1.1 million. Revenue loses resulting from all other current TSUS items affected by the legislation would be insignificant, since many covered articles already enter duty-free or do not enter in significant volume.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is a package of more than 80 small tariff bills, most of which were passed in H.R. 4800, previously by this House. For the most part they represent items on which we are suspending duty because there is no U.S. domestic production, and it is foolish to assess duties and lay extra costs on the consumer in these cases.

They represent authorship spread throughout the House of literally hundreds of Members. Most of them are noncontroversial.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GIBBONS].

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, there is very little left to say about this meritorious bill. It is a collection of relatively noncontroversial items which we do every year in order to make certain small adjustments in the tariffs of the United States so that American industries can compete better with foreign industries.

It is not to be thought of as an omnibus tariff bill at all. I regret that we are having to pass it because, as Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI said, we have had a bill over in the other body for many, many months which has not received appropriate attention.

Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned, I hope the other body will see fit not to amend this bill because I think they have had plenty of time to amend any bill that we send over there. I hope that this bill will be adopted by the other body without any further adjustments to it.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot close this discussion without paying tribute to the lady sitting to my right, Cassandra Carr, a member of our Trade Subcommittee staff. She has been serving with us for a year at no expense to the Government. She has been doing this as an educational part of her career.

Without her meticulous and expert care, this legislation would not have progressed this far, nor would it be in the fine shape that it is in.

H.R. 5686 contains over 80 tariff provisions, including continuation of existing duty suspensions, reduction and suspension of duty on items not produced in the United States, reclassifications, and other minor customs and tariff matters. Most of these provisions enable U.S. businesses to be more competitive by reducing the cost of their raw material. Others allow our continuing participation in international agreements, such as the Nairobi Protocol. Other provisions which are included will improve health care for our citizens and encourage scientific research.

Mr. Speaker, most of these provisions have been passed favorably by the House earlier this year. Only noncontroversial measures which were introduced after that vote have been added to H.R. 5686. These measures deserve our attention now. The failure to enact these provisions will result in significant hardship to a number of U.S. companies.

We have talked a lot during this session of Congress about improving our national competitiveness. This bill certainly does not contain all of the reforms that we need. But let's move forward with these noncontroversial measures which will certainly improve the competitive position of the companies that need these changes.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, although I support final passage of H.R. 5686, the miscellaneous tariff and customs bill, I do so with some reservations. In general, from a free trade perspective, I support those provisions in the bill that relate to duty suspensions, extensions of current suspensions, reclassifications to lower tariff levels, and the elimination of duties and tariffs. I am in opposition, however, to those protectionist items that would result in a net tariff increase. Specifically, this would include the provisions of the bill that deal with the implementation of the Nairobi Protocol, the coffee agreement, and the reclassification of casein.

One other provision included in H.R. 5686, that I unsuccessfully opposed during consideration of omnibus trade legislation in the Trade Subcommittee, relates to the elimination of the import ban on Soviet furskins. I take particular exception to the inclusion of this item because it is largely in response to a political promise, and is not supported by any clear economic considerations. The Soviet fur industry is the largest in the world, and because of its state-supported lower costs of production, it would enjoy a substantial competitive advantage. Furthermore, there are very few estimates as to what the expected levels of Soviet exports to the United States might be. It is speculated by some that the U.S.S.R.'s annual production could be as high as 13 million pelts, or three times the United States production level. Clearly, there is no good case for the inclusion of the Soviet furskin provision in this reportedly "noncontroversial" package.

Two measures that were included in H.R. 5686 that I am particularly pleased about are the duty suspension provision on certain parts of photocopy machines, and the provision which relates to Customs bond cancellation. As a cosponsor of H.R. 4532, which was incorporated into H.R. 5686, this represents a minor duty suspension that will help the domestic photocopy industry. The Customs bond cancellation section, originally an amendment that I offered in the Trade Subcommittee, would merely establish uniform guidelines for the cancellation of Customs' bonds.

As I stated earlier, I support final passage of H.R. 5686, but with the exception of the aforementioned sections.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5686.

H.R. 5686 contains over 80 miscellaneous tariff bills, which are designed to promote trade to the advantage of U.S. industries. Most of this package of trade measures was originally part and parcel of a much larger package of trade legislation, H.R. 4800, which passed the House in May.

Although H.R. 5686 merits all of my colleagues' favorable consideration, I sincerely regret that it is not the omnibus trade legislation which this country so vitally needs and which the U.S. Congress has been urging be adopted since the beginning of the 99th Session of Congress.

It is much to my dismay that the other body has not taken the time to collaborate with this body to ensure enactment of well-crafted and broad-based trade legislation. America can no longer afford to ignore the deep trade problems experienced by U.S. industry and the in-depth changes that must be made in U.S. trade laws and trade policy-making apparatus to resolve them.

I am afraid that when our Nation as a whole finally wakes up to the pivotal role that trade plays in maintaining a vibrant, healthy America, it will be too late.

The latest trade figures continue to be alarming. Thirty-eight thousand additional manufacturing jobs lost in September, for a total of 200,000 since the beginning of this year. U.S. industry's rate of capacity utilization has been at its lowest rate since November 1983. Steel import levels still well exceed the targeted levels set forth in the 1984 Steel Import Program. Even U.S. agriculture has experienced negative monthly trade balances for the first time in over 20 years.

I could cite endlessly more examples of unjustifiable trade patterns that have unfairly burdened U.S. industries and workers for far too long. Of course, the most telling example is the aggregate one—our overall trade deficit, which is predicted to be at an all time high of $170 billion by the end of 1986.

Clearly, the record our Nation is setting in its trade balance with the rest of the world is one which we are not proud of. Clearly, we can no longer afford to tread down the dangerous path of industrial distinction.

Enacting just miscellaneous tariff measures will not place America on the right trade path. Much more remains to be done. We must realistically examine our role in international trade and determine what it is, what it should be and set long-range policies to bring it about. Above all, we must formulate a consistent and comprehensive trade policy for our Nation to establish an equitable world trade order and make that trade policy a number one priority for our Nation. I hope that the first item on the legislative agenda of the 100th Congress will be to accomplish just that.

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my deep concern over a section of the miscellaneous tariff bill, H.R. 5686, that the House will consider today that would, for the first time, allow watch and watch components to receive duty-free treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences [GSP] Program.

Mr. Speaker, one of the major employers in the State of Rhode Island, is Speidel, the company that invented the twist-o-flex watchband. Speidel has been an integral part of the Rhode Island economy for many years, along with the other jewelry manufacturers in my State. Unfortunately, Speidel today is the only survivor of a domestic industry that has been destroyed by imports. There are no other American manufacturers of watchbands still operating in the United States. Speidel's business has dropped by more than 40 percent over the last 5 years and its employment has fallen by more than half. Imports now control more than half of the American market in watchbands.

With the serious problems that now face this industry, I must question the need for a provision that will provide an additional incentive for imported watches and watchbands to enter this country. Our Nation already has one of the most open economies in the world. Imported watches are finding no problems in competing in our markets. So why do we need to provide duty-free treatment for such imports?

The proponents of this bill believe that this legislation will help save the jobs of the employees of a specific company. This company has already moved all of its watch assembly offshore. Most of its components are also manufactured abroad. But the proponents argue that by allowing watches and watch components into this country duty-free, this company might become a little more competitive and the jobs of their remaining American employees might be saved. The implied threat, of course, is that if this provision is not passed into law, those jobs will go overseas.

I clearly empathize with the problems that domestic manufacturers are having with meeting the challenge of low-cost imports from abroad. My State has lost thousands of jobs to imports. But providing duty-free treatment for watches and watchbands will only further damage what remains of this fragile industry. It is the wrong solution to this difficult problem.

I hope that this poorly conceived section of the bill can be eliminated from the legislation before it becomes law.

Miss SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5686, the Miscellaneous Tariffs Act. This bill includes a number of important tariff revisions that the Congress should consider and approve before we adjourn for the year. I do, however, have serious concerns about the section of the bill that would alter the treatment of watches under the generalized system of preferences.

Twelve years ago, Congress established the GSP as a means of encouraging economic growth and trade in the developing world. It was intended, however, that the benefits for lesser developed nations should not be at the expense of American workers and American industry. That is why watches and their component parts have not been considered eligible for duty-free GSP status. A number of other import-sensitive items such as textiles, shoes, leather goods, steel, glass products, and electronic items were extended from the GSP as well.

Under the bill before us today, the U.S. Trade Representative could provide duty-free status for watches and watch components, if such injury would not cause material injury to watch manufacturing and assembly operations here in the United States. Now it seems to me that "material injury" is a pretty tough standard for an American manufacturer to meet in order to avoid a flood of imported competitive products. It doesn't make sense to make trade policy that will essentially force American companies to go under before they can get relief.

We don't need a study by the U.S. Trade Representative to tell us that the watch and watch component industry is import sensitive. Look at the facts. Speidel, the only major American manufacturer of watchbands, is located in my district. Over the past 5 years, Speidel's business has fallen by over 40 percent and employment has dropped from over 1,000 workers to only 500. At the same time, every other major watchband manufacturer has stopped production in the United States. The competition from watchband manufacturers in low labor-cost countries like Hong Kong is simply too fierce. Given the ease with which imported watches and watchbands are entering the United States, they obviously do not need a tariff reduction to become competitive.

In addition, the provision offers no guarantees that if the tariff break is put in place, prices will be lowered to the consumer or jobs will be saved. In fact, the break will provide a substantial incentive to eliminate the very jobs the provision's proponents are endeavoring to save.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to support H.R. 5686 when it comes time to vote. Unfortunately, the rule does not permit a chance to consider this one section separately. I do understand that there is strong opposition to this provision in the other body. My hope is that the other body will strike this badly conceived provision before it returns this legislation to the House.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this miscellaneous tariff bill. In particular I wish to address the portion of the bill which relates to intellectual property and trade. This section has been developed cooperatively between the Ways and Means Committee and the Committee on the Judiciary. Indeed one section of the bill (relating to amendments to section 337 of the Tariff Act) is identical with my bill H.R. 4747, (a measure reported unanimously by the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties and the Administration of Justice of the Committee on the Judiciary). Therefore, I am pleased to join my colleagues from Ways and Means Committee in supporting this bill.

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND TRADE

It is now commonly accepted that the United States should take steps to address our serious trade problems. Increasingly the private sector, Government officials and politicians have fixated on worldwide protection of American intellectual property as one of the keystones to addressing the trade problem. Without question, the American creative genius has been nurtured by strong legal tradition of protecting the property rights of intellectual property owners. As we think about adjusting our lives and laws to meet the trade problem, I hope that we can proceed in a balanced, dispassionate and objective way. As important as this task is we should not take precipitous action as a palliative for short term problems.

Before outlining what are, in my view, the elements of a coherent and comprehensive approach to intellectual property and trade, let me set the context.

Our key intellectual property laws—copyright and patent—are derived from the constitutional mandate to "Promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their writings and discoveries." (U.S. Constitution Art. 1, section 8, clause 8). The Constitution envisions a bargain. Creators and inventors receive a benefit—a form of a limited monopoly right. In exchange, the public arguably benefits twice—first when it obtains access to the creation or invention, and second when the term of protection expires and the creation or invention is added to the public domain. This bargain furthers the public interest and does not represent in any way recognition of the natural right of creators and inventors to proprietary protection. Thus, our intellectual property laws—including also laws relating to trademark and semiconductor chip mask works—represent carefully fashioned compromises which limit the nature and exent of the rights of intellectual property owners. These limits include concepts such as "fair use" and "first sale" in copyright and the right to engage in "reverse engineering" with respect to mask works.

From a political perspective it is safe to say that our intellectual property laws are neither unlimited nor primarily designed to provide a special benefit. "Rather, the limited grant is a means by which an important public purpose may be achieved." Sony v. Universal City Studies, 464 U.S. 417, 429 (1984).

This perspective is important to keep in mind when addressing trade legislation affecting intellectual property. In my view, it would be a serious mistake to use legislation relating to international trade as a vehicle for changing the positive law relating to intellectual property.[1] I am also hopeful that we will not ignore the public interest in a rush to protect what are currently perceived by some to be embattled industries.

It is appropriate that this bill should include amendments to the Tariff Act to improve the work done by the International Trade Commission.[2] Before outlining the features of those

[1] For example, we should avoid taking sides in the grey market or parallel import issue in trademark law or on first sale in copyright law, or on reverse engineering in mask work law.

[2] Additional measures to further classify the rights of intellectual property owners have already been considered. Congress—through legislation processed by the Committee on Ways and Means—has given the United States Trade Representative and the Department of State powerful weapons to amendments, let me first outline the nature of the current remedy, and discuss the possible reforms.

Proposals to make an intellectual property code part of the GATT have recently been adopted at Punta Del Este. I look forward to working to assist this process.

BACKGROUND AND CURRENT LAW

The purpose of section 337 is to provide a remedy for unfair methods of competition in import trade that substantially injure, tend to substantially injure, or destroy an efficiently and economically operated domestic industry. This statute, which was first enacted in 1922, took its current form in 1974.

The Commission has instituted 240 investigations under section 337 since 1974. Of these, 19 are pending. The following table breaks down the results of the 221 completed investigations:

Voluntarily terminated	127
No respondent appeared	40
Remedy put in place	(33)
Violation found	28
Remedy put in place	(23)
No violation found	26
Total completed	221

The vast majority of section 337 cases have been based on allegations of infringement by imports of U.S. intellectual property rights, i.e., patents, trademarks or copyrights.

A violation of section 337 usually leads to exclusion from entry into the United States of the articles connected with the unfair trade practice. Such an exclusion order can cover not only articles of persons over whom personal jurisdiction existed and who participated in the proceedings to determine violations, but also articles of importers and foreign manufacturers who never participated in the proceedings and over whom no personal jurisdiction existed in the United States. Such an order can apply to the articles of persons who did not start to produce the articles until well after the order was issued. As such, it is an extraordinary remedy which allows broad relief to a holder of intellectual property rights or other individual harmed by an unfair trade practice.

After receiving a complaint under section 337, the Commission has 30 days to decide whether to institute an investigation. After a case is instituted, it is delegated to an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), who holds a preliminary conference usually within 45 days. In cases involving requests for temporary relief, the ALJ has 4 months in which to issue a preliminary determination. The Commission may review this initial determination and, if necessary, fashion a temporary remedy, which may be disapproved by the President for policy reasons.

With regard to permanent relief, the ALJ has nine months to determine whether or not there has been a violation of section 337 (14 months in "more complicated" investigations). Again, the Commission may undertake a review to affirm, reverse, or modify the ALJ's determination and, if necessary, to fashion a remedy. The Commission has 1 year after the institution of the investigation to complete the case (or within 18 months if it finds the investigation to "be more complicated"). The President has 60 days during which disapproval of the Commission's determination can be intered.

SECTION 337 REFORM

My subcommittee—the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties and the Administration of Justice—conducted 2 days of hearings on the various legislative proposals to amend section 337 (e.g. title II of H.R. 3776 and title II of H.R. 4539). Two primary issues emerged during the hearings. First, a vast majority of the witnesses [3] and other commentators [4] advocated elimination of the "injury" and "efficiently and economically operated industry" requirements. Second, some witnesses urged elimination of the domestic injury requirement. Both of these issues are addressed in the omnibus trade bill.

Proponents of change argued that proof of injury in intellectual property cases should not be required. They asserted that acts of infringement of an intellectual property right should be sufficient. They pointed out that under the trademark and copyright laws a Customs order can be obtained for those types of infringing goods without proof of injury. Moreover, they argued that because these intellectual property rights involve the right to exclude others from using or practicing the protected property that injury should be irrelevant. Finally, although injury determinations have rarely prevented relief before the ITC advocates for change nonetheless claimed that litigating the injury question is unduly burdensome and expensive.

Opponents of removing "injury" tests have argued that such a move would violate the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade (GATT). This view was contradicted by the United States Trade Representative, a leading academic expert (Professor Robert Hudec of the University of Minnesota Law School) and most other witnesses. Opponents also argued that the "injury" requirement serves to keep the rights of complainants and respondents in equlibrium. They observed that in exchange for less procedural protections in an ITC proceeding the respondents are able to avoid liability unless there is the additional showing of injury. This position was rejected by proponents on policy grounds. They argued that the "injury" test only makes sense when nonintellectual property rights are being asserted and that inclusion of the requirement by Congress in 1930 did not anticipate the use of section 337 to enforce intellectual property rights.

The miscellaneous tariff bill eliminates both the "injury" and "efficiently and economically operated industry" requirements. The language used is largely derived from the language adopted by the Ways and Means Committee and the Committee on the Judiciary.

The administration (H.R. 4585) and Congressman MOORHEAD (H.R. 3376) advocated elimination of the "domestic industry" requirement. This approach was opposed by organized labor, Allied-Signal, Corning Glass Works, the chairperson of the ITC and the Intellectual Property Owners Organization.[5] Some witnesses before my subcommittee and before the Trade Subcommittee urged a slight modification of the definition of "industry" insofar as it applied to intellectual property cases. In essence these witnesses argued that the ITC has created an inconsistent set of rules to determine whether an industry exists.[6] The proposed amendment in the omnibus trade bill clarifies the results of previous ITC decisions [7] and corrects some recent incorrect applications of the Commission in more recent cases.[8] The amendment makes clear that a "domestic industry" can exist through the development of a "licensing" industry. The amendment also makes certain the availability of section 337 relief to universities who have made substantial investment in engineering, or research and development in connection with the exploitation of an intellectual property right.[9] The language used in the amendment is a combination of that found in H.R. 4539 and that found in the bill reported by the Trade Subcommittee. Deleted from both versions is language relating to "sales and marketing." As many of the witnesses indicated, the "domestic industry" requirement will serve as a gatekeeper to prevent the excessive use of the ITC under section 337. The inclusion of "sales and marketing" activities in the United States was seen by most commentators as being too broad.

PROCEDURAL REFORMS

During the course of the hearings on this bill a number of procedural suggestions also were made to improve the efficiency of ITC operations. These changes appear to have the support of virtually all commentators. A complete description of these changes can be found in the Ways and Means Committee use in bilateral negotiations in the context of the General System of Preferences (GSP) and the Carribean Basin Initiative (CBI). By permitting GSP and CBI benefits to be affected by the adequacy of our trading partners' intellectual property laws we have already wielded a big stick to induce greater intellectual property protection abroad.

[5] In this regard, it was postulated that such a change would transform the ITC into an intellectual property court. They also claimed that it would make the ITC forum available to two non-domestic companies with no United States investment to argue about access to the United States market.

Mr. ROTH changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5234, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, 1987

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers may have until midnight tonight October 14, 1986, to file a conference report on the bill (H.R. 5234) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RANGEL). Is there objection to the request of the gentlemen from Illinois?

There was no objection.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 1200, IMMIGRATION REFORM AND CONTROL ACT OF 1985

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers may have until midnight tonight, October 14, 1986, to file a conference report on the Senate bill (S. 1200) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to effectively control unauthorized immigration to the United States, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so in order to ask the distinguished chairman if this is a report of the conferees on the immigration bill?

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GONZALEZ. I yield to gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. RODINO. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Further reserving the right to object, if this report is filed by midnight tonight, as I believe the gentleman is asking, is the gentleman asking by midnight tonight?

Mr. RODINO. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Then would it be in order or would you have to ask for a rule to bring up the conference report?

Mr. RODINO. It is in the Rules Committee now.

Mr. GONZALEZ. This gentleman realizes that there are some of us that have a little bit more than just a passing interest and concern, and naturally responsibility given the nature of our areas, with respect to this legislation. The gentleman also realizes that the last time last week that the Rules Committee had the closest to a star chamber procedure that I have seen since I came here 25 years ago. We used to lambast Judge Smith from Virginia, you know, and I see the heirs of those that were criticizing acting very much the same way.

I just want so ask the gentleman if the rule being asked for now will give us a chance to have a few observations in the course of considering the conference report. Is the gentleman asking for a closed rule, or just what kind of rule, what kind of framework of reference will we have here?

Mr. RODINO. I must respond to the gentleman that this will be a rule, of course, that will be presented by the Rules Committee to the House, and I certainly have no reason to in any way deny the gentleman an opportunity once the conference report is before us to have the gentleman speak on the conference report.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Further reserving the right to object, if no report has as yet been printed to be filed, what is it that the Rules Committee is considering?

Mr. RODINO. The Rules Committee will, if this unanimous consent is granted, will be considering the filing of the report which the conference committee just agreed upon a while ago. I might tell the gentleman that it was after considerable deliberation and many people who were represented on the conference and the diverse views, that it was a unanimous report of the Members of the conference committee with the exception of one gentleman.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from California, for the purposes of raising a question.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, is it true that the recommendation to the Rules Committee is that a rule be granted waiving all points of order?

Mr. RODINO. If the gentleman will yield, I believe that is what the rule is going to require.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, if that is the case, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask to proceed for this 1 minute for the purpose of inquiring of the distinguished majority leader the program for the balance of this week.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, we have a full plate of very important matters to attend to tomorrow, each one of them a paving block on the way to adjournment. We hope tomorrow to take up the Department of Defense authorization bill and the continuing resolution, conference reports on the two of those.

Having completed those two, we would like to take up the conference report on H.R. 8, the clean water bill. I shall ask momentarily that we may have until midnight tonight to file the conference report.

It is possible that we may bring the debt ceiling bill up tomorrow, the extension thereof, and the conference report on the Commodity Futures Trading Corporation. Each of those is ready.

The reconciliation bill, at the last accounting I had, still was snagged in conference over two questions.

The remaining items would include the drug bill, which we hope the other body will accept, the immigration bill, which was the subject of the colloquy held just previous to this discussion, and possibly the highway bill.

If we complete those matters we can adjourn with a clean conscience.

Mr. MICHEL. Might I inquire which would come up first tomorrow, the military authorization or the CR?

Mr. WRIGHT. We suppose it appropriate to try to bring up the Department of Defense authorization bill first in order that the continuing resolution appropriating moneys carrying out authorized projects under that legislation might be timely and in order.

□ 1605

Mr. MICHEL. And the CR would be for a full year?

Mr. WRIGHT. That is the present plan. I know of no other plan.

Mr. MICHEL. I regret that in my attempt to get the majority leader of the other body on the phone so that we might find out; I notice that reconciliation has to be acted upon in the other body before it comes here, and I notice the gentleman did not mention the highway conference report.

Is there a possibility of that one—the gentleman mentioned the water conference report, but not the highway one.

Mr. WRIGHT. There is a possibility that the highway conference report would come to us, according to information which has drifted in bits and whisps to me. There are two matters on which that conference report is snagged. If they can be resolved in the conference, then that bill could come also.

Mr. MICHEL. Now might I inquire of the distinguished majority leader what his intention is for really getting out of here with a sine die adjournment; if he really feels strongly about getting out this week, then I think we stand a much better chance than if, "Well, it really does not matter and maybe we will let it dribble over into next week," and then we know what happens.

Would the gentleman express himself?

Mr. WRIGHT. It would be our strong preference to adjourn sine die this week, obviously. There is only one thing that conceivably might require us to go into pro forma sessions. If the President were to be coy about his intentions with regard to the Superfund bill, which has already been sent to him, and hinted at the possibility of a pocket veto; then I think it would behoove those of us in the Congress to retain the capability of coming back next Wednesday, Wednesday of next week to vote on a motion to override the veto.

If the President, on the other hand, were to agree to sign the bill, or were he even to veto the bill in time for us to consider an overriding vote prior to the adjournment this week, then it will not be necessary for us to go into pro forma sessions.

Mr. MICHEL. Is that the only thing the gentleman thinks would keep us over here until next week?

Mr. WRIGHT. Unless there were some other piece of legislation that falls into that same identical category in which we were unable to get from the President a clear message as to his intentions.

Mr. MICHEL. If we had a better reading of the intention of the President on Superfund so that we might not have to come back next week, would that spur the effort, then, to really conclude things here by Friday?

Mr. WRIGHT. It surely would enhance our chances. It would expedite our efforts. We would be pleased with such a clear reading.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SNYDER. In your discussion, Mr. Majority Leader, I did not hear you mention H.R. 6, the water projects bill. The conferees on the programmatic issues concluded that work a week ago, I guess, was it not, Mr. ROE?

We are waiting for the Committee on Ways and Means and Senate Finance to agree on the taxation portion, which, we are ready to go on that if they can just meet and do that.

Do you have the information on that?

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, if the minority leader will yield, I am sorry to say I do not know the answer. The gentleman is correct. According to my information, all that remains is for the Ways and Means Committee to complete the vessel fees portion.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes, and my understanding, if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] will yield further, is that a sort of a tentative agreement has been reached between the administration and the tax-writing bodies on what ought to be in that; but I do not know why they do not go ahead and do it.

I would appreciate it if the majority leader could encourage them to go ahead and do that, because we need that bill, as you know as a former member of the committee. It has been a long time since we have had a water projects bill, and we have worked it out so that I think the President will sign it. If the majority leader could help some with that, we would appreciate it.

Mr. WRIGHT. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, let me ask one more question. The gentleman has laid out a program for tomorrow. Is there any indication what will happen on Thursday?

Mr. WRIGHT. If the gentleman will continue to yield, on Thursday there is a very important event in Mississippi.

Mr. MICHEL. And?

Mr. WRIGHT. And it behooves us to complete the Department of Defense authorization bill tomorrow prior to Thursday.

Mr. MICHEL. Would that clear the way for any other conference reports that do not involve the gentleman from Mississippi to be taken up Thursday, or is it assumed there will be a hiatus here where nothing would be done Thursday?

Members really have a problem here, trying to fulfill their campaign obligations, plane reservations, and all the rest.

Mr. WRIGHT. The gentleman is exactly right. I did not intend to be light-hearted or facetious. We surely would intend to pursue all matters that need our attention on Thursday with the sole exclusive exception of the Department of Defense authorization, or the authorization for the continuing resolution. Appropriations matters.

Other matters; highway bills, drug bills, immigration bills, water resources bills, clean water bills, Superfund bills, debt bills, reconciliation bills, all might be processed on Thursday.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, just to clarify then, there is no chance of us adjourning tomorrow night sine die; we will be in Thursday and Friday, with votes?

Mr. WRIGHT. Well——

Mr. GLICKMAN. I do not mean to pin the gentleman down that much, but a lot of us need to make those kinds of judgments.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Illinois will yield further.

Mr. MICHEL. I am happy to yield.

Mr. WRIGHT. The chance always exists, and hope springs eternal, and we would love to think that the possibility was present that we could adjourn tomorrow night. If we can, with great diligence, we shall. We shall not stay around for Thursday just to enjoy the company of one another.

If it is possible to adjourn tomorrow night, we will. I do not think that I would be honest to encourage you to that expectation. Hope so, but probably not.

Mr. MICHEL. That is enough for me.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

PERMISSION TO FILE CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 1128, CLEAN WATER ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1985

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the Senate bill (S. 1128) to amend the Clean Water Act, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

AMENDING THE RULES OF THE HOUSE WITH RESPECT TO PAPERS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 114, Rept. No. 99-993), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

H. RES. 114

Resolved, That clause 2 of rule XXXVI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by striking out "General Services Administration" and inserting in lieu thereof "National Archives and Records Administration".

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution, (H. Res. 114) to amend the Rules of the House of Representatives with respect to papers of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so only to advise the House that the request has been cleared with the minority on our committee.

The pending resolution presents no controversy, and is a necessary technical amendment to the rules.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I merely want to ask if the gentleman could explain what this is about. What rule are we suspending?

Mr. MOAKLEY. This has nothing to do with immigration.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] what does it have something to do with?

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, actually it is a technical amendment to the rule covering some archives that are at the National Archives.

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. I thank the gentleman for his explanation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TAYLOR] for purposes of debate only, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 114 makes a technical amendment to the rule governing the archiving of noncurrent records of the House. House records have been deposited at the National Archives since 1946.

In 1971, the rule was amended to reflect a reorganization which made the Archives part of the General Services Administration.

Mr. Speaker, effective April 1 of this year, the Archives has again become an independent agency and it is necessary to amend the rule to conform to the current statute.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution is technical and noncontroversial. Both the resolution, and the committee's related oversight activities have been handled in a thoroughly bipartisan manner, and I urge adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, under my prior announcement, I yield to the distinguished ranking minority member of the subcommittee, Mr. TAYLOR, for debate only.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 114 makes a minor, clerical change in rule 36 of the rules of the House.

I join my colleagues the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] in urging adoption of the resolution.

The gentleman from Massachusetts, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Rules of the House [Mr. MOAKLEY], has always been gracious to all of the members of his subcommittee.

I want to thank him personally for the courtesies and for the cooperative spirit he and his staff extended to the minority on this resolution. We appreciate it and we want to say so.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 114 is a simple, five word change in the rule relating to papers of the House. It is a housekeeping measure.

The report of the Committee on Rules which accompanies the resolution is short and to the point. Although our subcommittee did hold an oversight hearing on the general topic of the archival of House records, the subcommittee chose to issue a separate oversight report.

Mr. Speaker, when the National Archives and Records Administration Act took effect last year, that agency became the legal repository for records of the Congress.

House Resolution 114 merely conforms the Rules of the House to the new law, by deleting the reference to the General Services Administration and replacing it with a reference to the National Archives.

Mr. Speaker, one of the more enjoyable aspects of my service as a member of the Committee on Rules, as well as my service as the ranking Republican member of the subcommittee, is the opportunity it affords me to work closely with the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the able gentleman from Missouri for his kind comments. I would also express my appreciation to the gentleman and the other minority member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] for their gracious cooperation and support in our efforts to use consideration of this resolution as an opportunity for meaningful oversight of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I move the previous question on the resolution. The previous question was ordered. The resolution was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR REAPPOINTMENT OF MURRAY GELL-MANN AS CITIZEN REGENT, BOARD OF REGENTS, SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 268) to provide for the reappointment of Murray Gell-Mann as a citizen regent of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

Mr. FRENZEL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do so in order to yield to the distinguished gentlewomen from Ohio so she may explain the reason for the request.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is to provide for the reappointment of Murray Gell-Mann as a citizen regent of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution. Dr. Gell-Mann is a Nobel laureate and a professor of physics from the California Institute of Technology. Because of Dr. Gell-Mann's extraordinary scientific background, he has brought to the Smithsonian Board of Regents his own unique combination of intellect and experience. The Smithsonian is indeed fortunate to have Dr. Gell-Mann as a member of the Board of Regents. The Task Force on Libraries and Memorials has reviewed and favorably recommends this reappointment.

Mr. FRENZEL. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I concur in what the gentlewoman from Ohio has said. Mr. Gell-Mann is a first-rate regent who deserves his nomination.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER, pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There is no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 268

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the vacancy in the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, of the class other then Members of Congress, which will occur by the expiration of the term of Murray Gell-Mann of California on July 25, 1986, be filled by the reappointment of the present incumbent. The appointment is for a term of six years and shall take effect on the day after the current term expires.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MS. OAKAR

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Ms. OAKAR: Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That, in accordance with section 5581 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (20 U.S.C. 43), the vacancy on the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, in the class other than Members of Congress, occurring by reason of the expiration of the term of Murray Gell-Mann of California, is filled by reappointment of the incumbent for a term of six years, effective August 30, 1986.

Ms. OAKAR (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

AUTHORIZING THE FRANCIS SCOTT KEY PARK FOUNDATION, INC., TO ERECT A MEMORIAL IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 2370) to authorize the Francis Scott Key Park Foundation, Inc., to erect a memorial in the District of Columbia, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] to explain the bill.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to sponsor a resolution which would authorize establishment of a memorial to honor Francis Scott Key. I would like to commend my distinguished colleague from Alaska, Senator FRANK MURKOWSKI, for introducing S. 2370, the Senate companion bill.

Many Americans have paid tribute to our great Nation while singing the verses of the Star-Spangled Banner. Few, however, know much about the man who wrote the inspiring poem, "The Defence of Fort McHenry," which was put to music and adopted as our national anthem in 1931. His work provides an inspiration to Americans by symbolizing the potential in each of us to make voluntary and extraordinary contributions to our country.

Francis Scott Key was a young lawyer from Washington, DC. In 1814, while on a mission of mercy in which he freed an aging physician captured by the British, Key was arrested. All night long while under guard, he witnessed "the bombs bursting in air" over Fort McHenry. Early the next morning he saw our Star-Spangled Banner was still flying—signaling the defeat of the British. Key was very moved by the sight of our flag, and captured that historic moment with his stirring words which every patriotic American knows. This memorial would publicly honor and recognize the contribution that Francis Scott Key has made to our national heritage.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] for his work on this issue.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I concur in all that the gentlewoman has said, especially her thanking me.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ABERCROMBIE). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2370

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. That the Francis Scott Key Park Foundation, Inc. is authorized to erect a memorial on public grounds in the District of Columbia in honor and in commemoration of Francis Scott Key, the author of the words to "The Star Spangled Banner", our National Anthem, who lived and practiced law in Washington, District of Columbia at the time he penned those immortal words.

SEC. 2. (a) The Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to select, with the approval of the Commission of Fine Arts and the National Capital Planning Commission, a suitable site on public grounds in the District of Columbia upon which may be erected the memorial authorized in the first section of this Act.

(b) The design and plans for such memorial shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the Commission of Fine Arts, and the National Capital Planning Commission.

(c) Neither the United States nor the District of Columbia shall be put to any expense in the establishment of the memorial.

SEC. 3. The authority conferred by this Act shall lapse unless (1) the erection of the memorial is commenced within five years from the date of enactment of this Act, and (2) prior to groundbreaking for the actual construction on the site funds are determined available in an amount sufficient, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, to insure completion of the memorial.

SEC. 4. If the site for the memorial authorized herein shall be on public grounds belonging to or under the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia, the words "Mayor of the District of Columbia" shall be substituted for the words "Secretary of the Interior" at each place in sections 2 and 3 of this Act where the words "Secretary of the Interior" appear.

SEC. 5. In the event that the memorial authorized herein is erected on Federal lands in the District of Columbia and its environs as defined in H.R. 4378, as approved by the House of Representatives on September 29, 1986, such memorial shall be required to comply with the provisions of that Act.

SEC. 6. If the memorial erected under the provisions of this Act is on public grounds belonging to or under the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia, the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall be responsible for the care and maintenance of the memorial.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 2370, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

JUDICIAL HOUSEKEEPING ACT OF 1986

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 5674) to amend title 28, United States Code, with respect to the composition of, and places of holding court in, certain judicial districts, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, would the gentleman explain the purpose of his request?

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORHEAD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to respond to the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5674, The Judicial Housekeeping Act of 1986 contains items which have the support of both the Department of Justice and the Judicial Conference of the United States.

Section 1 of the bill consists of H.R. 4942, by Mr. DERRICK. This bill would amend section 121 of title 28, United States Code, by creating a Beaufort Division in the District of South Carolina and designating Beaufort as the place of holding court of the new district. A similar Senate bill, S. 2396, by Senator THURMOND, is pending. The Charleston Division currently serves the counties of Beaufort, Berkeley, Charleston, Clarendon, Colleton, Dorchester, Georgetown, and Jasper. This bill would transfer Beaufort and Jasper Counties from the Charleston Division to the new Beaufort Division, in the District of South Carolina. At present, the people of Jasper and Beaufort Counties must travel to Charleston to have access to the U.S. District Court, resulting in inconvenience and unnecessary expense in seeking redress in this court. In addition, the County Council of Beaufort County has agreed to deed or lease, without charge to the United States, the current Beaufort County Courthouse as a suitable location for the Federal court.

The Department of Justice supports this change. Both the District Court for the District of South Carolina and the Judicial Council for the Fourth Circuit have approved the establishment of the new division and designation of Beaufort as the place of holding court.

Section 2 of the bill contains the provisions of H.R. 3284, by Mr. THOMAS, and H.R. 4095, by Mr. ROWLAND and Mr. BARNARD. These bills would amend section 90(a) of title 28, United States Code, by transferring within the Southern District of Georgia the counties of Evans, Screven, and Tattinal from the Savannah Division of the Statesboro Division and Jefferson County from the Statesboro Division to the Augusta Division. This provision also has the support of the judiciary and the executive branch.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Further reserving the right to object, I have no objection whatsoever to the bill as it is presently constituted, but I would like to remark that I am very disappointed that a measure by the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER], to create a new district in the State, the area to the south of the central district of California, in Riverside, Orange, and San Bernardino Counties, was rejected by the Judicial Conference. At the present time the central district of California is about twice as large as the next largest district in the United States. But I understand that with the opposition that was presented we could not do anything but withdraw that provision from the legislation this year. But I would hope that it would get further consideration next year and that the Judicial Conference and the Attorney General's Office would take greater consideration of the issue.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield on the question briefly?

Mr. MOORHEAD. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. I thank the gentleman for yielding further.

I would say I appreciate his reservations about our inability to include a new judicial formulation for that district in southern California. We have written, as the gentleman knows, very strong report language on the point, so I would assume that next year we will have the attention of both the administration and the Judicial Conference on this important question.

I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MOORHEAD. I thank the gentleman, and, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

(1) A survey of domestic and foreign buyers of grain to identify the information about grain characteristics that would be most useful to such buyers. The survey shall take into account those factors that buyers specify in contracts, test for, measure, or would measure if tests were available, including—

(A) the starch, oil, and protein content, breakage susceptibility, and individual kernel moisture of corn;

(B) the baking characteristics, protein content, gluten content and quality, and milling hardness of wheat; and

(C) the protein, oil, and free-fatty-acid content of soybeans.

(2) A review of the development and availability of tests for the characteristics identified in the survey conducted under paragraph (1), including an evaluation of the costs of providing such tests.

(b) END-USE TESTS.—

(1) ONGOING REVIEW.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall direct the Federal Grain Inspection Service and the Agricultural Research Service to maintain an ongoing review to determine the end-use tests that are of economic value to buyers, and the availability and costs of such tests.

(2) REVISION OF PROCEDURES.—The Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service, to the extent practicable, shall revise official grain inspection and certification procedures to include within official inspection (as defined in section 3(i) of the United States Grain Standards Act (7 U.S.C. 75(i))) those tests that are identified under the study conducted under subsection (a) as useful, available, and economically feasible.

(c) REPORTS.—

(1) STUDY AND REVISION OF PROCEDURES.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service shall submit a report to Congress setting forth the results of the study conducted under subsection (a) and actions taken under subsection (b)(2).

(2) ONGOING REVIEW.—The Administrator shall report yearly to Congress on the ongoing review conducted under subsection (b)(1).

TITLE IV—FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Processed Products Inspection Improvement Act of 1986".

SEC. 402. PURPOSE.

The amendments made by this title are in furtherance of the findings made by Congress in section 2 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 602).

SEC. 403. AMENDMENTS TO FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION ACT.

(a) MANNER AND FREQUENCY OF INSPECTION.—Effective only during the 6-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, section 6 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 606) is amended by striking out "That for the purposes" and all that follows through "Provided, That" and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a)(1) For the purposes set forth in the preceding provisions of this Act, the Secretary shall cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, an examination and inspection of meat food products prepared for commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment.

"(2) Such examination and inspection shall be conducted with such frequency and in such manner as the Secretary considers necessary, as provided in rules and regulations issued by the Secretary, taking into account such factors as the Secretary considers to be appropriate, including—

"(A) the nature and frequency of the processing operations at such establishment;

"(B) the adequacy and reliability of the processing controls and sanitary procedures at such establishment; and

"(C) the history of compliance with inspection requirements in effect under this Act, by the operator of such establishment or anyone responsibly connected with the business (as described in section 401(g)) that operates such establishment.

"(b)(1) All such products found by any of such inspectors and by the operator of such establishment to be not adulterated shall be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as 'Inspected and passed'.

"(2) All such products found by any of such inspectors or by the operator of such establishment to be adulterated shall be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as 'Inspected and condemned'. Each such condemned product shall be destroyed for human food purposes. The Secretary may suspend inspection at, and remove inspectors from, any establishment that fails to so condemn adulterated meat food products or fails to so destroy condemned meat food products.

"(c) For purposes of any examination and inspection, such inspectors shall have access to every part of an establishment at all times, by day or night, and without regard to whether such establishment is operated.

"(d) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this section,".

(b) ENFORCEMENT METHODS.—Effective only during the 6-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, section 401 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 671) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after the section designation;

(2) in the first sentence—

(A) by striking out "applicant, for" and inserting in lieu thereof "applicant for";

(B) by striking out "any felony, or (2)"; and

(C) by inserting before the period at the end thereof "or (2) any felony";

(3) in the second sentence—

(A) by indenting the first word so as to create a new paragraph; and

(B) by inserting "(f)" before the first word;

(4) by inserting "(g)" before the first word of the third sentence;

(5) in the fourth sentence—

(A) by striking out "The" and inserting in lieu thereof "(h) Except as provided in subsection (e)(2), the"; and

(B) by striking out "this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (e)"; and

(6) by inserting after subsection (a), as so designated by paragraph (1) of this subsection, the following new subsections:

"(b)(1) On the request of the Secretary at the time of the sentencing of an individual who is a person responsibly connected with any business requiring inspection under title I and who is convicted of a felony involving—

"(A) the intentional adulteration of food (except as defined in section 1(m)(8));

"(B) the adulteration of food, as defined in section 1(m)(8), with intent to defraud;

"(C) bribery; or

the sentencing court shall issue a temporary order forbidding such individual to exercise operational control of, or to be physically present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I if the court finds that the exercise of operational control by, or the presence of, such individual at any such establishment either poses a direct and substantial threat to the public health or safety or, if such individual is convicted of a felony described in subparagraph (B), poses a clear likelihood of significant economic harm to consumers.

"(2) Such order shall terminate—

"(A) whenever the Secretary determines by order, after a hearing on the record, whether such individual should exercise operational control of, or be physically present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I, and judicial review, if any, of such determination is completed; or

"(B) 90 days after the issuance of such temporary order by the court if the Secretary does not commence such hearing before the expiration of such 90 days; whichever occurs earlier.

"(c) Any determination and order of the Secretary issued under subsection (a) or (b) shall be conclusive and enforceable unless the affected applicant for, or recipient of, inspection service or the affected individual files, not later than 30 days after the effective date of such order, a petition for review of such order in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or the court of appeals for the circuit in which the relevant establishment is doing business. Judicial review of such order shall be on the record on which the determination and order are based.

"(d)(1) Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary may commence a civil action in an appropriate court, as provided in section 404, to withdraw inspection service under title I with respect to any establishment or to prevent any individual responsibly connected with any business requiring inspection under title I from exercising operational control of, or being present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I.

"(2) If the court finds, on the basis of clear and convincing evidence, that the recipient of inspection service or such individual has repeatedly failed to comply with the requirements of this Act, or the rules and regulations issued under this Act, in a manner that poses a direct and substantial threat to the public health or safety, the court shall issue an order—

"(A) withdrawing inspection at such establishment; or

"(B) forbidding such individual to exercise operational control of, or to be physically present at, such establishment, for such period as the court determines is necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"(3) Not less than 90 days, and not more than 450 days, before commencing a civil action under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall provide to each recipient of inspection service, and each individual responsibly connected with the business, with respect to which such action is commenced, a written notice that includes—

"(A) a statement that the Secretary intends to commence such action;

"(B) a comprehensive description of the violations of this Act and the regulations issued under this Act alleged by the Secretary; and

"(C) a description of the actions the Secretary considers necessary to be taken by such recipient or such individual to comply with this Act and to eliminate the need to commence such civil action.

"(e)(1) The Secretary may temporarily withdraw inspection service under title I with respect to any establishment for such period as is necessary to ensure the safe and effective performance of official duties under this Act if the Secretary determines, after an opportunity for a hearing on the record, that an officer, employee, or agent of such establishment—

"(A) threatened to forcibly assault;

"(B) forcibly assaulted;

"(C) forcibly intimidated; or

"(D) forcibly interfered with, an employee of the United States engaged in, or on account of, the performance of any of such official duties.

"(2)(A) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary may temporarily suspend inspection service under title I with respect to any establishment, pending an expedited administrative hearing on the record and judicial review of the order of the Secretary based on such record, if the Secretary determines that temporary suspension of such inspection service is necessary for the safety of any employee who performs official duties under this Act.

"(B) If the Secretary receives, before or after temporarily suspending such inspection service in accordance with subparagraph (A), adequate written assurances from the recipient of inspection service, or the individuals involved, that the conduct or circumstances that threatened the safety of such employee will not continue or recur, the Secretary may continue or restore such inspection service on condition that such assurances are fulfilled.".

(c) WARNING; REPORTING OF VIOLATIONS.—Effective only during the 6-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, section 406 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 676) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In determining whether the public interest could be adequately served by a written notice of warning, the Secretary shall take into account, among other factors—

"(1) the compliance history of such establishment;

"(2) the magnitude of the violation;

"(3) whether compliance with this Act would likely be obtained as a result of such notice; and

"(4) whether such violation is of a minor or technical nature."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Unless the Secretary by regulation provides otherwise, before any violation of this Act is reported by the Secretary for prosecution in a criminal proceeding, the Secretary shall give the person alleged to have committed such violation—

"(1) reasonable notice that the Secretary intends to report such violation for prosecution; and

"(2) an opportunity to present to the Secretary, orally or in writing, views with respect to such proceeding.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) NIGHTTIME.—Effective only during the 6-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, section 9 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 609) is amended by inserting ", except as provided in section 6," after "equines, and" the first place it appears.

(2) ADMINISTRATION.—Effective only during the 6-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, section 21 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 621) is amended by striking out "and meat food products" and inserting in lieu thereof "thereof, and of meat food products".

(e) CONSTRUCTION OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by this section shall not be construed to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to refuse to provide inspection under the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) at an establishment solely because such establishment does not participate in a total plant quality-control program.

SEC. 404. SAVINGS PROVISION.

The expiration date provisions of section 403 shall not have the effect of releasing or extinguishing any penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred under the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), as amended by section 403, or under the rules or regulations issued under such Act.

SEC. 405. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture should—

(1) carry out a program to detect residues in livestock that are subject to inspection under title I of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.); and

(2) evaluate the feasibility of, and develop, a program that would enable the Secretary to trace any particular livestock that are subject to inspection under title I of the Federal Meat Inspection Act, in order to identify the producer of such livestock.

SEC. 406. ANNUAL REPORT.

Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Agriculture shall submit to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate a report describing—

(1) any action proposed or taken by the Secretary to implement the amendments made by section 403;

(2) any action proposed or taken by the Secretary to carry out a program to detect residues in livestock that are subject to inspection under title I of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.);

(3) any action proposed or taken by the Secretary to evaluate the feasibility of, and develop, a program that would enable the

Secretary to trace any particular livestock that are subject to inspection under such title, in order to identify the producer of such livestock; and

(4) any personnel action proposed or taken by the Secretary as a result of the amendments made by section 403 and any effort made by the Secretary to minimize any adverse economic effect of such amendments on employees of the Department of Agriculture.

SEC. 407. CONGRESSIONAL REEVALUATION.

It is the sense of Congress that, not later than 6 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, Congress shall—

(1) evaluate the operation and effects of the amendments made by section 403, for the purpose of determining whether to extend or modify the operation of such amendments; and

(2) enact such legislation as may be necessary to efficiently and effectively carry out the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601 et seq.).

SEC. 408. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.

(a) GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, this title and the amendments made by this title shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) TEMPORARY APPLICATION OF EXISTING LAW.—Sections 6, 9, and 21 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 606, 609, and 621), as in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall apply with respect to establishments until the Secretary of Agriculture first issues rules and regulations to implement the amendments made by section 403(a).

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4613) to reauthorize appropriations to carry out the Commodity Exchange Act, and to make technical improvements to that Act, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

TITLE I—FUTURES TRADING

(1) OPTIONS TRANSACTIONS

The House bill will strike out the current text of section 4c(c) of the Commodity Exchange Act, which imposes certain restrictions on the conduct of commodity option transactions and provides for a pilot program in the trading of agricultural options. In lieu of the current text of section 4c(c), the House bill will substitute a new text that will require the Commodity Futures Trading Commission—within 90 days after enactment of the bill—to issue regulations to—

(a) eliminate the pilot status of the program for the trading of commodity options on contract markets, including any numerical restrictions on the number of commodities or options contracts for which a contract market may be designated; and

(b) otherwise continue to permit the trading of such commodity options under such terms and conditions that the Commission, from time to time, may prescribe. (Sec. 3.)

The Senate amendment contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. (Sec. 102.)

(2) EXTRATERRITORIAL SERVICE OF SUBPENAS

Both the House bill and the Senate amendment will give the Commodity Futures Trading Commission the power to serve subpenas on persons outside the territorial jurisdiction of United States courts to compel their attendance at Commission inquiries. The House bill provides that an extraterritorial subpena could be issued only on the prior approval of the Commission. (Sec. 4; Sec. 102.)

The Senate amendment does not contain a similar provision making the issuance of such subpenas subject to Commission prior approval.

The conferees intend that the Commission not routinely serve subpenas abroad. It is further the intention of the conferees that the Commission, when exercising its authority to serve subpenas, take into consideration the implications of such service on the broader foreign policy objectives of the United States. The conferees expect the Commission to find means of obtaining information in a way that seeks to avoid offending other nations and to consult with representatives of the receiving nation through the Department of State with a view toward minimizing any perceived intrusion on the sovereignty of that nation, where practicable and appropriate.

The conferees expect that the Commission's authority will parallel the current authority of the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission in serving civil investigative demands abroad. It is the intent of the conferees that the Commission's use of subpena power abroad be limited to the pre-complaint, investigatory stage of enforcement proceedings. The courts and the Commission are bound by the Due Process Clause of the Constitution and this limitation would be a factor in any subpena enforcement proceeding.

(3) REAUTHORIZATION PERIOD

The House bill will authorize appropriations to carry out the Commodity Exchange Act during each of the 3 fiscal years ending with the 1989 fiscal year. (Sec. 7.)

The Senate amendment will authorize such appropriations for each of the 6 fiscal years ending with the 1992 fiscal year. (Sec. 402.)

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. (Sec. 106.)

(4) REGISTERED FUTURES ASSOCIATIONS—DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS AND MEMBERSHIP RESTRICTIONS

(a) Notice of action

The House bill will require any registered futures association that takes a disciplinary action against one of its members or a person associated with a member or bars a person from membership or being associated with a member to promptly give notice of the action to the person involved and file notice of the action with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. (Sec. 8.)

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision except that it specifically mentions only for filing of the notice with the Commission. (Sec. 301.)

(b) Review of disciplinary action

Both the House bill and the Senate amendment contain a provision relating to review by the Commission of registered futures association disciplinary actions against its members or persons associated with members. In any such review, the Commission either must affirm the disciplinary action (with modifications possible) or remand the case to the association for further proceedings if certain specified findings are made. If any of the findings are not made, the disciplinary sanction must be set aside. The review hearing before the Commission could consist solely of consideration of the record before the association and the presentation of reasons to affirm, modify, or set aside the disciplinary sanction.

The specified findings to be decided by the Commission are the same in both bills except in one instance, as follows:

The House bill will require a decision on a finding that the person enaged in, or omitted, the acts the association has found the person to have engaged in or omitted. (Sec. 8.)

The Senate amendment will require a decision (on the basis of the record in the proceeding before the association and such other matters as might be presented to the Commission) on such finding as to whether the person engaged in, or failed to engage in, the acts or practices involved in the case. (Sec. 302.)

(c) Review of denial of membership or bar of association

The House bill provides that, in a proceeding to review the denial of membership in a registered futures association or the barring of association with a member of a registered futures association, if the Commission finds that—

(a) the specific grounds for denial or bar exist in fact;

(b) the denial or bar is in accordance with the association's rules; and

(c) such rules are and were applied in a manner consistent with the Commodity Exchange Act;

the Commission must so declare and affirm or modify the action of the association, or remand the case to the association for further action. (Sec. 8.)

The Senate amendment is similar, except that the Commission has authority to dismiss the proceeding for review if the standards set out in the House bill are satisfied, rather than affirm the association action from which the appeal was taken. (Sec. 302)

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. (Sec. 107.)

(5) LEVERAGE TRANSACTIONS

The House bill will rewrite section 19 of the Commodity Exchange Act, which provides the statutory framework for separate regulation of the leverage business. Under the House bill—

(1) all leverage contracts except gold and silver bullion, bulk coins, and platinum contracts would be prohibited. (NOTE.—Under current law, leverage contracts on agricultural commodities are specifically prohibited; and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission is authorized to prohibit any leverage transaction on a commodity not permitted by Commission rules in effect on December 9, 1982, if the transaction would be contrary to the public interest);

(2) the entry of new firms into the leverage business would temporarily be prohibited until a survey and report relating to the industry (described below) are completed and regulations (to be included in the report) to permit new entrants are issued;

(3) the Commission would be required to conduct (with the assistance of a registered futures association) a survey concerning firms interested in entering the leverage business, and to report to Congress within 2 years on—

(a) the results of the survey;

(b) whether leverage transactions serve an economic purpose;

(c) the most efficient manner, consistent with the public interest, to permit new entrants into the business; and

(d) the appropriate leverage regulatory scheme to ensure financial solvency and prevent manipulation or fraud;

(4) the report would have to include regulations to govern the leverage business, which—

(a) must provide for permitting additional firms to enter the business;

(b) could provide for a registered futures association to perform leverage regulatory functions; and

(c) could provide for permitting new entrants into the business on a gradual basis, so as not to place an undue burden on the Commission;

(5) the regulations (described above) would have to go into effect at the end of 45 days of congressional session after they are transmitted to Congress; and

(6) rights and obligations arising out of leverage contracts entered into prior to enactment of the bill would not be affected by the changes in section 19 of the Act made by the bill. (Sec. 10.)

The Senate amendment would repeal section 19 of the Commodity Exchange Act and make several conforming changes in the Act, effective 2 years after the date the bill is enacted. (NOTE.—Under section 19, leverage transactions in agricultural commodities are prohibited; no person can enter into leverage transactions in gold or silver bullion or coins that are contrary to any Commission rule, regulation, or order designed to ensure the financial solvency of the transactions or prevent manipulation or fraud; the Commission is required to regulate leverage transactions in authorized commodities under terms and conditions prescribed by rule, regulation, or order (with different terms and conditions permitted for different commodities); and the Commission is authorized to prohibit any leverage transaction not permitted under Commission rules in effect on December 9, 1982, if the transaction would be contrary to the public interest.)

Under the Senate amendment, leverage transactions would no longer be under the Commission's exclusive jurisdiction and the Commission would cease being required or authorized to regulate leverage transactions as a distinct form of commodity instrument. (Secs. 201–208.)

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision with an amendment changing the period of congressional review of the regulations contained in the Commission's report on leverage from 45 days to 90 days. (Sec. 109.)

(6) TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

The Senate amendment would make a number of technical corrections to the Community Exchange Act. These corrections would—

(a) correct a reference to the Securities and Exchange Commission;

(b) correct spelling and punctuation errors;

(c) correct a reference to "advance guaranty";

(d) correct a reference to a section of the Act; and

(e) repeal a section of the Act that is obsolete. (Sec. 403.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 110.)

STUDY OF CATTLE FUTURES TRADING

The House bill requires the House Committee on Agriculture, in cooperation with land grant institutions and others, to carry out a study of the trading in contracts for cattle for future delivery to determine—

(a) the economic purpose of such trading;

(b) whether such trading is being manipulated; and

(c) the economic effect of such trading on cattle producers and the beef industry.

If the study reveals that there is manipulation of trading in contracts for cattle for future delivery and that the manipulation has adverse effects on cattle producers or the beef industry, the House Committee on Agriculture must report legislation that will prevent the adverse effects in the future. (Sec. 11.)

The Senate amendment requires the Comptroller General to conduct and complete a comprehensive study of the effect of trading in contracts for the future delivery of live cattle on the cash market price of live cattle, with emphasis on—

(a) whether the reaction of the live cattle futures market to the whole-herd dairy buyout program in March 1986 was based on and accurately reflected the then prevailing conditions of supply and demand;

(b) the effect that the trading in live cattle futures has on—

(i) the price relationship between feeder cattle and fed cattle;

(ii) the price discovery process for live cattle; and

(iii) price competition within the cattle industry;

(c) the effect of the use of packer contracts, as a means of obtaining slaughter cattle, on the increase in short hedging and the effect of this increase in short hedging on prices in the futures and cash markets;

(d) the effect on the ability of cash markets to reflect supply and demand if packer contracts become the prevalent method of marketing fed cattle;

(e) whether the present delivery system for futures contracts on live cattle creates (1) any bias (upward or downward) in the cash price for cattle or (2) price volatility during the delivery month; and

(f) whether there are advantages or disadvantages to the use of a system of cash settlement for futures contracts on live cattle, instead of the present system of delivering live cattle to fulfill such contracts.

Within 1 year after the date of enactment of the bill, the Comptroller General must submit a detailed report on the results of this study to the House Committee on Agriculture and the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry. A preliminary report must be submitted to both committees by January 15, 1987. (Sec. 404.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 111.)

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(8) MARKETING PRACTICES AND TRAINING

(a) Marketing practices of FmHA loan applicants and borrowers

The Senate amendment requires the Comptroller General to conduct a study of the marketing practices used by Farmers Home Administration loan applicants and borrowers. The study must include an examination of the channels through which these individuals sell their produce and the extent to which they use advanced marketing techniques.

The Comptroller General must submit a report describing the results of the study to the House Committee on Agriculture and the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the bill. (Sec. 405(a).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision with an amendment changing the date by which the Comptroller General must submit his report to Congress from 180 days after date of enactment to 1 year after date of enactment. (Sec. 206(a).)

(b) Advanced marketing training

The Senate amendment provides that the Secretary of Agriculture may establish a program to train farmers and ranchers in advanced produce marketing techniques, including training in the use of futures and options markets. (Sec. 405(b).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 206(b).)

(9) TRANSFER OF LAND

The Senate amendment would require the Secretary of Agriculture to transfer approximately 173 acres of National Forest System land to the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, such land to be incorporated into an existing State park. Title to the land will revert to the United States if the land is not used as park land; the United States will reserve to itself all gas, oil, coal, and other mineral rights in the land. The transfer would be without consideration, except that the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission must pay the reasonable costs of administration, survey, and appraisal that are connected with the transfer. (Sec. 406.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 207.)

The conferees emphasize that the adoption of the Senate provision does not indicate a change in the underlying forestry statutes and congressional policy requiring payment of fair market value or an equal value exchange. The special circumstances involving a transfer to a State game and parks commission for a public purpose, with reverter, and the fact that the tract is bounded on three sides by existing State park land, warrant the action taken in this instance by the conferees.

(10) SUGAR QUOTA, COUNTRIES INVOLVED IN ILLEGAL NARCOTICS TRADE

(a) Administration of sugar quota

The Senate amendment prohibits the President of the United States, notwithstanding any other provision of law, from allocating any sugar import quota to any country (1) whose Government is involved in the trade of illicit narcotics or is failing to cooperate with the United States in narcotics enforcement activities, as determined by the President; or (2) that imports sugar produced in Cuba, as determined by the President.

The Senate amendment requires the President to use all authorities available that are necessary to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to operate the sugar price support program at no cost to the Federal Government by preventing the accumulation of sugar acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The Senate amendment requires the President, subject to the foregoing restrictions, to allocate any calendar year 1987 sugar import quota among foreign countries to ensure that the total quantity of sugar to be imported by the United States from each "beneficiary country" during calendar year 1987 is not less than the total quantity of sugar imported from such country during quota year 1986. The sugar comprising the base for the 1986 quota year must have been produced in the "beneficiary country".

The term "beneficiary country" is defined as having the same meaning as contained in the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act, and includes the Republic of the Philippines, and the Republic of Ecuador. (Sec. 407(a).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(NOTE.—Current law requires the President to use all authorities available that are necessary to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to operate the sugar price support program at no net cost to the Federal Government by preventing the accumulation of sugar acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation. In addition, the President, is prohibited from allocating any of the sugar import quota to any country that is a net importer of sugar derived from sugarcane or sugar beets unless the appropriate officials of that country verify to the President that that country does not import any sugar produced in Cuba for reexport to the United States. (7 U.S.C. 1446 note))

The Conference substitute deletes the Senate provision.

(b) Congressional findings

The Senate amendment contains congressional findings that the Republic of the Philippines (1) has been a reliable supplier of sugar to the United States; (2) has a special historical relationship with the United States and has been a constant and dependable ally of the United States; (3) relies on the exportation of sugar to generate needed capital; (4) has not been afforded fair and adequate access to the United States sugar market since import quotas were imposed on sugar in 1982; and (5) should be given access to the United States sugar market on terms at least as favorable as those provided to any other country. (Sec. 407(b).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute deletes the Senate provision.

(c) Allocation of sugar quota to the Republic of the Philippines

The Senate amendment provides that the total base quota amount of sugars, syrups, and molasses imported into the United States under headnote 3, subpart A of part 10 of schedule 1 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States must be allocated on such basis that the quota allocated to the Republic of the Philippines may not be less than the quota allocated to any other country.

The Senate amendment provides that during any calendar year in which sugars, syrups, and molasses from any country are not subject to any rate of duty provided for in subpart A of Part 10 of schedule 1 of the Tariff Schedules of the United States and are permitted to enter the United States duty-free, sugar, syrups, and molasses from the Republic of the Philippines must be permitted to enter duty-free to the same extent.

The Senate amendment prohibits, unless specifically authorized by statute, any agency or instrumentality of the United States from providing in any rule, regulation, shipping schedule, or otherwise, for the entry into the United States of sugars, syrups, and molasses from any country under terms or conditions more favorable than those applicable to the entry of sugars, syrups, and molasses from the Republic of the Philippines. (Sec. 407(c).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute deletes the Senate provision.

(11) CROSS COMPLIANCE FOR PRODUCERS OF EXTRA LONG STAPLE COTTON

The Senate amendment would amend paragraph (16) of section 103(h) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 to provide that—

(a) for the 1987 and 1988 crops of extra long staple cotton, the Secretary of Agriculture my not require compliance with the terms and conditions of the extra long staple cotton program as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, or payments made under any other commodity program; and

(b) for the 1989 and 1990 crops of extra long staple cotton, the Secretary of Agriculture may require that, as a condition of eligibility for the extra long staple cotton program, the acreage planted for harvest on the farm to any other commodity for which an acreage limitation program is in effect shall not exceed the crop acreage base established for the farm for that commodity. (Sec. 501.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(12) LOCAL AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION AND CONSERVATION COMMITTEES

The Senate amendment would amend the fifth paragraph of section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act to make explicit that there may be one local agricultural stabilization and conservation administrative area in any county for which there had been established less than three such areas as of December 23, 1985. (Sec. 502.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provisions. (Sec. 204.)

(13) VALENCIA PEANUTS

The Senate amendment would amend section 108B(4)(A) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 to provide that distributions of net gains to producers on additional Valencia peanuts produced in New Mexico and placed in a separate pool for such peanuts will not be reduced by Commodity Credit Corporation losses on quota peanuts that are placed under loans from other pools. (Sec. 503).

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 203.)

(14) BASIS FOR COMPUTATION OF EMERGENCY COMPENSATION UNDER THE 1986 WHEAT PROGRAM

(a) Compensation

The Senate amendment would amend section 107D(c)(1)(E)(ii)) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 to provide that, for the 1986 crop of wheat, the payment rate per bushel for emergency compensation would be determined on the basis of the weighted average market price, per bushel, received by producers during the first 5 months of the marketing year. (Sec. 504(a).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(NOTE.—Under current law, the payment rate per bushel for emergency compensation is based on the weighted average market price, per bushel, received by producers during the full marketing year.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 202.)

(b) Producer option

For the 1986 crop of wheat, wheat producers could elect to have any emergency payment due them calculated and paid according to the provision in current law or the provision to be added by the Senate amendment. Those producers choosing to have their payments calculated and paid under the provisions in current law would have to notify the Secretary of Agriculture of their choice by December 1, 1986. (Sec. 504(b).)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute deletes the Senate provision.

(15) ELIGIBILITY OF CERTAIN LAND UNDER THE CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM

The Senate amendment would amend section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985 to provide that, for purposes of the Conservation Reserve Program, alfalfa and other multiyear grasses and legumes, in rotation as approved by the Secretary, must be considered agricultural commodities. (Sec. 505.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 205.)

The conferees agree that any land made eligible for the Conservation Reserve Program by this amendment must meet the same actual soil loss criteria as cropland that is eligible under the current program. The Conservation Reserve Program is designed to convert highly erodible cropland that is currently suffering from severe erosion problems to less intensive uses. This amendment should not be implemented in a way that would prove detrimental to that goal.

TITLE III—GRAIN QUALITY IMPROVEMENT

(16) GRAIN QUALITY IMPROVEMENT

Title VII of the Senate amendment contains provisions that may be cited as the "Grain Quality Improvement Act of 1986."

The House bill contains no provisions comparable to title VII of the Senate amendment. However, the House of Representatives has passed a bill, H.R. 5407, that has the same short title and contains comparable provisions. In the description of differences that follows, the House position, as contained in H.R. 5407 as passed by the House, is noted parenthetically.

(a) Policy statement

The Senate amendment will revise the United States Grain Standards Act declaration of policy to add statements that it is the policy of Congress to promote the marketing of high quality grain; that the primary objective of official United States grain standards is to accurately determine grain quality; and that the grain standards must provide a framework for the markets to establish grain quality improvement standards. (Sec. 702.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 2 of H.R. 5407 is the same as the Senate provision.)

(b) Prohibition of recombination of dockage and foreign material

The Senate amendment will add a new provision to the Grain Standards Act, effective May 1, 1987, to prohibit (1) the recombination of dockage or foreign material, as defined by the Secretary of Agriculture, with grain, and (2) the addition of dockage or foreign material to grain. The Senate amendment also will require the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct a study to determine the appropriate levels of dust in grain to be exported. Based on the results of such study, the Secretary would have to establish a maximum tolerance for dust in grain to be exported and issue regulations applicable to the recombination of dust with grain. (Sec. 703.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 3 of H.R. 5407 contains the same provisions as the Senate amendment relating to the new prohibitions, except that it also will specifically prohibit the recombination of dust with grain. It contains no provision relating to a study of dust in export grain.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision with an amendment deleting the study of dust levels and the provision requiring the Secretary to set a maximum tolerance for dust in grain to be exported. (Sec. 303.)

(c) Exceptions

The Senate amendment provides that the prohibition against recombination or addition of dockage of foreign material will not apply to—

(1) the treatment of grain to suppress, destroy, or prevent insects and fungi injurious to stored grain;

(2) the marketing, domestically or for export, of dockage or foreign material removed from grain when such dockage or foreign material is marketed (A) separately and uncombined with whole grain or (B) in pelletized form or as a part of a processed ration for livestock, poultry, or fish;

(3) the blending of grain with similar grain of a different quality to adjust the quality of the resulting mixture;

(4) the recombination of broken corn or broken kernels, as defined by the Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service, with grain of the type from which the broken corn or broken kernels were derived;

(5) effective for the period ending December 31, 1987, the recombination of dockage or foreign material, removed at an export loading facility from grain destined for shipment as a cargo under one export inspection certificate when (A) the recombination occurs during the loading of the cargo, (B) the purpose is to ensure uniformity of dockage or foreign material throughout that specific cargo, and (C) the separation and recombination are conducted in accordance with regulations issued by the Administrator; and

(6) the addition to grain of a dust suppressant, or the addition of confetti or any other similar material in an amount necessary to facilitate identification of ownership or origin of a particular lot of grain.

Further, the Secretary of Agriculture would be permitted to exempt from the prohibitions, by regulation, the last handling of grain in the final sale and shipment of grain to a domestic user or processor when the exemption is determined by the Secretary to be in the best economic interest of producers, grain merchants, the industry involved, and the public. Grain sold under such an exemption must be consumed or processed into one or more products by the purchaser and could not be resold into commercial channels for grain or blended with other grain for resale. Also, products or byproducts derived from such grain could not be blended with or added to grain in commercial channels. (Sec. 703.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 3 of H.R. 5407 contains the same provisions as the Senate amendment, except that—

(1) with respect to the exception for export cargoes described in clause (5) of the analysis of the Senate provision, H.R. 5407 would not extend the exception to the recombination of dust, once it is removed from grain;

(2) H.R. 5407 contains an exception to the prohibitions in addition to the six listed in the analysis of the Senate provision, as follows: Any other addition of any foreign material determined by the Secretary to be in the interest of grain producers and to be neutral or constructive in achieving the goal of ensuring the quality of grain marketed in or exported from the United States;

(3) under H.R. 5407, the exemption of the last handling of grain from the prohibitions would expire December 31, 1987; and

(4) also with respect to the last handling of grain, the byproducts exception to the exemption (which will prohibit the blending, with grain, of products or byproducts derived from grain after it is last handled) would be made subject to the provision in H.R. 5407—but not in the Senate amendment—described in clause (2) above, that gives the Secretary authority to provide other exemptions from the prohibitions.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision with amendments—

(1) adding the words "except dust" to the provision providing that, effective only for the period ending December 31, 1987, the prohibition against the recombination of dockage or foreign material will not apply if the dockage or foreign material is removed at an export loading facility from grain destined for shipment as a cargo under one export official certificate of inspection and the recombination is carried out subject to the restrictions in the Senate amendment; and

(2) authorizing the blending of vegetable oils with grain that is in commercial channels for the purpose of suppressing grain dust. (Sec. 303.)

(d) Insect infestation

The Senate amendment will require the Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service, not later than 6 months after the bill is enacted, to issue a final rule that revises grain inspection procedures and standards under the United States Grain Standards Act to more accurately reflect levels of insect infestation. (Sec. 704.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 5 of H.R. 5407 is the same as the Senate provision.)

(e) Grain premium study

The Senate amendment will require the Secretary of Agriculture, in consultation with farmers and members of the grain industry, to make a study of the feasibility of adjusting the Commodity Credit Corporation grain premium and discount schedules to encourage the delivery, storage, and export of high quality grain. The results of the study would have to be reported to the House Committee on Agriculture and the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry within 180 days after the enactment of the bill. (Sec. 705.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 6 of H.R. 5407 is the same as the Senate provision.)

(f) Grain grading proposal

The Senate amendment will require the Secretary of Agriculture to publish and seek public comment on proposals contained in a pending House bill, H.R. 5354, the Optimal Grain Grading Act of 1986. The Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service would be required to report to Congress, by May 1, 1987, on comments received and his recommendations with respect to the matters on which comments were solicited. (Sec. 706.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 7 of H.R. 5407 is the same as the Senate provision.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 306.)

(g) Uniform end-use value tests

The Senate amendment will direct the Department of Agriculture to study the need for and availability of uniform end-use tests for grain. Where tests are found to be useful, available, and economically feasible, the Federal Grain Inspection Service would be directed to adopt them as far as practicable. The Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service will have to submit a report to Congress, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the bill, setting forth the results of the study and actions taken by the Service to adopt helpful end-use tests. Further, the Secretary would report annually to Congress on his ongoing review of end-use tests. (Sec. 707.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision. (NOTE.—Section 8 of H.R. 5407 is the same as the Senate amendment.)

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 307.)

TITLE IV—FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION

(17) FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION

Title VI of the Senate amendment contains provisions that may be cited as the "Processed Products Inspection Improvement Act of 1986."

The House bill contains no provisions comparable to title VI of the Senate amendment.

(a) Findings

The Senate amendment provides that the amendments made by title VI to the Federal Meat Inspection Act ("the Act") are in furtherance of the findings in section 2 of the Act. (NOTE.—The findings in section 2 of the Act include statements that meat and meat food products are important sources of the Nation's total supply of food; it is essential and in the public interest that consumers be assured of wholesome meat and food products; articles regulated under the Act are in or affect interstate commerce; and regulation under the Act is appropriate to prevent burdens on interstate commerce and protect consumers.) (Sec. 602)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 402).

(b) Examination and inspection

The Senate amendment amends section 6 of the Act to require the Secretary of Agriculture to cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, in examination and inspection of meat food products prepared for commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment. (NOTE.—Current law requires the Secretary to cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, an examination and inspection of all meat food products prepared for commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment.)

The Senate amendment also adds a new provision to section 6 of the Act to require that the examination and inspection be conducted with the frequency and in the manner as the Secretary deems necessary and provides in rules and regulations, taking into account factors that the Secretary deems appropriate, including the—

(1) nature and frequency of processing operations at the establishment;

(2) adequacy and reliability of processing controls and sanitary procedures at the establishment; and

(3) history of compliance with inspection requirements under the Act by operator or anyone responsibly connected with the business (as described in subsection (g) of section 401 of the Act) that operates the establishment. (NOTE.—The Senate amendment will designate the third sentence of current section 401 as subsection (g) thereof. That sentence provides that a person is deemed to be responsibly connected with a business if he is a partner, officer, director, holder, or owner of 10 percent or more of its voting stock, or an employee in a managerial or executive capacity.) (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(c) Inspection

The Senate amendment modifies section 6 of the Act to provide that all products found by the inspectors, if any, and by the operator of the establishment not to be adulterated must be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as "inspected and passed"; and all products found by any inspector or the operator to be adulterated must be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as "inspected and condemned". All condemned products must be destroyed for human food purposes. The Secretary can suspend inspection at, and thereby remove inspectors from, any establishment that fails to condemn adulterated meat food products or fails to destroy condemned meat food products. For purposes of any examinaton and inspection, inspectors must have access to every part of an establishment at all times, by day or night, and without regard to whether the establishment is operated. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(d) Technical amendments

The Senate amendment makes technical amendments to section 401 of the Act to designate subsections and conform its provisions to the amendments in the Senate amendment. The first sentence of section 401 would be designated as subsection (a), the second and third sentences as subsections (f) and (g), and the fourth and fifth sentences as subsection (h). The provisions of the fourth and fifth sentences (finality of determinations and review) would be made to apply to new subsection (e), to be added.

The Senate amendment also amends section 401 of the Act by adding new subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e). (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 403.)

(e) Consequences of felony conviction

The Senate amendment amends section 401 of the Act to add a new subsection (b) providing that, on the request of the Secretary at the time of sentencing of an individual who is responsibly connected with any business requiring inspection under title I of the Act and who is convicted of a felony involving—

(1) the intentional adulteration of food (except as defined in section 1(m)(8) of the Act;

(2) the adulteration of food, as defined in section 1(n)(8) of the Act, with intent to defraud;

(3) bribery; or

(4) extortion;

the sentencing court must issue a temporary order forbidding the individual to exercise operational control of, or to be physically present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I, if the court finds that the exercise of operational control by, or the presence of, the individual at the establishment poses a direct and substantial threat to the public health or safety or, if the individual is convicted of a felony for the adulteration of food (as defined in section 1(m)(8) of the Act) with the intent to defraud, poses a clear likelihood of significant economic harm to consumers. (Sec. 603.)

(NOTE.—Section 1(n)(8) of the Act currently provides that the term "adulterated" will apply to any carcass, part thereof, meat or meat food product if any valuable constituent has been in whole or in part omitted or abstracted therefrom; or if any substance has been substituted, wholly or in part therefore; or if damage or inferiority has been concealed in any manner; or if any substance has been added thereto or mixed or packed therewith so as to increase its bulk or weight, or reduce its quality or strength, or make it appear better or of greater value than it is.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(f) Time limitation on temporary order

The Senate amendment provides that the order must terminate on the earlier of (1) the point at which the Secretary determines by order, after a hearing on the record, whether the individual should exercise operational control of, or be physically present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I of the Act, and judicial review, if any, of the determination is completed; or (2) 90 days after the issuance of the temporary order by the court if the Secretary does not commence a hearing on the determination within 90 days. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 403.)

(g) Petition for review

The Senate amendment amends section 401 of the Act to add a new subsection (c) providing that any determination and order of the Secretary issued under subsection (a) (existing law) or (b) (described above) will be conclusive and enforceable unless the affected applicant for, or recipient of, inspection service or the affected individual files, not later than 30 days after the effective date of the order, a petition for the review of the order in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, or in the court of appeals for the circuit where the relevant establishment is doing business. Judicial review of the order must be on the record on which the determination and order are based. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(h) Civil actions

The Senate amendment amends section 401 of the Act to add a new subsection (d) enabling the Secretary to seek court orders against persons and establishments, in addition to taking direct action against establishments under subsection (a) or against persons convicted of certain felonies under subsection (b). Subject to the limitation described below, the Secretary may commence a civil action in an appropriate court, as provided in section 404 of the Act, to withdraw inspection service under title I with respect to any establishment or to prevent any individual responsibly connected with any business requiring inspection under title I from exercising operational control of, or being present at, any establishment requiring inspection under title I.

The Senate amendment provides that if the court finds, on the basis of clear and convincing evidence, that the recipient of inspection service or the individual connected with the recipient has repeatedly failed to comply with the requirements of the Act, or the regulations thereunder, in a manner that poses a direct and substantial threat to the public health or safety, the court must issue an order withdrawing inspection at the establishment or forbidding the individual to exercise operational control of, or to be physically present at, the establishment, as petitioned for under the provision described above, for a period that the court deems necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act.

The Senate amendment provides that not less than 90 days, and not more than 450 days, before commencing the civil action described above, the Secretary must give to each recipient of inspection service, and each individual responsible connected with the business, with respect to which such action is commenced, a written notice that includes a statement that the Secretary intends to commence the action, a comprehensive description of the violations of the Act and the regulations thereunder alleged by the Secretary, and description of the actions the Secretary considers necessary to be taken by such recipient or individuals to comply with the Act to eliminate the need to commence the civil action. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 403.)

The conferees note that this provision constitutes extraordinary authority to withdraw inspection or to suspend a responsibly connected individual and should be sought and granted only when it is warranted. What constitutes a direct and substantial threat is a factual question to be addressed on a case-by-case basis by a Federal district court.

In a proceeding filed under this provision, the conferees intend that the Secretary would have the burden of establishing, by clear and convincing evidence, both that the establishment or individual has repeatedly failed to comply with the Act and that the past noncompliance and likelihood of future noncompliance pose a direct and substantial threat to the public health. Regarding whether or not the conduct is repeated, attention should be given not only to the number of times the alleged violation has occurred, but also the amount of time between violations and whether there has been a substantial improvement in compliance prior to commencement of the action. Regarding whether the noncompliance poses a direct threat to the public health, the focus should be on whether there is a risk to public health that would directly flow from the alleged violation.

This provision also specifies that withdrawal or suspension should be for the period necessary to protect the public health. The conferees intend that the exact period of time be substantially a question within the discretion of the district court.

(i) Withdrawal of inspection service

The Senate amendment adds a new subsection (e) to section 401 providing that the Secretary may temporarily withdraw inspection service under title I of the Act with respect to any establishment for a period necessary to ensure the safe and effective performance of official duties under the Act if the Secretary determines, after an opportunity for a hearing on the record, that an officer, employee, or agent of the establishment threatened to forcibly assault, forcibly assaulted, forcibly intimidated, or forcibly interfered with an employee of the United States engaged in, or on account of, the performance of any official duty. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision (Sec. 403.)

(j) Temporary suspension

The Senate amendment provides that the Secretary may temporarily suspend inspection service under title I with respect to any establishment, pending an expedited administrative hearing on the record and judicial review of the order of the Secretary based on the record, if the Secretary determines that temporary suspension of inspection service is necessary for the safety of any employee who performs official duties under the Act. If the Secretary receives, before or after temporarily suspending such inspection service, adequate written assurances from the recipient of inspection service, or the individuals involved, that the conduct or circumstances that threatened the safety of the employee will not continue or recur, the Secretary may continue or restore inspection service on the condition that the assurances are fulfilled. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 403.)

(k) Secretarial discretion

The Senate amendment amends subsection (b) of section 406 of the Act by adding a new provision to specify that, in determining whether the public interest could be adequately served by a written notice of warning (in lieu of criminal prosecution under subsection (a) of section 406), the Secretary must take into account, among other factors—

(1) the compliance history of the establishment;

(2) the magnitude of the violation;

(3) whether compliance with the Act likely would be obtained as a result of the notice; and

(4) whether the violation is of a minor or technical nature. (Sec. 603.)

(NOTE.—Currently, subsection (b) states that nothing in the Act can be construed as requiring the Secretary to report for prosecution or for the institution of libel or injunction proceedings, minor violations of the Act whenever the Secretary believes that the public interest will be adequately served by a suitable written notice of warning.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

(l) Notice

The Senate amendment amends section 406 of the Act by adding a new subsection (c) to provide that, unless the Secretary by regulation provides otherwise, before any violation of the Act is reported by the Secretary for criminal prosecution, the Secretary must give the person alleged to have committed the violation reasonable notice that the Secretary intends to report such violation for prosecution, and an opportunity to present to the Secretary, orally or in writing, views with respect to the proceeding. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 403.)

(m) Conforming amendments

The Senate amendment makes conforming amendments to sections 9 and 21 of the Act, and provides that the amendments to the Act made by the Senate amendment will not be construed to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to refuse to provide inspection under the Act at an establishment solely because the establishment does not participate in a total plant quality-control program. (Sec. 603.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. (Sec. 403.)

(n) Sunset

The Senate amendment, effective 6 years after the date of enactment of the bill, amends sections 6, 9, 21, 401, and 406 of the Act to read, respectively, as the sections read immediately before the date of enactment of the bill. The effect of the provision is to "sunset" the amendments to the Act to be made by the bill in 6 years.

The Senate amendment contains a savings provision that states that the sunset provisions will not have the effect of releasing and penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred under the Act, as amended, or regulations issued thereunder. (Sec. 604.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision making the amendments to sections 6, 9, 21, 401, and 406 effective for 6 years. (Secs. 403, 404.)

(o) Detection of residues

The Senate amendment provides that it is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture should carry out a program to detect residues in livestock that are subject to inspection under title I of the Act, and evaluate the feasibility of, and develop, a program that would enable the Secretary to trace any particular livestock that are subject to inspection under title I to identify the producer of the livestock. (Sec. 605.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 405.)

(p) Report to Congress

The Senate amendment provides that, not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of the bill and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Agriculture must submit to the House Committee on Agriculture and the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry a report describing any action proposed or taken by the Secretary—

(1) to implement the amendments made by title VI;

(2) to carry out a program to detect residues in livestock that are subject to inspection under title I of the Act;

(3) to evaluate the feasibility of, and develop, a program that would enable the Secretary to trace any particular livestock that are subject to inspection under title I in order to identify the producer of the livestock; and

(4) regarding personnel, as a result of the amendments made by title VI, plus any effort made by the Secretary to minimize any adverse economic effect of the amendments on employees of the Department of Agriculture. (Sec. 605.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision (Sec. 406.)

(q) Congressional evaluation

The Senate amendment requires Congress, not later than 6 years after the date of enactment of the bill, to evaluate the operation and effects of the amendments to the Act made by title VI, for the purpose of determining whether to extend or modify the operation of the amendments, and enact legislation necessary to efficiently and effectively carry out the Act. (Sec. 607.)

The House bill contains no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute incorporates the substantive points of the Senate provision. (Sec. 407.)

(r) Effective date

The Senate amendment provides that, except as specifically provided, the amendment to the Act made by title VI will take effect on the date of enactment of the bill. The Senate amendment provides that section 6, 9, and 21 of the Act, as in effect immediately before the date of enactment of the bill, will apply with respect to establishments until the Secretary first issues regulations as provided in the amendment made by section 603. (Sec. 608.)

The House bill contains no comparable provisions.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. (Sec. 408.)

REQUEST TO CONCUR IN SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 4899, PATENT EQUITY ACT

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4899) to amend title 35, United States Code, with respect to patented processes and the patent cooperation treaty, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, strike out all including line 1 over to and including line 25 on page 4 and insert:

TITLE 1—PATENTED PROCESSES

SEC. 101. This title may be cited as the "Process Patent Amendments Act of 1986."

SEC. 102. (a) Section 154 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "United States," the following: "and, if the invention is a process, of the right to exclude others, to the extent provided in section 271(a)(2), from using or selling products produced thereby throughout the United States, or importing products produced thereby into the United States,".

(b) Section 271 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after "(a)";

(2) adding at the end of subsection (a), the following:

"(2) If the patented invention is a process, whoever without authority uses or sells within, or imports into, the United States during the term of the patent therefor a product produced by such process, infringes the patent. A product will no longer be considered to have been produced by a patented process once it has been materially changed by subsequent steps or processes.".

(c) Section 287 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking out "Limitation on damages" in the section heading and inserting in lieu thereof

"Limitation on damages and other remedies";

(2) inserting "(a)" before "Patentees,"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) An infringer under section 271(a)(2) shall be subject to all of the provisions relating to damages and injunctions set forth in this title except to the extent that those remedies are limited by this subsection or section 3. The limitations or remedies set forth in this subsection shall not be available to any party who—

"(A) engaged in the actual practice of the patented process;

"(B) is owned or controlled by the party who engaged in the actual practice of the patented process;

"(C) owns or controls the party who engaged in the actual practice of the patented process;

"(D) having made a request for disclosure as provided in subsection (b)(5), fails to notify its supplier of patents identified in response to the request and to instruct its supplier to refrain from infringement of such patents; or

"(E) had knowledge prior to the infringement that a patented process was used to produce the product whose importation, use, or sale constituted the infringement.

"(2) No damages shall be recovered by the patentee unless the infringer had notice of the infringement and continued to infringe thereafter. Damages may be recovered only for infringement that occurred after notice of infringement.

"(3) No remedy may be obtained during the eighteen months after the date of notice for retail sales of a normal volume of products in inventory or on order at the time of notice, obtained from a party in the United States who did not use the patented process, provided the retailer discloses to the patentee, within 30 days from notice, the identity and location of the party from whom the products were purchased. Normal quantity of products in inventory and on order shall be determined by previous business practices, and could include units of a product ordered prior to notice and received within a period not to exceed eighteen months after notice.

"(4) The remedy for the importation, use, or sale of units of the infringing product ordered prior to notice and imported, used, or sold in a manner consistent with the normal business practices of the infringer during the six months after the date of notice shall be limited to a reasonable royalty. The limitation in this subparagraph shall not be available to any party who failed to make a request for disclosure, as defined in subparagraph (5), of the party asserting infringement or its licensee.

"(5)(A) For purposes of this paragraph, a 'request for disclosure' means a written request made to a party then engaged in the manufacture of a product to identify all process patents owned or licensed to that party as of the time of the request that could reasonably be asserted to be infringed under section 271(a)(2) if that product were imported into, or sold or used in, the United States by an unauthorized party. A request for disclosure is further limited to a request—

"(i) made by a party regularly engaged in the sale of the same type of products as the party to whom the request is directed, or a request which includes facts showing that the requester plans to engage in the sale of such products; and

"(ii) made prior to such party's first importation, use, or sale of units of the product produced by an infringing process and prior to notice of infringement.

"(B) In any action where the infringer made a request for disclosure from the party asserting infringement and the infringed patent was not identified within 60 days, the remedy for the importation, use, or sale of units of the infringing product which are imported, used, or sold by the infringer in a manner consistent with the normal business practices of the infringer during the eighteen months after the date of notice shall be limited to a reasonable royalty.

"(C) For the purposes of the limitations on remedies in this subsection—

"(i) no party may make more than one request for disclosure of the same party for the identification of process patents for producing a particular product; and

"(ii) no party who had received the benefit of the limitations of this paragraph or paragraph (4) with respect to the infringement of one process patent shall be entitled to that benefit in the event of a subsequent infringement of any process patent for producing the same product owned by the same patentholder at the time of the first infringement.

"(6) For the purposes of the remedy limitations in subsection (b), notice of infringement means actual knowledge, or receipt of notification, that a product was produced by a patented process without authorization of the patentee. A notification shall constitute notice of infringement only if it is in writing and sets forth facts which are sufficient to establish that there is a substantial likelihood that the product was made by the infringing process. Filing an action for infringement shall constitute notice of infringement only if the pleadings or other papers filed in the action meet the requirements of a notification.".

(d) The table of sections for chapter 29 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by amending the item relating to section 287 to read as follows:

"287. Limitations on damages and other remedies; marking and notice.".

SEC. 103. (a) This title and the amendments made by this title shall apply only to products produced or imported after the date of enactment, and shall not abridge or affect the right of any persons or their successors in business to continue to use, sell or import any specific product already in substantial and continuous sale or use in the United States on July 1, 1986, or for which substantial preparation for such sale or use was made before such date, to the extent equitable for the protection of commercial investments made or business commenced in the United States before such date.

(b) This title and the amendments made by this title shall not deprive a 'patent' owner of any other remedies available under section 271 of title 35, United States Code, section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, or any other provision of law.

SEC. 104. Beginning on the date one year after the date of enactment of this title and each year for 4 additional years thereafter, the Department of Commerce shall submit an annual report to the Congress on the effect of this title and the amendments made by this title, on the importation of ingredients to be used for manufacturing products in the United States in those domestic industries that submit formal complaints to the Department alleging that their legitimate sources of supply have been adversely affected.

SEC. 105. (a) Chapter 29 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 295. Presumption: product produced by patented process

"In actions alleging infringement of a process patent based on use, sale, or importation of a product produced by the patented process, if the court finds (1) that a substantial likelihood exists that the product was produced by the patented process and (2) that the claimant has made a reasonable effort to determine the process actually used in the production of the product and was unable so to determine, the product shall be presumed to have been so produced, and the burden of establishing that the product was not produced by the process shall be on the party asserting that it was not so produced.".

(b) The table of sections for chapter 29 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 294 the following:

"295. Presumption: product produced by patented process.".

Mr. KASTENMEIER (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the chairman of the subcommittee, does this bill contain the magistrate retirement provisions that it previously did?

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORHEAD. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3004, the "Criminal Justice Act Revision of 1986." The Criminal Justice Act (18 U.S.C. 3006A) provides for representation of criminal defendants, material witnesses, and others—including probationers and parolees—in Federal court proceedings, when the defendants and others cannot afford to pay for representation. I am pleased that the gentleman from California and ranking minority member of the subcommittee, Mr. MOORHEAD, has joined me in cosponsoring the legislation, which was introduced at the request of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

The legislation is primarily an updated version of H.R. 4307, the "Criminal Justice Act Revision of 1984," which was reported favorably by the Committee on the Judiciary (H. Rept. 98-764) and passed the House without objection on May 21, 1984. Although H.R. 4307 was not acted on by the other body during the 98th Congress, some revision of the Criminal Justice Act was contained in the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984, Chapter XIX, Comprehensive Crime Control Act, Public Law 98-473, which doubled the hourly rates—to $40 for out-of-court representation and $60 for in-court representation—and increased the case maximum rates. Although the 1984 amendment was a step in the right direction, more comprehensive revision of the Criminal Justice Act is necessary. During this Congress, further modifications were incorporated into a new bill, H.R. 3004. H.R. 3004 was approved by the House Judiciary Committee on November 19, 1985, by voice vote without any objections. It passed this body on December 9, 1985, by suspension. H.R. 3004 was approved on October 6, 1986, by the other body with an amendment relating to the Criminal Justice Act and to the retirement and recall of certain judges and magistrates.

I think that the portion of the amendment of the other body relating to the Criminal Justice Act is reasonable although if we had more time we would have conferenced some of the differences. The Senate amendment retains current law authorizing hourly rates of up to $40—out of court—and $60—in court—for representation under the CJA Act. We would have had a single rate of $50 per hour. H.R. 3004 and the Senate amendment thereto allow payment up to $75 per hour if the Judicial Conference determines a higher rate is justified for a particular district or circuit. The Senate amendment has lower general case maximums than we did, but these maximums can be waived by the chief judge of the circuit or his delegate. The new general maximums would be $3,500 for a felony, $1,000 for a misdemeanor, $2,500 for appeals, and $750 for other cases. These are modest increases over current law. The Senate amendment makes other changes to the Criminal Justice Act but none are controversial, and many are technical changes suggested by the Judicial Conference.

The Criminal Justice Act legislation has wide support from the National Association of Former U.S. Attorneys, the American Bar Association, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, and the Federal Public and Community Defenders, as well as from the Judicial Conference. I know of no opposition to H.R. 3004.

I urge my colleagues to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment to H.R. 3004. The legislation will improve the criminal justice system.

RETIREMENT AND RECALL OF CERTAIN JUDGES AND MAGISTRATES

The Senate amendment to H.R. 3004 adds a provision relating to the retirement and recall of certain judges and magistrates. The Senate amendment to the House bill provides for the recall of U.S. magistrates who have retired. The ability of the courts to recall magistrates will provide additional flexibility for the courts to cope with increasing caseloads and will retain the wisdom and experience of these senior judicial officers in service to the courts. Similar authority already exists to recall bankruptcy judges and judges of the U.S. Claims Court.

The amendment also provides for an alternative system for the recall of magistrates, bankruptcy judges, and judges of the Claims Court. The nature of judicial service is not conveniently quantifiable in statistical terms such as hours on the bench or number of cases decided. Substantial service may be provided by presiding over long hearings such as were generated in the Continental Airlines bankruptcy case or by reviewing in chambers the records and briefs associated with numerous Social Security appeals. Current provisions for the recall of a retired bankruptcy judge or Claims Court judge, however, effectively require these officers to "punch a time clock" for the first time in their judicial careers. During the hours that the judge is working, the amount of the retirement annuity is deducted from the judge's pay, with the result that the judge provided full-time service for part-time pay. Moreover, there is no guarantee that a judge will be recalled for more than one assignment, creating uncertainty as to the amount of income the judge can anticipate. The result has been that judges tend to remain on the bench longer or leave to practice law and the pool of available "recalled" bankruptcy and Claims Court judges has been very limited.

The amendment improves the situation by providing an assured period of recall service for 5 years upon certification by the pertinent circuit judicial council, or the chief judge of the Claims Court, that "substantial service" will be performed during that period. During the 5 years, the judge or magistrate will receive the difference between the retirement annuity and the salary of the position as compensation for the services rendered and for forgoing the practice of law so as to remain available for assignments. The judge or magistrate will be available for service in any judicial district should there not be sufficient need in the district served while in active status. The Judicial Conference of the United States is authorized to promulgate regulations to implement this new system and safeguard against its abuse.

In conclusion, I would urge that this body concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, H.R. 3004, with the Senate passed amendment covers two issues. One, is that it contains amendment to the Criminal Justice Act relating to fees for attorneys appointed by the court for defendants in criminal cases, and Two, retirement of U.S. magistrates and Court of Claims.

The House would have raised the hourly rate of compensation under the Criminal Justice Act from $40, out of court, and $60, in court, to a flat $50 with no distinction. This would have saved the court some paperwork and would have been fairer, in my opinion. The Senate amendment retains the current law with the $40/$60 distinction, but includes the House language allowing the Judicial Conference to determine what, if any, districts or circuits should have their hourly rate raised up to $75. Senate amendment is reasonable and will cost the taxpayer about $4.5 million less than the House bill would. I urge support for the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

There was no objection.

ATTORNEYS AND THE FAIR DEBT COLLECTION PRACTICES ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, on July 9, legislation repealing the attorney exemption to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act became law. That legislation, which I introduced, requires that attorneys in the debt collection business comply with the law that protects consumers against abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices. The legislation was a direct response to the explosive growth in the number of law firms that had entered the debt collection business and were abusing the exemption the original Fair Debt Collection Practices Act provided. With the repeal of the exemption, attorneys in the debt collection business must comply with the act when they collect consumer debts.

The proliferation of attorney collectors has grown dramatically over the past several years, and an estimated 5,000 attorneys are now involved in debt collection. Repeal of the exemption was intended to place attorney collectors and lay collectors on an equal footing. It ensures that attorneys use fair debt collection tactics. It ensures that lay collectors, who are required by the act to refrain from using abusive tactics, are not competitively disadvantaged by the act.

Ethical attorneys need have no concerns about the impact of the act on their practice. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act regulates debt collection, not the practice of law. Congress repealed the attorney exemption to the act, not because of attorney's conduct in the courtroom, but because of their conduct in the backroom. Only collection activities, not legal activities, are covered by the act.

Not all attorneys are covered by the act. It does not apply to the collection of commercial debts. It applies only to those attorneys whose business has the principal purpose of the collection of debts or who regularly collect or attempt to collect dues to third parties. Attorneys, like any other persons who only irregularly or occasionally collect debts, are not covered.

Some attorneys have claimed that the act will restrict their ability to practice law. Nothing could be further from the truth. The act applies to attorneys when they are collecting debts, not when they are performing tasks of a legal nature.

Suggestions that the repeal of the attorney exemption prohibits bringing legal action is an absurd reading of the act. The act only regulates the conduct of debt collectors, it does not prevent creditors, through their attorneys, from pursuing any legal remedies available to them.

Actions which can only be taken by those possessing a license to practice law are outside the scope of the act. The filing of a complaint is not covered by the act. Since it is not covered under the act, there is no requirement that attorneys include the notices required under section 809 of the act in legal filings. Further, there is no requirement that the attorney must provide verification of the debt as required under that section of the act in the context of legal proceedings. Since the attorney will be required to prove the validity of the debt as an element of the legal proceedings, there is no need to require additional validation.

Repeal of the attorney exemption does not infringe upon the practice of law by attorneys. It does assure that consumers are protected from unfair and unethical debt collection practices, regardless of the profession of the collector.

GORBACHEV ADDRESS CARRIED LIVE ON CABLE TV

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to point out in all of the fallout—pardon the expression—from Iceland that, while Secretary Shultz was meeting in the Foreign Affairs Committee room with those Members who have an intense interest with this whole ongoing arms process, Mr. Gorbachev was speaking live for 1 hour, uninterrupted on the Soviet evening news. They do not have a 7 o'clock and an 11 o'clock news situation as we have in the United States; they have one major news program at 9 o'clock. So just as President Reagan spoke to us last night, General Secretary Gorbachev was speaking to his nation.

The unique facet of Mr. Gorbachev's 1-hour address giving a twisted, in my viewpoint, the Soviet view of what took place in Iceland was that it was carried in this country coast to coast live by Cable Network News.

Of course, nothing will be seen of Mr. Reagan in the Soviet Union giving his views of what transpired in Iceland. But here in the United States on the Eastern Seaboard from 2 to 3 o'clock, uninterrupted by one solitary commercial message, an instant simulcast of General Secretary Gorbachev talking though 11 time zones to the gigantic land mass of the Soviet nation, their 15 so-called republics, and talking at 11 o'clock in the morning California time, or 9 o'clock in the morning in Hawaii, to every single American who is wired to cable television.

I am not criticizing Cable Network News. I would not have it any other way. I actually had to tear myself away from what Mr. Gorbachev was saying to go over and hear our Secretary of State talk to us Members of Congress in a private session in the Foreign Affairs Room.

But it just gives Americans a little different appreciation of what you can do in a closed society, the Soviet Union, and what can happen in the free world. By cable, I am sure Mr. Gorbachev's speech was available to Europe. Although they are about a decade behind us in sophistication of reaching out with political messages to all of their people or the carrying live gavel-to-gavel of both the Senate and the Congress of the United States to anyone who avails themself of wiring into a cable system, we are placed through our love of freedom and liberty at a disadvantage.

One other thing that I wanted to comment on here was that I was unable, because of Mr. Shultz' appearance, to help us in the Congress understand what was going on in Iceland. I had wanted to speak today toward the Korean War Memorial that I am happy to say was passed by voice vote in this House this afternoon.

This requires about $1 million of taxpayer money which the Vietnam Memorial did not. However, there has never been an example in this country of skipping over one conflict where 33,629 Americans gave the full devotion of their love of country. Dying from the freezing cold of the Chunchon Reservoir all the way down to the tip of Korea to fight all the way back to the Yalu and then be pushed back down to a quite different 38th Parallel than the one that existed on June 25, 1950, when the Communist troops decided to attack the forces of the United Nations along that 38th Parallel.

I believe that it is fitting and proper that this country should memorialize those veterans of the Korean war. I never heard this expression "Korean era veteran," or "Vietnam era veteran," until we started seeing veterans' groups formed with only political objectives in mind, most of them attacking Reagan. Then suddenly all the Vietnam veterans were spread out and called era veterans, which would certainly have included me. Since I was about to enter pilot training when the Korean war ended, I have never been a Korean vet although I would never describe myself as such because I never served in Korea under combat conditions.

As someone who was in training, about to go to pilot training, looking forward to flying an airplane that I eventually flew, the F-86 Sabre, willing to defend the freedom of South Korea, I do have a vested interest since it was men just 1 or 2 years older than me who died in that Korean effort that started out as a police conflict and certainly ended up as a war that had almost as many combat casualties as World War I, my father's war.

We must find a proper site somewhere in this great city of ours to give equal respect to those young men and women who died facing communism on the Peninsula of Korea as we have engraved their names on that black marble that brings tears to so many peoples' eyes giving respect to the over 58,039, and that figure will grow as more and more missing in action are transferred over to the killed in action list. That Vietnam Memorial is the most visited site in Washington, DC, of any memorial. I believe that it was a peculiar, a weird oversight that we passed over all our heroes from the Korean conflict.

I would ask my colleagues to join me on a letter to President Reagan asking that one of our Members who saw combat duty as an F-84 Thunderjet pilot in the Korean conflict, was almost killed when his plane was shot down by a Mig and it jammed the canopy railing. He was unable to bail out. He crashed into powerlines, tore off the wings, the tail; only the cockpit section was left, and it rolled into the mud in a rice paddy and popped off the canopy and he stepped out with a Purple Heart from the Mig gunshot wounds from schrapnel to his face. That Member is STAN PARRIS.

I think STAN PARRIS of northern Virginia should receive the encouragement of this House to be appointed by President Reagan to sit on that Korean War Memorial Commission so our interests are protected and that we know the House and the American people are represented through STAN on a proper memorial for our heroes from the Korean war.

THE HONORABLE VERMONT STATE SENATOR ARTHUR GIBB

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ABERCROMBIE). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to honor one of Vermont's most renowned legislators, State Senator Arthur Gibb, who is stepping down from State legislative service this year.

For more than two decades, since 1963, Art Gibb has served his constituents with exceptional care and skill—first in the Vermont House of Representatives and, for the last 8 years, in the Vermont Senate.

As a lawmaker, he has been a master of reconciliation—one of Vermont's great nonpartisan leaders who, while Republican, has long enjoyed the respect and attention of leaders from both major political parties. Art has never been a publicity seeker. Rather, he has been a lawmaker who, shunning publicity, has worked tirelessly and effectively for the protection of the environment and for the cause of conservation.

All of us here are well aware of the need for greater efficiency in bureaucracy, and we know what problems we encounter whenever possibilities arise over reorganizing that bureaucracy. Some years ago, Vermont set about reorganizing one of its own bureaucracies—its public service department and public service board, which oversee utilities. Of course, the usual happened: The negative forces that tend to fight any change were there. Yet today, the problems attendant to that change have been resolved and the process made far more workable. And the credit for that major achievement goes largely to Senator Gibb. Art, however, would be the last one to take credit for this, since he is a man who thinks first of his constituents and not the headlines that he might obtain.

A number of years ago, I had the opportunity to meet with many Vermonters who were involved in the passage of Act 250, Vermont's landmark environmental and land-use control law. The meeting was called to provide an oral history of the passage of Act 250. Art was a key figure in this history, since he had been chosen by then Gov. Deane Davis to sit on the Governor's Commission on Environmental Control in 1969, a formative year for Act 250.

With his characteristic zeal and dry humor, Art recounted for those at the oral history meeting how he and his wife, Barbara, decided to personally investigate the problems the State was encountering with land speculators who were attempting to literally steal Vermont right out from under Vermonters.

On one particular day while they were in Grand Isle County, he recalled, Art decided to send Barbara into a local land development office to meet with its high-pressure salesmen. Barbara, to quote Art, "played a dumb woman customer" and found herself receiving the fast and slick sales treatment. The experience gave both Barbara and Art a better insight into the way Vermont was being sold. This little extra effort helped Art formulate the policies that made Vermont an example for other States to follow in protecting the environment and quality of life. For this, all of us in Vermont owe Art a tremendous debt of gratitude for what he has done for us, for our children, and our children's children.

In recognition of his environmental efforts and his leadership as chairman of the Vermont Natural Resources and Energy Committee, in fact, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency chose Art just last December as one of only a handful of Americans to receive the Environmental Merit Award.

It is easy to dwell at length on Art Gibb's legislative endeavors, but his accomplishments outside the statehouse also are formidable. Art has frequently been recognized, for instance, for his many community contributions. His long list of civic involvements include the presidency of the board of the Porter Medical Center in Middlebury, VT, as well as 30 years on its board of trustees. He continues to lend his financial expertise to the hospital's fundraising efforts. He has spent many years as a Rotarian and has served as chairman of the Addison County Regional Planning Commission. Beyond his home county, Art also has served as director of the YMCA and, among other things, has contributed a great deal of time in Burlington, VT, as director of the Baird Children's Center, which serves orphaned and troubled children.

As a fellow captain in the Naval Reserves, I'd also like to take my listeners back in history for a moment to review Art's service in the Pacific during World War II. In the course of his distinguished Navy career, Art received the Bronze Star, the Presidential Unit Citation and no less than 10 battle stars. This courage and tenacity has continued to serve Art well throughout his professional career.

Yet Art has never allowed his demanding career and many responsibilities to alter his own lifestyle. Despite the many constraints on his time, he continues to manage his farm in Weybridge. And it is not unusual to see Art biking his way around his district, meeting with his constituents and hearing their concerns, while at the same time continuing his commitment to conservation and good health.

Finally, no testimony to Art Gibb would be complete without mentioning his lovely wife, Barbara, who has been his helpmate throughout. Not only has Barbara been at Art's side through the long legislative sessions all these years, but she has been—and continues to be—deeply involved in many civic organizations, including the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women.

Montpelier—Vermont's State capital—will sorely miss Art's unusual abilities as a legislator, a crafter of compromise. I am more than certain, however, that all of us in Vermont will continue to benefit from his wit, his intelligence, his commitment, and his grace for many, many years to come.

EPA'S EMERGENCY BAN ON PESTICIDE UNDERLINES NEED FOR WORKER PROTECTIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAYDOS] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker, just last week, Mr. Lee Thomas, Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency [EPA], issued an emergency ban on the use of dinoseb, a widely used pesticide, because it poses a very serious risk to the health of both farmers and farmworkers.

According to an article in the Washington Post, the ban has been instituted because recent studies indicated that exposures to the chemical in the field "pose a very serious risk of birth defects to the unborn children of pregnant women and a significant risk of sterility to male farmworkers."

Further, other studies indicated the exposure to dinoseb, which is acutely toxic and has caused several deaths, may also cause cancer, immune system damage, and cataracts.

As the chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and Safety, I commend Mr. Thomas for his order instituting this emergency ban on the use of dinoseb while he and EPA seek a permanent ban on its usage.

However, as the chairman of the subcommittee with direct jurisdiction over the health and safety of Americans in their workplace, whether those workplaces be a factory, an office, a hospital, or a farm, I have some serious concerns about our willingness to make the sacrifices necessary to save and protect the lives and well-being of those workers.

This emergency ban on dinoseb, for example, will prevent more than 25,000 workers—those who mix, load, and spray the pesticide as well as those who harvest the sprayed crop by hand in most cases—from exposure to this highly toxic substance. But what about those who have been exposed in the past? What about those exposed to some residual amounts of dinoseb?

Dinoseb has been in use since 1948, almost 40 years. It is the active ingredient in about 180 different pesticide products manufactured by 80 different companies. It has been estimated that between 7 million and 11 million pounds of this chemical have been applied annually in a number of different ways.

Products containing dinoseb are used on soybeans, cotton, potatoes, peanuts, and is registered for use on some four dozen other crops, including raspberries, nuts, pumpkins, and hops.

As we can see, dinoseb is a product with far-reaching implications for the health and safety of a great many workers. How many other substances, either combinations of chemicals or individual ones, are there that are also threatening the lives and well-being of our workers? How many American workers will have to die before we agree that products are dangerous and must be removed from the marketplace.

Also, what about the long-term effects of some of these products? Can we afford to wait for 10, 20 or more years in order to count the bodies before we decide to prohibit the use of these highly toxic materials?

It has estimated that in the United States today there are 5,000 to 6,000 manufacturing facilities producing chemicals and other toxic substances. It is also estimated that between 50,000 and 60,000 toxic substances are being used in a wide range of workplaces in a variety of industries.

And we do know that too many of these substances are highly toxic.

Methyl isocyanate, Mic, for example, is acutely toxic. We have already seen the results of an Mic spill. In Bhopal, India, some 2,000 people died as a result of direct exposure to Mic. What we don't know about Mic is whether those who were exposed and lived are going to contract some disease that may not become evident for another 5, 10, or 20 years as a result of that exposure.

We do know that as many as 100,000 workers die each year as a result of diseases directly related to their exposures to the wide range of substances that cause cancer, heart disease, and other ailments.

We do know that as many as 400,000 American workers are newly disabled each year by diseases directly related to exposures to hazardous and toxic substances.

We also know that farmworkers are far more likely to suffer from skin diseases and internal and parasitic illnesses at a far greater rate than other workers in our society because they are more directly exposed to chemicals and toxic substances with fewer opportunities to protect their own health.

For example, and I ask you seriously, can you think of any workplace in your district, be it a factory, an office, a hospital, or any other indoor location, that does not provide toilets, drinking water, and hand-washing facilities?

If you can, please tell me. I expect that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration [OSHA] would be very much interested in knowing it as well.

The chances are that you cannot think of such a place. And the chances are that there are very few indoor work locations that, by State law, are not required to provide those simple symbols of decency and good health.

Then, if I may ask, why are we denying these basic symbols of decency, dignity, and good health practices to our farmworkers?

Earlier this year, I introduced H.R. 4029, a bill to create a Federal standard for field sanitation. It wasn't the only such bill before the Congress, but it incorporated some elements other bills did not have.

[illegible]nt, 45 Members of the [illegible]reed to consponsor this [illegible] mind, that is hardly [illegible]port to insure the passage [illegible]mple, but important, meas-

[illegible]4029 was introduced because it [illegible]ing more apparent that the De-[illegible]tment of Labor—and by that I [illegible]ean Secretary of Labor Bill Brock as well as the leadership of OSHA—is not going to promulgate a Federal standard.

It is no longer likely or possible that H.R. 4029 will be passed this year. In fact, no Member of the Senate has even introduced a comparable measure.

So, now we are in a sort of limbo. In April 1987, Secretary Brock will decide whether or not the States have created a satisfactory crazy quilt of field sanitation rules and regulations so that a Federal standard won't be necessary.

Well, Mr. Secretary, I will tell you now that I plan to reintroduce my field sanitation bill. I plan to encourage as many Members as possible to join me as cosponsors.

And, should you decide that a Federal standard isn't necessary, I will move that bill forward.

There are those among my colleagues who will ask why a Federal standard is necessary. They will want to know why we can't allow the States, which seemingly know what's in their best interest, to develop standards to meet what they perceive as the needs in this area.

It's very simple. Worker health and safety, especially for a highly mobile or seasonal workers is best handled on a Federal basis. Why should a migrant worker who may work in California for a month or two before going on to Oregon and Washington be subjected to three different standards? Or, even worse, why should that worker be faced with working in a state that has no standard?

In previous special orders, I have discussed the status of Activity within the various States with respect to the implementation and development of field sanitation standards, so, in the interest of brevity, let me summarize.

As of mid-September, 19 States either had or had recently implemented standards. Those States are: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Maine, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

As of that same time, 12 States and Puerto Rico had agreed to develop standards. The States in this category are: Alaska, Hawaii, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and Washington.

In the final category, States not currently developing a standard, there are 18 States and the Virgin Islands. The States are: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Vermont, and West Virginia.

While it may be true that some of those States in the third category, such as Nevada and the Virgin Islands, have no workers engaged in hand harvesting and, therefore, really do not need a standard, other States in that category do have farmworkers to whom the standard would apply.

Without a Federal standard, workers doing hand harvesting in those States would be left out.

I know there are those among my colleagues who feel this bill has been unnecessary. They may even have worked for a period of time, during summers while in high school or college, picking crops and feel there was no imposition on them by not having toilet facilities available.

To them, I say that if they were doing it for a full-time occupation, they may think somewhat differently. It also depends on the kinds of harvesting being done. It is one thing to pick tree crops where it is always possible to duck behind another tree in an orchard. But when you are picking a field crop, generally a wide open space, there is more than just a little lack of privacy.

But, even if we forgo the issue of dignity and decency, we still have the concern about health.

A 1983 study in Indiana compared disease diagnoses for 2,570 migrant and seasonal farmworkers to 4,617 nonfarmworkers. There were 97 cases of eye problems among the farmworkers as compared to 25 for the nonfarmworkers. There were 107 cases of urinary tract infection among the farmworkers to 66 cases among the nonfarmworkers.

The same kinds of percentages stand for dermatitis and gastroenteritis. Of 164 total dermatitis cases, farmworkers had 117—just over 71 percent. Of 113 total cases of gastroenteritis, almost 78 percent—88 cases—involved farmworkers as compared to 25 cases among nonfarmworkers.

Studies in other States, notably Utah and Colorado, showed similar patterns and rates of illness and disease among migrant and seasonal farmworkers as compared to other populations that had not been exposed to pesticides.

Further, there is a wide range of communicable diseases that are transmitted among farmworkers, their spouses and children and others with whom they come in contact.

Many physicians and other public health personnel who work with migrant and seasonal farmworkers believe, and have testified, that the lack of toilets and, in particular, handwashing facilities has led to significantly higher rates of disease among those farmworkers.

Further, there is a higher rate of heat-related illnesses that result from a failure to provide sufficient amounts of drinking water in the fields.

I think it is interesting to note that EPA does have health and safety requirements for those people who mix, load, and spray the pesticides. These protective requirements include the wearing of goggles, boots, gloves, long pants, and long-sleeved shirts or coveralls, aprons in some cases, and respirators or dust masks.

On the other hand, those workers who are exposed to much of the pesticides through drift, when another field is being sprayed, or through handling fruit and vegetables on which residual amounts of the pesticide exist, are not covered at all.

There are those who might question the severity of exposure to such residual amounts of toxic substances, but, according to several studies, many of the toxic pesticides actually are more dangerous after a specified period of time than they are at the time of initial application.

Just 25 years ago, for example, 94 peach pickers in California, suddenly fell ill after working in orchards that had been sprayed with a common insecticide. Public health officials determined rather rapidly that the worst episodes occurred in orchards that had been treated as much as 5 weeks before the illness outbreak.

Further investigation by epidemiologists showed that as the initial insecticide degraded, it released a substance 55 times more toxic than the original formula when absorbed through human skin and that the secondary substance remains on the plant's leaves and branches for a long period of time, but did not exceed allowable standards in the food.

In other words, the tolerance levels set by law to protect consumers don't protect workers from exposure to foliage, soil, and other workplace sources.

For all we know, the same may well be true of thousands of workplace substances in use in our factories and offices as well as our fields.

It is becoming increasingly clear that we really have little information about the 50,000 to 60,000 chemical substances we produce and use in a wide variety of workplaces.

Hundreds of thousands of American workers are exposed to the many thousand toxic substances in the workplaces without really knowing what the future holds for them in terms of diseases and illness and, possibly disability and/or death.

The latency periods for so many of these diseases are as much as 10, 20, or even 40 years after the exposure, so it is sometimes almost impossible to backtrack the patient's history in order to determine a specific cause of the disease.

In part, that is why I introduced H.R. 1309, the High Risk Occupational Disease Notification and Prevention Act, in February 1985.

H.R. 1309, very simply stated, seeks to notify workers that, because of the period for which they have been exposed to a particular toxic substance, they are at high risk of getting a specific disease.

The worker populations that would be at risk would be identified by a newly established Risk Assessment Board in the Department of Health and Human Services.

The individual workers would be notified by the Secretary of HHS and by States and private employers, if the latter so chose to assume that responsiblility.

The workers, once notified, would be encouraged, but not forced, to enter into a program of medical monitoring for the specific disease or diseases for which they were being notified.

Employers would be responsible for the cost of providing the medical monitoring only to those current employees whose notification covered an exposure while in the employ of that employer.

In cases where a notified employee was exposed to the toxic material while working for someone else, the current employer would be required to provide for the medical monitoring, but could pass the cost of that program on to the employee.

Despite the claims of employer organizations and the current administration, I don't believe there is an enormous new burden being placed on the employers. I don't believe that the program we are establishing puts an inordinate burden on the Government.

And, with authorizations of only $25 million a year for each of the first 2 years, I don't believe this is the kind of budget-busting bill the opponents of H.R. 1309 say it is.

Actually, in the purest sense, both H.R. 1309 and H.R. 4029 are very cost-effective measures.

Both bills are aimed at preventing diseases that arise from workplace exposures and, in the long run, will reduce the burden to both the public health system and the private health system.

As we learn more about the effects of pesticides and other toxic substances in the workplace, we can take precautions. We can develop better and more effective engineering systems to reduce exposures. We can use alternative, less toxic substances in place of the more dangerous ones. We can develop new and better systems of personal protection. And we can reduce the acceptable exposure limits.

Each of those actions, individually, would result in great gains in the field of health and safety. A combination of two or more actions could result in the saving of untold thousands of lives of American working men and women.

Why are we waiting to save these lives? It has been a part of this country's ethic that a single life is important. We take a great many actions to reduce the carnage on our highways. We develop programs to prevent the use and misuse of alcohol and drugs. We insist that medicines and other doctor-prescribed drugs are tested, retested, and then tested again before we allow their sale.

Yet, we seem to be unconcerned about the health and safety of American workers. We see nothing wrong in exposing a worker to all manner of toxic materials, but feel no compunction to see to his well-being if an illness develops.

Employers, denying the rationale of workplace-induced or caused disease, point fingers at smog in the air, polluted drinking water, smoking, drinking, and a host of other red herrings as factors in illness.

I don't totally disagree with them, but we already know of the effects of exposures to some substances. We are learning more every day. I think it is in the best interests of the country to insure the health, safety, and well-being of the American worker, whatever the setting.

It is just as much the labor of the worker on the factory floor or in the office or in the field as it is the mental, physical, and financial effort of those in the boardrooms of America that has made America great. We owe our workers as much as we owe our business leaders, not less.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take my special order at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ABERCROMBIE). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

A TRIBUTE TO THE RETIRING MEMBERS OF THE MARYLAND DELEGATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special orders.

The SPEAKER pro
there objection to the r gentlewoman from Mary
There was no objection.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Spe pleasure to have this oppo speak at this special order in my distinquished colleague, the orable MARJORIE S. HOLT, U.S. Re
sentative of the Fourth Congressio
District of Maryland. Her record as a legislator is one to be admired. The achievements Mrs. HOLT has accomplished in this prestigious body are great.

On a very personal note, on numerous occasions as a freshman Member of Congress, I have looked to Representative HOLT for guidance and advice. She has provided me with wisdom and sound advice on several key issues facing this Congress. My service in the 99th Congress has only been enriched with having MARJORIE HOLT as a colleague and member of the Maryland delegation.

As a respected 14-year veteran of the U.S. Congress, Representative MARJORIE HOLT has served her country, her State, and her constituents with leadership and courage. Members of both the majority and minority have relied upon her knowledge and foresight. During her tenure in Congress, both political parties have provided leadership in the executive branch and the Congresswoman has worked in Congress as an effective lawmaker during several administrations.

Her contributions to our Nation go well beyond the State of Maryland. In 1973, as a member of the House Committee on Armed Services, Mrs. HOLT traveled to Egypt with four other colleagues and met with the late President Anwar Sadat. Then Secretary of State Henry Kissinger credited the group with "convincing Sadat that the United States wanted to be fair on the Middle East," paving the way for peace.

Her career is a testimony to her commitment to the equal right amendments legislation. Our colleague succeeded—and indeed excelled—in what many would have termed a man's world.

Born in Birmingham, AL, in 1920, MARJORIE grew up in Jacksonville, FL, graduated from Jacksonville Junior College, then earned a degree in sociology at the University of Florida. While her husband studied to be an engineer, she entered law school at the University of Florida. She graduated in 1949 and Mrs. HOLT was only one of just five women in her class.

Mrs. HOLT's sense of civil responsibility did not begin when she entered elective office. Soon after moving to Anne Arundel County, MD, MARJORIE entered into the practice of law. She found time to work for the PTA and become the first woman elder in her Presbyterian Church. She was also active in the Republican Party at the precinct level. Eventually, though, the tables were turned. The people she had worked for at the precinct level helped elect her to Congress.

Elected seven times in landslide victories to Congress, she was the first woman from Maryland elected to the House in a general election. It was during her first term in Congress that Congresswoman HOLT introduced a housing bill that implemented the National Homestead Act, which allowed the Federal Government to sell houses that it had foreclosed on.

Because of her foresight, U.S. Housing and Urban Development later commended Representative HOLT for providing the guidance necessary for "one of our most successful housing programs still operating in many large American cities."

MARJORIE HOLT has also demonstrated leadership in the area of our defense. She has been a member of the House Committee on Armed Services and served her country well. Also as a member of the House Budget Committee during the 95th and 96th Congresses, Mrs. HOLT led the fight to slow the growth rate of Federal spending.

As early as 1978, MARJORIE introduced an amendment calling for a Federal budget cut of $21.4 billon. The amendment failed to pass by only six votes. However, her efforts have contributed to legislation needed to reduce the Federal deficit.

Representative MAJORIE HOLT will be missed by many in this Congress but her contributions will continue to endure. I for one am indeed privileged to have had the opportunity to serve with Congresswoman HOLT. We in Maryland are a stronger State for having elected MARJORIE HOLT to Congress and elected to keep sending her back to Washington for the past 14 years.

At the end of this 99th Congress, Maryland will be saluting a farewell to four members of the Maryland delegation elected to represent the State in the U.S. House of Representatives. Representatives MARJORIE HOLT, BARBARA MIKULSKI, PARREN MITCHELL, and MIKE BARNES will all be leaving their office in the House.

When BARBARA MIKULSKI first ran for office in 1976, I was asked by the Greater Baltimore Chamber of Commerce to give her a personal tour of Maryland's infrastructure and port. The tour was to provide Ms. MIKULSKI with a first hand view of the businesses that pay the bills of much of the State of Maryland. A good understanding of these businesses was necessary for working in Congress in the development of our State's economy.

Before I was elected to Congress, I served for most of my professional career in the business arena closely linked with Maryland's transportation infrastructure. My desire to share my enthusiasm with my colleague has paid off. BARBARA MIKULSKI had indeed served her constituents well for five terms.

PARREN MITCHELL will also be retiring after this session. Mr. MITCHELL has served in the Maryland delegation as dean. His wise counsel has brought all members of the delegation together and we have accomplished much through his leadership. It has been a privilege to serve with my distinguished colleague, PARREN MITCHELL.

Our fourth departing Member is MIKE BARNES who leaves this body with having served his constituents in all fairness. His contributions have been many through the committee leadership roles he has held. Maryland will miss having a voice on the committee positions of MIKE BARNES.

During the 100th Congress, it is my hope that we in the Maryland delegation will be as successful in accomplishing our goals as we have been in the 99th Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I have a number of tributes that I will include in the RECORD, and I would like to cull out some of the quotes from them.

The gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. JIMMY QUILLEN, described her as a "truly outstanding Member of the House and her retirement is a loss not only to her constituents in the Fourth Congressional District of Maryland—but to those of us who have had the privilege to serve with her in the House of Representatives."

The gentleman from the Seventh District of Texas, Mr. BILL ARCHER, says, "From her very first year in Congress, she has been a forceful voice for both her district and her deeply held convictions about the direction that our Nation should be taking. I have always found her counsel dependable and insightful. Especially in the area of defense where she has played such an important role as a member of the Armed Services Committee, I have rarely found myself in anything but total agreement with her astute judgment and recommendations."

The gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BILL DICKINSON: "While serving in her capacities on the House Armed Services Committee, Congresswoman HOLT was insurmountable in her efforts for the increased benefits of soldiers and their families, including pay increases and improved health care. She was also heavily involved in raising the quality of life on military installations by improving the housing standards."

From the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. DELBERT LATTA: "I can personally attest to MARJORIE's contributions to the Nation's needs for a sound economy when she served with me on the House Budget Committee. She fought hard for reduced Federal spending within the Republican structure, and she gained the respect of those who served with her on the committee.

And from the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. TOM BEVILL: "MARJORIE is highly respected on both sides of the aisle and she has had a notable career on the House Armed Services Committee."

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the remarks that have just been made and with the written tributes that have just been read with regard to Congresswoman HOLT. I did not have the pleasure of working with her in any of the committees, but I did as a Member of this House.

I do agree that she is and has been an outstanding Member of the House of Representatives. I would like to wish her every success in whatever she is going to do in the days to come, but I will never forget the fact that she was always an outstanding Member of the House, and a fair Member of the House. No one can ask for any more.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I thank the gentleman. I am sure that she will appreciate those remarks.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] for getting this special order for MARJORIE HOLT. I have had the pleasure and honor of serving with her during her 14 years in the Congress, and as we were both members of the Committee on Armed Services and we served on the same subcommittee, the Subcommittee on Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems, I must say that she has had a very distinguished record here in Congress. In fact, she was one of the first women, I believe, Members to serve on the Committee on the Budget.

In fact, she did an unusual job in that capacity, because those other members of the Budget Committee—and this was something that the Armed Services Committee usually was very unhappy about—the members of the Budget Committee usually forgot that defense was an important part of the national needs, and it took Mrs. HOLT, with her knowledge of defense and her feisty approach when she felt that an injustice was being perpetrated, she stood out of all of the members of the Budget Committee to try to bring some balance between defense and the domestic programs.

I think that many people probably are not aware that MARJORIE HOLT drove to and from her district every day that the House was in session, and her district goes into Maryland to a very substantial extent beyond Annapolis. She spent, I think, something like 2½ hours driving back and forth, and yet she never missed a commitment with the subcommittee on Armed Services or the other committees when she was required to be there.

I think that she also has had a remarkable exposure to some of the major events of the last 14 years. For example, the Armed Services Committee in 1973, at the end of the Yom Kippur war, visited both Israel and Egypt, and we had the unique opportunity with that group—and Mrs. HOLT as the vice chairman of that subcommittee group—to meet not only with Golda Meir but also with President Sadat.

Our subcommittee was in fact that first group that had the opportunity to talk to Sadat and to bring back the word that he was really an unusual person, and the men and women making up that committee had a very unique experience.

Not only that, but Mrs. HOLT was also on another visit which had some very substantial consequences that the Armed Services Committee took to Somalia in 1975. At that time the Somalian Government was upset because Secretary Schlesinger had some overhead photography that indicated that there were several ships of Sovet vintage that were supplying the small port in Berbera in Somalia, and the head of Somalia said that this was not a Russian naval base, he said it was a Somalian base. But the people on our trip soon discovered that it was indeed a Soviet base, and the ships were Soviet, and in fact some of the Members even went into the barracks and found Russians there.

Within 2 years of that time, I cannot say that it was all done by MARJORIE HOLT, but within 2 years the Soviets were out of Somalia and no longer there.

One of the most staunch supporters of the National Guard—and I am not sure that my good friend from Mississippi will elaborate on this a little further—she has been throughout her entire career one of the strongest supporters for the Guard.

She was one of those who realized that if the National Guard was going to be effective as our second line of defense, we had to have training available to those people in the Guard and had to provide them with modern weapons and not the old hand-me-down weapons.

So this has been a very active Member of this body. We salute MARJORIE HOLT, and I know as the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] has said, it is going to be hard to replace MARJORIE HOLT, with her knowledge, with her drive, with her friendly attitude toward all of her conferees. She has been a leading light in the House of Representatives, and we are certainly going to miss her.

But again, she said that the reason she wanted to leave was to have more time for her grandchildren. I believe she has seven grandchildren, and she will probably be bringing them back here to the Hall of the House of Representatives to show where grandma was performing a great service to the United States of America over 14 years.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I thank the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman and compliment her for taking out this special order. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of my distinguished friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRATTON] as well as the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY].

It was a very sad day for the House of Representatives when our distinguished colleague, MARJORIE HOLT, took the well and made a very emotional announcement, having told us that she was not going to stand for reelection. That was a very difficult moment for her because as far as I am concerned, there is no Member of this House who is more committed to the cause of freedom and the United States of America than MARJORIE HOLT.

I have served with her for 6 of her 14 years now, and I will tell my colleagues that I actually became aware of MARJORIE HOLT's work before I came to Congress. In fact, it was her work, along with that of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA] in offering what was known as the Holt-Regula amendment which many have said was actually the precursor to the Gramm-Rudman legislation. Had that actually been put into place, we would not be faced with the tremendous fiscal crisis that this country now faces.

She has been an expert in the area of national defense, and I have not served on a single committee with her, but I have constantly, as one who is concerned about the defense of this country, relied on her expertise. I will miss that when the 100th Congress convenes in January.

She is very dedicated to the Fourth District. I like to think that southern California is certainly the most beautiful part of the country, as I am very proud to represent that. If there is a second most beautiful part of the country, it certainly would be the Fourth District, Annapolis and along the Severn River, where she represents which is an absolutely beautiful spot. I know that she is going to look forward to returning there.

She has demonstrated a commitment to the Fourth District by serving as the chairman for the congressional campaign running there. I had the chance to go out with her and campaign on behalf of Bob Neal who is running for that seat. I have got to say that while many might leave, that when she decided that she was going to retire that she would not spend as much time and effort on this campaign, and it was very impressive to be with her and observe her work over the past several months. Many people could make an announcement that they were going to retire and ease right off into retirement, but she has demonstrated a great degree of dedication, and I congratulate her for that.

I will miss her and I wish her and her entire family very well in the years to come. I thank the gentlewoman for taking out this special order.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I am sure that she will appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from California.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY].I90[H14OC6-B907]{H10037}MONTGOMERY

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I am very proud to join with the gentlewoman from Maryland, HELEN BENTLEY, and other Maryland colleagues, as well as my colleagues from other States, in paying tribute today to the gentlewoman from Maryland, MARJORIE HOLT. She is one of my best friends, if not my best friend in the Congress. I have really truly enjoyed working with MARJORIE over these 14 years. It certainly does not seem like it has been that long.

I have had the great pleasure of serving with her on the House Armed Services Committee. She has been the ranking minority member on the Personnel and Compensation Subcommittee as well as the ranking minority member on the Procurement Subcommittee.

MARJORIE HOLT was one of the original cosponsors of the new GI education bill. With her help we were able to pass a bill which has become a tremendous success today for the active forces as well as the National Guard and Reserve. With MARJORIE HOLT as a key worker on that legislation we were able to bring about that GI Education Act.

I also appreciate the dedication that she has shown over the years to improving the National Guard and Reserve. She has spent a lot of time, especially in Maryland, going out to different National Guard and Reserve units in her district and her State. As mentioned by the distinguished gentleman from New York, SAM STRATTON, chairman of the Subcommittee on Procurement, MARJORIE HOLT was his ranking minority member, and because of those two people and a few other people on the Armed Services Committee, we started giving not hand-me-down equipment to the National Guard and Reserve, but giving them updated, frontline equipment. That has proven to be the right thing to do, and we all agree that the National Guard and Reserve are some of our strongest frontline forces. Thanks to MARJORIE HOLT and SAM STRATTON and others, this has come about.

Let me close by saying that I certainly want to wish MARJORIE the best in the future. She has been such a dedicated friend of the veteran in working with me on the Veterans' Affairs Committee. She is a great American and she has really made a difference on Capitol Hill. So she can be proud of the things she has done, and we are proud of her. I just want to wish Duncan and MARJORIE the best.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I thank the gentleman, and I know that MARJORIE feels very, very close to the honorable gentleman from Mississippi.

Before yielding to other of my Maryland colleagues, I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that there are four Members of the Maryland delegation in the Hall right now, the remaining four Members, I might say, because MARJORIE HOLT is not the only one who is retiring from this House. We are also losing three other Members, the other half of our delegation. They are BARBARA MIKULSKI, PARREN MITCHELL, and MIKE BARNES. We all have some remarks to make about all of them as well.

Mrs. BYRON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I yield to the gentlewoman from Maryland.

Mrs. BYRON. I thank the gentlewoman very much for yielding.

It is a very interesting thing to note that Maryland is a very unusual State in many ways. First of all, there are eight Members of Congress from Maryland, four of whom the gentlewoman just said are retiring this year. But the other interesting thing is that there are four women and four men. Two of the women are retiring and two of the men are retiring, so the four of us that are left here today, the two men and two women, give tribute to two men and two women who are leaving us.

They are leaving us with a lot of guidance and a lot of years of service. We can start by looking at PARREN MITCHELL, who has been in Congress for 16 years. He first came in 1970 with my first husband. He is currently chairman of the Committee on Small Business, a very important committee as far as my congressional district is concerned because we have a lot of small businesses in Maryland.

We are sorry to see PARREN leave. He decided that he was going to go do something else. He thought for a while about being lieutenant governor of the State. He would have made a very good one.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, may I interject here that I have been very impressed with the way that Mr. MITCHELL has served as dean of the Maryland delegation, and the way he has brought all of the delegation with his wise counsel.

I think we have accomplished a lot in these part 22 months, as a united group under his leadership; and I feel very privileged to have served with him.

Mrs. BYRON. Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I have found the most delightful in the last 2 years, as chairman of the delegation PARREN has really pulled together and has worked extremely hard for the entire State.

We have not only an interesting delegation, but I think we transcend all philosophies and views and ideologies and therefore, it has been a pleasure to work as a delegation with him as the chairman.

We have been talking a little bit about MARJORIE and those of you who know that MARJORIE has been here for 14 years; we have talked about her expertise on the Armed Services Committee; we have talked about how she has been a viable member of the Budget Committee.

You mentioned several of the other Members and gave some quotes. I would like to say that Congressman STUMP has said that she demonstrates the ability to make a difficult decision confidentially, competently, and also has placed the Nation's interest high above partisan politics.

I think that is true when you look at the work she has done over the years for our national defense.

I also have an interesting situation with MARJORIE because for the first time, one of our counties, Howard County, discovered with the redistricting that they are put into three different congressional districts. That is quite unusual, but not really that unusual.

The interesting thing was that Howard County discovered that they not only had three Members of Congress, but they had three women Members of Congress.

Mrs. BENTLEY. That is unusual.

Mrs. BYRON. That is very unusual.

MARJORIE who has been in as we said for 14 years, and then BARBARA MIKULSKI, who joined 10 years ago, and I have been here for 8 years, all share Howard County. We decided that it would be an interesting thing to look at each other's section. I had originally had the entire county, but I thought since they were new into Howard County, it would be an interesting thing to share with them some parts of that; and we decided that we would take a tour of that county, and visit two different places in each of the three congressional districts.

I chose two in my section; BARBARA chose two in hers, and MARJORIE chose two in hers. It was a very interesting day, especially because BARBARA, who is also retiring, who is on the Energy and Commerce Committee, and also on the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, was not too well versed at that time in agriculture.

I can assure you she learned very quickly, because we were visiting a farm, a dairy farm in my section of Howard County. MARJORIE, in her usual fashion, always wears very high heels. I looked at MARJORIE going down the farm lane and I thought, "Well, I do not think I would have worn those high heels," but MARJORIE was perfectly at home and perfectly comfortable in her shoes.

BARBARA came along not really well versed in agriculture at that time—this was about 6 years ago—and we were in a dairy milking parlor at which time she asked, how many times a day do you milk. The dairy farmer said, "We milk twice a day."

BARBARA being from Baltimore City, not having at that time a lot of interest in agriculture, learned very quickly that "you milk 10 times a week." I said, "No, BARBARA, it isn't 10 times a week. You milk 14 times a week." You do not turn off on Saturdays and Sundays the spigots in agriculture.

I must admit that she learned very quickly, and she is probably now very well versed on her agriculture matters.

The interesting thing is the diversity of our three congressional districts, and the three of us as three Members touring the district, learning from each other, learning what we have found. I have listened to MARJORIE. She has educated me on many of the issues on the Armed Services Committee. She has educated me on many of the issues on the Budget Committee.

We were educating BARBARA on issues of Armed Services; we were educating BARBARA on issues of agriculture. That is one of the things that is such a pleasure with this body, is the fact that where you are not an expert in an area, you look to one of your colleagues for that expertise.

I think, Mr. Speaker, in the Maryland delegation with PARREN and his expertise in small business and in the black community; with MARJORIE with her expertise in the Budget Committee and also in Armed Services, and BARBARA with her expertise in the Energy and Commerce Committee and Merchant Marine and Fisheries, she has been very helpful with me; and in transportation, when we were trying to save the Blue Ridge and the Amtrak trains.

So it is a give and take throughout our complete congressional delegation. We have one other Member, MIKE BARNES, that came to Congress with me 8 years ago. He has a great deal of expertise and is an authority in foreign affairs. He is also a member of the D.C. Committee, and has a great deal of knowledge in that area.

MARJORIE is going to be going off to practice law; the law firm she is going to be joining is already getting calls to find out when she is going to be in to start her practice.

BARBARA, we hope, is going to be going off to the Senate as our new Senator from Maryland.

MIKE, after his 8 years of very tough decisions down here, is going to be going out to practice law once again; but hopefully he will be able to go home with Claudia and see his two girls and watch them grow with a better timeframe than we work in this body.

So I think Maryland, by losing four Members at one time is going to be a very heavy loss, and the one Member in the Senate. But at the same time, they go with our understanding; they go with our concern; they go with the legacy that they have left each of us, in guiding us along as the newer Members of the Maryland delegation.

The only thing I hope is that the four of us that are here today are going to be able to give that same kind of guidance to the four new Members that are going to be joining us here in Washington, and have the warmth and the companionship that we have gotten from those four that have chosen, for one reason or another, not to seek reelection.

I would like to join with my Maryland colleague [Mrs. BENTLEY] in her taking this special order today for MARJORIE HOLT, but also for our three other colleagues that are not going to be with us next year.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I might say, along the lines of what my distinguished colleague from Maryland [Mrs. BYRON] was saying, that in helping each other along, when BARBARA MIKULSKI was running in 1976 for the first time, I was asked by the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, then, would I please take her around and show her what the infrastructure was, and what the port was all about.

So we took her up in a helicopter and gave her a tour of all of the transportation segment of Baltimore so she would see firsthand what really made the area tick. She had been working in another area as a member of the city council, and when we flew over Hartmiller Island she said, "Is that what all this fuss is about?" She could not imagine it, but from that tour, BARBARA became a strong supporter of the port and of the transportation system.

Mrs. BYRON. I think the interesting thing is that each and every one of us have our own areas of expertise, and it is very beneficial for us to share that area, because we cannot be an expert in all areas, as much as we would like to be.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BENTLEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Prince Georges County.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Baltimore County for yielding, and I am pleased to follow the new dean of the Maryland delegation to speak about the loss of four of our Members.

Mr. Speaker, as this session draws to a close, we in Maryland are losing half of our congressional delegation. We have only eight House Members. However, over the year we have come to take pride in our diversity. As a small delegation, we have had to spread our committee assignments over the broadest range in order to be effective. In each member that we are losing, we are losing a leader in a particular sphere of influence.

First of all, we are losing the dean, and unifier, of our delegation, Congressman PARREN MITCHELL of Baltimore. A historic figure in our State, Congressman MITCHELL is the first black citizen to be elected to the House from Maryland. He has served with tremendous distinction since his election in 1970, and has left his mark on a wide range of issues from small business and economic policy to civil rights.

Congressman MITCHELL is deservedly known as the "father" of minority small business programs. He has authored three major bills in the last decade to create set-aside programs in Federal contracts. Those set-aside bills have resulted in more than $1 billion in contracts for minority small business.

A less tangible achievement on the part of Congressman MITCHELL has been the role he has played in unifying our delegation. This past session has been one of great accomplishment for Maryland. I think in large part we can thank PARREN MITCHELL for those accomplishments, which were achieved by a delegation unified under his quiet leadership.

I said earlier this year on the floor of this House that when Congressman MITCHELL leaves, we will lose part of our conscience and a singular voice for justice for the poor and disadvantaged. I hope and I am sure that that voice will not be silent, however, on the issues which we all care about but which he cares about most deeply. The citizens of our State cannot afford to lose his active participation.

On the other side of the aisle, we will also be losing a historic figure in Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT. When she was elected in 1972, Mrs. HOLT was the first woman from our State to serve in the House. She has become a respected Member of this House, and a visionary one in terms of Republican policy. Long before the Reagan "revolution," MARJORIE HOLT introduced Republican budgets of the sort that the President would have supported.

As a Member of the House Armed Services Committee, Congresswoman HOLT has fought for the strong national defense she believes in.

Though we have had our disagreements philosophically, no one can deny that MARJORIE HOLT has been a hard working Representative for the people of the Fourth Congressional District. Clearly they recognized and appreciated that hard work, for she has been returned to the House by overwhelming margins again and again.

We wish her all the best in her return to the practice of law. We know that she will bring to this new phase of her life the same dedication she brought to her work in this House for the people of Anne Arundel County.

In fact, if there is one thing that each of our four departing members has in common, it is that they are exceedingly popular in their home districts. Each one of them, no doubt, could have stayed in the House for years to come. It is our loss that they have chosen not to do so.

In 1976, Congresswoman BARBARA MIKULSKI joined our delegation. She is known for her ability to turn a phrase. And, she is equally well-known for her work on behalf of the people of Baltimore and the third district. We are on our way to getting Baltimore's harbor dredged, a project of vital importance to our State's economy. It wouldn't have happened without BARBARA MIKULSKI's leadership and doggedness. On issues of special concern to women and to children, there has been no stronger advocate in this House than she. BARBARA MIKULSKI has been a leader on child care issues and economic equity issues including insurance and pension reforms.

There is a good chance that BARBARA MIKULSKI will be moving over to the other body after this next election. She would be the first Democratic woman elected in her own right to that body. And, I would venture to guess would be the same breath of fresh air that she has been in this House.

Finally, Maryland will be losing one of its brightest young Members with the departure of Congressman MIKE BARNES of Montgomery County. Elected first in 1978, MIKE BARNES has come to be one of our best known lead-

State. He has had a meteor- this House. Given his tremen- ability, his success should not been unexpected.

After only 2 years in the House, Congressman BARNES was elected by his peers to chair the Western Hemisphere Subcommittee. For nearly 6 years, Congressman BARNES has been the point man in the House on Central American policy. Always he has fought for a sane policy in this area. Frequently he has succeeded and the House has followed his lead. Always his proposals have been thoughtful and sensible.

In domestic policy, MIKE BARNES has made a tremendous mark as well. Several years ago, he realized that the Federal Government could do something about drunk driving. Legislation adopted in 1982 has resulted in nearly every State toughening its laws against drunk driving. The lives that have been saved as a result are a monument to MIKE BARNES' effectiveness.

There is no doubt that the people of my State have not heard the last of MIKE BARNES. He is too competent and too popular among the people for this year to be the end of his political career.

Mr. Speaker, we are losing a combined total of 48 years of experience in this House. Though we have some fine people on the way to take the seats of the departing Members, it will be years before their record of dedication and their accomplishments are matched.

I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. DYSON] the fourth Member with whom I share part of one county.

Mr. DYSON. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding; I might add that our colleague from Baltimore County also represents part of Harford County.

I would like to thank the gentlewoman at the very begining for organizing this special order for MARJORIE HOLT and also thank her for her indulgence in letting us expand her special order to include the rest of our colleagues from Maryland.

I think it has been said both by the gentlewoman from western Maryland, Mrs. BYRON, and the gentleman from Prince Georges County, Mr. HOYER, that our delegation has tremendous diversity. We also have tremendous diversity in our State, from the beautiful mountains out in Garrett County to the beautiful ocean in Worcester County. We are very fortunate in having a lot of urban and suburban areas which most of the rest of you represent.

Notwithstanding that, this delegation, though very small in number, has been able to work together whether it is to benefit the Eastern Shore on an issue such as the avian influenza or to work together on something like the dredging of the Baltimore Harbor. I would add that in both cases we were very successful.

I think a lot of that credit has to go to each of the Members individually but most especially to the chairman of our delegation, PARREN MITCHELL.

We are going to miss PARREN, and certainly MARJORIE, BARBARA, and MIKE. Each has offered something special to this delegation.

I listened to STENY talk about how hard MIKE BARNES and the rest of the delegation worked for the benefit of Federal employees. They make up a significant, if not predominant number of our work force in the State of Maryland.

BARBARA MIKULSKI and I serve together along with the gentlewoman in the well on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. We have been working very hard in the last couple of years to clean up our Chesapeake Bay. We have coordinated our efforts as a delegation. We shared one mission which was to clean up the bay. I have every confidence that that goal will be reached someday.

I have served together with Mrs. HOLT and Mrs. BYRON on the Committee on Armed Services. All three of us serve on the Procurement Subcommittee along with the subcommittee chairman, SAM STRATTON, who was here just a moment ago speaking for MARJORIE. I think that has benefited the defense industry in the State of Maryland. By that I mean jobs, jobs for people throughout our State.

PARREN has done a yeoman job as chairman of the Committee on Small Business. I am a small businessman myself. Our family has a small business in southern Maryland. That we can turn to him, turn to an individual who is a Marylander on that committee, has, I think, been beneficial. We have been very fortunate in the State. I did not realize until STENY HOYER spoke that we were going to lose 48 years of seniority in the Congress.

Our new delegation chairman, Mrs. BYRON, will be able to take the four of us who are left and the four who are coming and bring about the same kind of harmony we have experienced in the last couple of years.

I think that will be for the benefit of the entire State. I salute each and every one of them. I think maybe they are the wiser people here. They are going to have the 9-to-5 jobs, free weekends, perhaps expense accounts and all of these other things that we only dream of. They probably will not have the press breathing down their necks, will not have to do financial reports, will not have to raise money for elections and all of the other things that we have to do.

But on leaving, they should all know that they have made significant contributions to our State. I am very proud of each and every one them.

I would like to thank the gentlewoman from Baltimore and Harford County for getting this special order today.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I would like to point out that the gentleman from Maryland and I do share Harford County, as we said in the beginning, and we have really had a very good working relationship there because of the Aberdeen Proving Ground. We are there constantly at the same time and doing projects together.

Mr. DYSON. I would like to say that the gentlewoman is a good person to work with.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I thank the gentleman. I also share Baltimore County in part with both Congressman MITCHELL and Congresswoman MIKULSKI, and because it is such a vast county, we do not get together on as many things concerning that county as the gentleman, Mr. DYSON, and I do in Harford County. It has been a real privilege working with the gentleman on them, and I hope we will continue doing so.

I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. I thank the gentlewoman. I certainly appreciate her taking this time for a special order.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join a special order recognizing the contribution of my colleague from Maryland, MARJORIE HOLT.

MARJORIE HOLT has served her constituents and the Nation well. She is a first-class legislator.

She brings to her service leadership and always a thoughtful understanding of the needs of this Nation.

Personally, I have a great respect for MARJORIE, having served with her for the past seven terms, particularly as a member of the Budget Committee. Our effort to slow down spending through the Holt-Regula budget reduction was the forerunner to many such efforts culminating in Gramm-Rudman.

MARJORIE is the epitome of integrity, and her service has set a high standard for those who will follow in Maryland's Fourth District.

Mary and I both have cherished her friendship and we join in wishing MARJORIE good health and future successes and especially lots of time to enjoy her grandchildren.

□ 1800

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF).

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for this opportunity to make a comment with regard to MARJORIE HOLT.

MARJORIE was somebody who helped me out when I first got here. She took me under her wing, you might say. I have a lot of statements that I want to make about her, a woman of integrity, of principle, how hard she served, and I will cover all of these and put them in the RECORD whereby they will be there for future generations to see.

I think the ultimate compliment that you could pay MARJORIE HOLT is she is the type of person, and I know I do this, when you come in you look up at the board to see how MARJORIE has voted before you vote. We have the same type of districts. We represent a large number of Federal employees. We have the same type of traffic problems. We have the same type of airport problems. We have the same type of problems. She has been one who has really helped me so much.

So my comment here is that I just want to wish MARJORIE HOLT all of the very, very best as she takes up another career. I understand she will practice law after she leaves here. I just want her to know personally from the bottom of my heart that I appreciate so much all of the help and guidance that she has given to me as a Member of Congress, and let her know that she is an individual I have the greatest respect for. When I walked in, I looked up to see how MARJORIE HOLT had voted, and perhaps that may be the ultimate compliment.

One other comment if I may. I did not come over here to talk about other Members, and I heard somebody mention MIKE BARNES. I would just say two comments about MIKE.

One, we worked together on the drowning machine in the Potomac River, which took a lot of lives of a lot of innocent people here in the Washington metropolitan area. MIKE put a lot of time in on that. And with working together, that drowning machine has been repaired and no one has drowned there since that has been improved. I think MIKE ought to feel very good about that.

The other thing I think he ought to feel very good about is his efforts to raise the drinking age in the United States to 21. As a result of MIKE BARNES making the drinking age, for all practical purposes, 21, he has saved so much hurt and pain and suffering and anguish in the families of individuals who do not know how much they owe MIKE BARNES because they have not lost a loved one because MIKE BARNES worked to raise the drinking age. Had the drinking age stayed at 18 to 21, hundreds of families would have experienced the pain and suffering of losing a loved one. And because of MIKE and many others, but MIKE took the leadership in raising the drinking age to 21, he has really helped so many parents out there who will never know how much they actually know him.

I wish him very well as he moves on and takes up another career.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join my colleagues today to express my appreciation to and admiration for our retiring colleague from Maryland, Representative MARJORIE HOLT.

She is a woman of principle and integrity who has served Maryland's Fourth District with distinction for 14 years. Her departure from the House will be a significant loss not only for her constituents, but for the Nation.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, she has recognized the importance of maintaining a strong defense and has fought to improve the pay and benefits of our Armed Forces. Earlier in her House career, she served on the Budget Committee and it was MARJORIE HOLT's initiative that produced the first Republican substitute budget which has become a vital part of the budget process today.

As Members of the House from the Metropolitan Washington area, Mrs. HOLT and I have worked together on many issues of interest to the Washington community. As a true and loyal friend of active and retired Federal employees, she has fought with me to protect their benefits and preserve the civil service system. We also worked closely together on regional transportation issues including the reconstruction of the Woodrow Wilson Bridge and the building of the Metro system.

The Almanac of American Politics characterizes Mrs. HOLT as a person with "a certain dogged persistence that one might expect from a woman who entered law school in 1946, a year that professional schools were flooded with male veterans returning from war."

MARJORIE HOLT has never been afraid to tackle an issue she believes in and work for changes to make Government better. She has been a persistent fighter, working for the betterment of our Nation and working to preserve our freedom. She has also been a fighter for her constituents and has gained a reputation as a Member of Congress who provides vital constituency services.

That reputation brought her victories with ease against liberal and conservative opponents alike in a heavily Democratic district. It speaks also of the way in which she has worked to get things done in Congress—in a bipartisan manner which has gained her the respect of colleagues from both sides of the aisle.

I salute MARJORIE HOLT as an outstanding public servant and want her to know how much I appreciate her valuable contributions as a Member of Congress to our Nation. She will be missed.

It has been a pleasure to serve with her in Congress and I wish her the best in her retirement years with her family. She well deserves it.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am glad the gentleman pointed that out, because that is indeed a very important matter for all families throughout this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Tennessee [Mrs. LLOYD].

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speak[er], the gentlewoman from Ma[ryland] yielding to me.

I, too, would like to rise in co[m]mendation for our colleagues from Maryland who will be leaving us, MIKE BARNES, PARREN MITCHELL, MARJORIE HOLT, and BARBARA MIKULSKI.

I had the privilege of serving on the Armed Services Committee with MARJORIE, and she is certainly a very devoted and very dedicated lady. She served in this body for seven terms, and I have come to count on her as one of my very dear friends. We became friends during my first term here, and certainly I am going to miss MARJORIE.

She is a lady who certainly commands respect of all the Members and her presence in this hall has been felt for these years.

She worked very hard on the Budget Committee, as well as the Armed Services Committee. I think she was the one who really established the standard of having an alternative budget proposal. Since she did leave the Budget Committee, I think that has been the standard.

But she really has given her whole being and worked so hard on the Armed Services. She has given of herself to the Congress, to her committees, as well as to her party. But her work on the Armed Services Committee, and I served on the Procurement Subcommittee and she is the ranking minority member, has been excellent. We are both very concerned not only for active duty military personnel, but for our defense systems as well. We were allies on many issues.

We will miss MARJORIE, and we wish her the best of luck. And to MARJORIE and Duncan, their children and their grandchildren, we wish you well and many happy days ahead.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to express my appreciation for BARBARA MIKULSKI. Although I do not serve on committees with BARBARA, she is certainly a dear friend of mine. She will be a fine Senator as she has been a fine representative.

BARBARA MIKULSKI is a lady who lives her convictions. She has a very big, a very warm, heart, and a very deep concern for the people who she represents, for all Americans that need help. She is a fighter, Mr. Speaker, but BARBARA MIKULSKI is also a good listener with a great big heart.

Early in her House career she tackled some of our most controversial subjects through her work on the Commerce Committee in trying to balance the industrial needs with our environmental concerns. Certainly her positions on Energy and Commerce and on Merchant Marine and Fisheries has been very important to Marylanders and to her district. It is going to take a big commitment to the Senate as she goes to work on these concerns as well. I know the gentlewoman from Maryland will miss her, because she has worked with her as well.

BARBARA MIKULSKI is certainly a presence that will be missed, but we look forward to seeing her as she serves in the other body.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS].

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, time does not permit an elaborate statement, and I will submit my entire statement for the RECORD.

I just want to say to the gentlewoman from Maryland and to her friend, MARJORIE HOLT, MARJORIE and I came to the Congress together the first time 14 years ago. We struck up a friendship which has endured since that time.

I have the highest possible admiration for her as a person and for the job that she has done in the 14 years for her constituents and for the Nation.

I say to her as she goes on to perhaps more rewarding things, the one thing that MARJORIE HOLT has been in all of the years that I have known her, is a true lady, and for that I thank her.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL].

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, while I have done no research on the subject, I suspect it is an unusual thing for a State to lose one-half its delegation in a single year. Beyond question, words of praise and appreciation will be accorded all those retiring members of the Maryland delegation, but I should like to confine my own statement to the two whom I know best—MARJORIE HOLT and PARREN MITCHELL.

It has been my privilege to serve with MARJORIE HOLT on the Armed Services Committee since she was elected in 1972. Although we have occupied opposite sides of the aisle, we have shared common goals and attitudes insofar as defense issues are concerned, and in many other areas as well. MARJORIE has served the Nation and the people of Maryland in a exemplary manner, and her successor will be following a very tough act.

PARREN MITCHELL I have known in an entirely different context. We served on no committees together, and it is no secret to anybody—least of all to PARREN—that our positions on legislation were opposite. Yet, I cannot let his leaving go unnoted. PARREN was my office neighbor for a number of years, and I have never known an individual who better embodied the meaning of the word "neighbor." In my observation, he was at all times a conscientious steward of his constituent's interests, and always a pleasure to be around.

Maryland has been well-served by its departing Representatives, and I join with all their friends in wishing them well as they move on to another arena.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the minority leader [Mr. MICHEL].

□ 1810

Mr. MICHEL. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, before making a comment relative to the great stewardship of MARGIE HOLT, I would like to just make a comment with respect to the gentlewoman's own campaign for reelection.

I have either heard or saw, I cannot quite remember, some charge that I, at the time, thought was erroneously leveled against the gentlewoman being against Medicare. Of course, it was something to the effect that she supported the Michel amendment on the health and human services appropriation bill.

I would just like to say that the charge has no foundation because the Michel amendment was directed at discretionary spending and not entitlement programs as is the case with Medicare. Frankly, those kinds of ads have no foundation. I hope the general public takes note of that because it is, again, one of those erroneous charges that will crop up during the course of the campaign.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have this chance to join with our colleagues in paying tribute to MARJORIE HOLT.

As a lawyer and then in local offices in Anne Arundel County, MD, MARJORIE showed the kind of dedication to her community that eventually led to her successful race for a House seat in 1972. We all know her great work as a member of the Armed Services Committee and, as Republican leader, I can personally attest to her support of strong national defense. This support has come not only when it was easy and popular to do so, but also in times when some said we should slash the defense budget. We could always rely on MARJORIE HOLT to provide not only the rhetoric but the votes needed for our national security.

MARJORIE also served on the Budget Committee and has had the opportunity to see the entire budget process unfold in all its complexity. She brought to that task the same concern for tax dollars and for national security that has marked her career since she first began in local politics.

The Almanac of American Politics 1986 says MARJORIE HOLT has "a certain dogged persistence." I like that quality—her ability to, as we say, "hang in there," when it might seem more prudent to avoid a tough issue.

MARJORIE, we are going to miss you around here. Your fine work for your constituents and for this country, especially in the field of national security, has been one of the greatest strengths on our side of the aisle for 14 years.

Mrs. BENTLEY. I thank the minority leader for his remarks and also for pointing out that I have never voted against Medicare. I appreciate that very much.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all of the Members who have joined in this tribute to MARJORIE and to other Members of the Maryland delegation who are retiring and particularly to the other three Members of the Maryland delegation who, the four of us are, let us say, the last four horsemen.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleagues in paying tribute and wishing good luck in the future to Congresswoman MARJORIE S. HOLT of Maryland, who is retiring at the end of this Congress.

Mrs. HOLT is a truly outstanding Member of the House and her retirement is a loss not only to her constituents in the Fourth Congressional District of Maryland who she has represented so well in the House, but to those of us who have had the privilege to serve with her in the House of Representatives.

She is a valued Member of my party in the House and her views have always carried great weight with me, particularly in matters relating to the armed services and the national security of the United States. Mrs. HOLT serves with distinction on the House Committee on Armed Services and she has created an outstanding record over the years as a thoughtful and hard-working member of that committee who is absolutely committed to an American defense capability second to none. She is firm in her support for providing what is necessary to our armed services to see that they can perform their mission for the defense of this country. I wish to express my appreciation to Congresswoman HOLT on this account and note that in her leaving the Congress and the Committee on Armed Services, the country has lost a strong voice for the maintenance of a powerful national defense system.

It has been a pleasure serving with Congresswoman HOLT in the House during the past 14 years. She is a fine person and I will miss her. For the future, let me just say best wishes in all your endeavors, and may the best of everything come your way.

Mr. SHUMWAY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to bid farewell to MARJORIE HOLT, who has been not only a highly respected colleague, but also a very dear friend. MARJORIE'S contributions to this body are innumerable, and her presence will be sorely missed.

MARJORIE HOLT is indeed a fine person; when we refer to her as the "Gentlelady from Maryland," the term is extremely fitting. However, she is also a capable, outspoken, and committed legislator, one who's guidance and leadership I have always admired, particularly in the area of defense. MARJORIE has always set a fine example, balancing national security requirements with sound judgment and common sense. She is a strong voice of reason in the defense arena, and her accomplishments have transcended partisan politics and parochial concerns.

While I will certainly miss MARJORIE, and her shoes will be hard to fill, I certainly wish her all the best in her future endeavors. Her efforts on behalf of her district, the State of Maryland, and the Nation will not be forgotten. It is a pleasure to be able to say "thank you" to her for so many years of dedicated service.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, with this session of Congress, one of the most outstanding individuals to have served us in the House will retire. After 14 years in this Chamber, Representative MARJORIE S. HOLT will terminate her public service career, and we will miss her greatly.

Her contributions to her country go far beyond her interests in her district or Maryland. She was instrumental in key foreign affairs issues, the House's work on the equal rights amendment, and critical Armed Forces issues that had a direct bearing upon the readiness of this Nation's military services.

It is impossible to adequately outline the vast contributions she has made while serving here. What we must do at this point is state the obvious: She will be greatly missed. Her record of outstanding service will remind us all that she worked in the best interest of the Nation while, also, doing her very best for Maryland and her congressional district.

I welcome the chance to wish MARJORIE the very best and I join in this tribute enthusiastically, knowing that we've been privileged to have served here with one of the best.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my good friend Congresswoman MARJORIE S. HOLT who is retiring after 14 distinguished years in the U.S. Congress.

I have enjoyed working with MARJORIE and attending our prayer breakfasts together. She is a fine person and an outstanding Member of Congress.

MARJORIE is highly respected on both sides of the aisle and she has had a notable career on the House Armed Services Committee.

MARJORIE has worked hard in the national interest and she has also dedicated herself to helping her constituents in Maryland's Fourth District.

Her talents will be missed, but not forgotten. I am sorry to see her go, but I would like to wish MARJORIE well in her future endeavors.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to pay tribute and to express my personal thanks to Representative MARJORIE HOLT upon her retirement from the House of Representatives.

MARJORIE in her 14 years in the Congress has established herself as one of our country's chief proponents in rebuilding our defense capability. She has never wavered from a conviction that America is the bastion of freedom in a world populated by regimes that do not share our commitment to liberty. This conviction has been translated into both renewed military power and a rebirth in our confidence to defend ourselves and the values we cherish in this beloved country.

I can personally attest to MARJORIE's contributions to the Nation's needs for a sound economy when she served with me on the House Budget Committee. She fought hard for reduced Federal spending within the Republican structure, and she gained the respect of those who served with her on the committee. She has been one of the outspoken Members advocating less taxes and less regulatory burdens on the individual.

I congratulate MARJORIE on a distinguished career and wish her the very best of health and happiness for years to come as she returns to her family and friends in Arundel County, MD. She will be missed but always remembered.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of my illustrious colleague, MARJORIE HOLT, on the occasion of her retirement from the U.S. Congress.

During her tenure on the House Armed Services Committee, she excelled in her subcommittee assignments as the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems, and as a leader of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel and Compensation.

While serving in these capacities, Congresswoman HOLT was insurmountable in her efforts for the increased benefits of our soldiers and their families, including pay increases and improved health care. She was also heavily involved in raising the quality of life on military installations by improving the housing standards.

Prior to the Reagan administration, our national defense capabilities were rapidly deteriorating. MARJORIE HOLT worked hard toward the total rebuilding or our nationl defense to where it is today.

I have worked very closely with the gentlelady from Maryland for 14 years, and will miss having her wisdom and insight. I would like to congratulate her on a job well done, and to extend my best wishes to her on her endeavors in the years ahead.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, It is with great sadness that I bid a fond farewell to a dear friend and trusted colleague, Congresswoman MAJORIE HOLT. I will deeply miss her and the wise counsel that she has always provided to me.

In 1972, when MARJORIE began her first term as the Congresswoman from Maryland's Fourth District, I was starting my second Congress. Except for this one-term difference in our congressional service, our congressional careers have covered an identical period. We have had to deal with the same problems and the same issues. She has always stood up as an intelligent and reasoned voice of a commonsense approach to solving those problems.

From her very first year in Congress, she has been a forceful voice for both her district and her deeply held convictions about the direction that our Nation should be taking. I have always found her counsel dependable and insightful. Especially in the area of defense where she has played such an important role as a member of the Armed Forces Committee, I have rarely found myself in anything but total agreement with her astute judgment and recommendations.

During her 14 years in the House, I have come to value her presence and leadership as one of those Members who was always willing to stand up and be counted on the issues which mean so much to both of us—to stand up for fiscal responsibility, a strong national defense and a government of which all Americans can be proud. I think that what I cherish most about knowing MARJORIE HOLT through these years has been the friendship that I have gained. I and all my House colleagues have benefited from her presence.

MARJORIE, please know that you will be missed. Maryland is losing a premier legislator. I wish you good luck and extend to you the very best wishes of myself and my constituents as you leave this body. People like MARJORIE HOLT have made my service in Congress a pleasure. She's the type of legislator of whom all Americans can be proud.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in honoring the distinguished Congresswoman from Maryland, MARJORIE S. HOLT, on the occasion of her retirement from the U.S. House of Representatives.

For the past 14 years MARJORIE HOLT has been one of the most effective and respected Members of the House of Representatives. It has been a pleasure and a privilege serving with her. She has demonstrated the ability to make difficult decisions confidently, and has always placed the national interest high above partisan politics.

Citizens of Maryland's Fourth Congressional District are to be congratulated for having the wisdom to send Mrs. HOLT to Washington to represent their interests. She has done an outstanding job and has amassed an enviable record of service to her constituents.

As an outspoken advocate of a strong national defense, Congresswoman HOLT has served her country in an extraordinary manner. By recognizing that providing for our national security is the fundamental function of the Federal Government, she has steadfastly fulfilled her sworn duty to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.

The House is losing a most effective Member who will be missed by all. My wish for MARJORIE is that she enjoys life to the fullest and continue contributing her ideas and energies to the important issues faced by our country.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this point to express how much I regret seeing Congressman PARREN MITCHELL leave this body. I have this regret because of his great leadership here for all things that are good for our country and for mankind. As some of us know, he served in the U.S. Army as a company commander in the infantry, received a Purple Heart and distinguished himself in every respect in combat in World War II. He has been a combatant for good things here in the Congress, and I have personally cherished his advice and counsel on unnumbered occasions. In fact, I have found him a man of such sound judgment and thoughtful concern that it has brought between us a very real and lasting friendship, something I will always cherish. We will miss PARREN, but we know wherever he is he will be doing good for those about him, and for those he doesn't even see or know individually.

Mr. Speaker, all of us in Congress will greatly miss our colleague, MARJORIE HOLT's presence in the House of Representatives next year—not only because of her great leadership, intellect, and charming personality, but also because of the beautiful friendship she has with each Member of the House. We not only respect her magnificient attainments and her spirited leadership here, but we treasure her friendship and know that it will not cease just because she is going to other fields of endeavor. During my considerable years of service in the House, I do not remember anyone who more genuinely deserves the title of a good fighter for things that are good for America and mankind. She is certainly an outstanding legislator, and we will miss her greatly.

Mr. Speaker, BARBARA MIKULSKI will be leaving us to go on to other achievements, and she certainly will be tremendously missed in the House of Representatives. She is an exciting, vigorous fighter for all things that are good and has set a standard of excellence in legislation which will be hard for any of her successors to equal.

Mr. Speaker, when Congressman MIKE BARNES decided to run for the Senate, all of us had a regret that someone who had so recently come to the House would leave us so promptly, particularly in view of his outstanding service in the House. The former marine and graduate of the University of North Carolina with postgraduate study at the Institute of International Studies in Geneva, Switzerland, brought distinction to the debates in Congress, demonstrated courage, and tenacity, and ability at every step of the way. Even in his recent defeat for the nomination to the Senate, and what followed, he has shown high qualities of character which we can all admire. We all know that his service here in the House was of such excellence that his future is assured where fate may take him. Since he lives close to the Federal Capital, we can all hope that he will be a frequent visitor on many occasions.

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my colleagues in paying tribute to our good friend, Representative MARJORIE HOLT, as she leaves the House of Representatives after 14 years of distinguished service to the State of Maryland and this Nation.

It has been a great pleasure working with MARJORIE on the Armed Services Committee. My wife, Lillian, and I developed a close friendship with MARJORIE and her husband, Duncan, during the committee's trip last winter to the South Pacific and Antarctica. I might add that MARJORIE was a hale and hardy member of what otherwise was an all-male excursion to the South Pole during that journey.

MARJORIE has been an articulate spokeswoman for Republican causes here in Washington, but few people know that her first political experience was as an employee of the Democratic Georgia Legislature, where I served before coming to Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I know all of us wish MARJORIE HOLT well, and I thank her for her friendship and assistance during our service together in the House of Representatives.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have the opportunity to pay tribute to a good friend and colleague, Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT.

I remember when I was a freshman, MARJORIE was one of the people I looked to, and she was always willing to assist and lend advice. Like myself, MARJORIE was a practicing attorney, and her astute grasp of legislative issues and procedures was an asset which we will sorely miss.

As a member of the Committee on Armed Services, she has been invaluable in the drive to build up our Nation's defenses. And she was just as active in diplomatic matters. She is credited with being one of the key people in convincing President Anwar Sadat to undertake his efforts in behalf of peace in the Middle East, during a visit to Egypt.

MARJORIE entered politics at a time when it was difficult for women to advance. She blazed the trail that many others have followed in her own State of Maryland. She is respected and liked by Members on both sides of the aisle, and her retirement at the end of this session will leave a gap in our ranks.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my plaudits to those of my colleagues for MARJORIE and her husband, Duncan, and say that I hope she will continue to grace us with her lovely presence in years to come.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to praise a colleague for whom I have great respect, but I am sad to have to say goodbye to this good friend. Representative MARJORIE S. HOLT will be greatly missed here.

MARJORIE would roll up her sleeves and put in the hard work required to complete the job. As a result, she's been a real asset to the Congress and the Nation and her constituents have been well served. Working as an effective lawmaker during several administrations, she has left her mark.

I admire MARJORIE. She's tough. She's straightforward. And I think it is one of the great things about Congress that despite the fact you may have differences on issues and serve on different sides of the aisle, you nevertheless can be friends with those with whom you disagree. Often MARJORIE and I are not on the same side on issues, but I always know we can talk, share our views, and maintain our friendship. That's the caliber of people here, and especially MARJORIE.

For 14 years, she has been a dedicated Member of this body and we have all benefited from her knowledge and her skills. MAJORIE HOLT deserves our recognition and our praise and I wish the gentlewoman Maryland all the best. She certainly has earned it.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to MARJORIE HOLT, the distinguished and able Member from the Fourth Congressional District in Maryland. As we all know, MARJORIE HOLT has elected to retire at the end of this session of Congress after 14 years in the House.

The term we are most familiar with in this House to describe MARJORIE HOLT is the gentlelady from Maryland. How apt a description that is of MARJORIE HOLT. She is a woman of great style and charm with a sincerity that is infectious.

MARJORIE HOLT has been a leader over these past 14 years as a member of the Armed Services Committee. She has played a major role in the development of our defense policy during these years. She amassed a reputation of being extremely knowledgeable on the many complex issues that come before this committee each year. She is the ranking minority member on the Subcommittee on Procurement, and has played an especially pivotal role in the various and critical procurement reforms that have emerged from this Congress.

MARJORIE HOLT also served with distinction on the House Budget Committee. She actively sought to make important reforms in the budget process some of which in retrospect might have eliminated the need for more radical approaches such as Gramm-Rudman.

MARJORIE HOLT is a revered figure in her congressional district because of her outstanding level of constituent service that she provides. She is a regular and visible figure in all the communities that make up the Fourth Congressional District, She has established a standard of excellence that any Member, Republican or Democrat, would be wise to emulate.

I am confident that whatever MARJORIE HOLT elects to do after she retires from the HOUSE, she will succeed—as she did in her House career. I am also comforted by the fact that her district's and home's proximity to Washington will allow us the occasion to see MARJORIE more often than other of our colleagues who are retiring. It has been both an honor and a delight to have known and worked with MARJORIE HOLT these past 14 years. She leaves behind a positive legacy of service and involvement that will endure for years to come.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in honoring the gentlelady from Maryland tonight. Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT has served with distinction in the House of Representatives since her election to Maryland's Fourth Congressional District in 1972.

She has proven to be an influential and dedicated member of the powerful Armed Services Committee. Her leadership in safeguarding America's defense, coupled with her fiscal conservatism and watchful eye, have helped immeasurably to protect both the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars and the freedoms we all enjoy.

Mr. Speaker, MARJORIE HOLT has shown during her tenure in Congress that both a dedication to the national good and local concerns can be carried out with distinction, dedication, and dignity. She has been reelected seven times in landslide victories to the House of Representatives, but has decided to step down at the end of this 99th Congress.

MARGIE will be missed by this body, and this Congressman. Both Maryland and the United States of America have lost a strong, sincere, and effective Member in the U.S. House of Representatives. But, I'm sure, others will be the lucky recipients of her good company and great abilities after MARJORIE leaves this body. I would like to wish my good friend MARGIE and her family the best of all possible things in all their future endeavors.

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to pay tribute to one of my colleagues, the Honorable MICHAEL BARNES, who has ably and conscientiously represented the interests of his constituents in the Eighth District of Maryland in the finest tradition of this House.

Mr. BARNES, with whom I have had the distinct pleasure to serve with for the past 8 years as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. As an active member of the committee he has diligently, ably, and conscientiously worked to preserve and protect the interests of the United States.

For the past 6 years he has chaired the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs where he became, in effect, the Democratic spokesman for a rational policy in Central America. MIKE BARNES played a crucial role in reshaping American foreign policy in that region. He has been a major force in formulating United States policy and assistance to El Salvador. He has vigorously resisted the tendency to allow our policy toward Nicaragua to be determined solely on military grounds. He has been a calm and rational voice in the often heated debate on Central America in the Congress.

He has proven himself to be one of the strongest supporters of Israel in the Congress. He was one of the leaders in the effort to prevent the sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia. And each year he could be counted upon to support essential levels of assistance to Israel to ensure the security and survival of our most reliable democratic ally in the Middle East.

MIKE BARNES is a man of great personal integrity and a man upon whom his colleagues came to rely because of his good judgment and his reliability. I am proud to know MIKE BARNES and consider him a good friend. I am happy to have had the opportunity to serve with him and to have worked with him on some of the great issues of our times: arms control, South Africa, human rights, refugee protection, and of course, a more rational policy in Central America.

Knowing MIKE BARNES, I have no doubt that we in this House will not have heard the last of him. He has been a good Congressman, a good friend, and a great colleague,

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the thoughtfulness of the Maryland delegation in reserving this time for Members to pay tribute to an outstanding legislator, politician, and leader, Congresswoman BARBARA MIKULSKI.

BARBARA has been an outstanding Member of Congress and she is admired and respected on both sides of the aisle.

I had the opportunity to get to know BARBARA well when she and I traveled to the Soviet Union in July 1985 under the auspices of the National Council on Soviet Jewry. We had the chance to talk and work together on that trip, and continued to work together upon our return to secure the freedom of Jews in the Soviet Union. BARBARA is a leading spokesman in Maryland and Congress on the plight of Soviet Jews and as with other issues, she is effective and committed to assisting the refuseniks.

I also had the opportunity to enjoy BARBARA's great wit and keen analytical mind as we discussed many shared areas of concern: the plight of minorities, the poor, women, and the disadvantaged of our society. I found her to be extremely articulate and sensitive to the problems of others and innovative and creative in her proposed solutions.

Mr. Speaker, BARBARA MIKULSKI is destined for greater roles of leadership in the United States Congress. Her talents, foresight, skill, and leadership will be missed in this body. I wish her the best of luck in her future endeavors.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to salute Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT, who is retiring after 14 years of service in the House of Representatives.

I have long admired Representative HOLT for her leadership, dedication and effectiveness in this body. During her tenure in Congress she has successfully served both the interests of her constituents of the Second District of Maryland and the interests of our Nation in the areas of foreign affairs and equal rights for women. She has been at the forefront in the effort for peace in the Middle East and during a trip to Egypt in 1973, utilized her considerable persuasive skills in urging the late President of Egypt, Anwar Sadat, to pursue peace in that region. She is also widely admired for her distinguished leadership in the fight for passage of the equal rights amendment and serves as a fine example for those women who seek to run for public office in order to contribute to the political process.

I had the good furtune to serve with Congresswoman HOLT on the Budget Committee and witnessed first hand her ability to work on an equal plane with her Budget Committee colleagues. In addition, due to the close proximity of our offices in the Rayburn House Office Building, we frequently rode the elevator together and engaged in many pleasant and thought-provoking conversations. I found her to be a friendly, intelligent, and extremely competent colleague.

Mr. Speaker, I have the greatest respect for Congresswoman HOLT's legislative talents and am confident that she will enjoy comparable success when she leaves the House for different pursuits. I join with my colleagues in wishing Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT the best of luck in all future endeavors. She will be missed.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleagues from Maryland for reserving this special order so that Members of the House may pay tribute to the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. BARNES.

I never had the opportunity to serve on a committee with MIKE BARNES. I have, however, paid close attention to his accomplishments in the House, and am pleased to have this opportunity to congratulate him on the fine work he has done in the area of foreign affairs.

MIKE was particularly impressive in his intelligent, articulate and impassioned battle against aid to the Contras in Nicaragua. I shall always remember his leadership in that worthwhile battle, and believe that it was demonstrative of his dedication to public service.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to convey my best wishes to MIKE BARNES. His leadership and tenacity will be sorely missed here on the Hill.

Mr. Speaker, it is with tremendous regret that I bid farewell to one of the finest gentlemen in the House, Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland. During his tenure he has amassed an amazing list of legislative accomplishments and earned the respect and admiration of his colleagues in the House on both sides of the aisle.

Shortly after coming to Congress in 1970, PARREN chose the two committees from which he would launch his legislative attack on problems in which he had the greatest concern. These were the Housing Subcommittee of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee and the House Small Business Committee.

In an effort to maximize his effectiveness as a committee member, PARREN, a sociologist by training, sought the guidance of blacks from across the country involved in the business and housing areas. Initially in small numbers, black experts came to Washington quarterly, totally at their own expense, to anonymously advise PARREN through grueling day-long work sessions. The seed for "Black Congressional Brain Trusts" had been planted. PARREN followed up on this idea during his tenure as chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus during the 1970's and encouraged each of us to establish brain trusts in our areas of committee expertise. Through our response to his leadership, there are now more than 16 different brain trusts involving thousands of persons of all races, ages, and walks of life in the highest levels of the legislative process. Moreover and equally important, they form a network of individuals throughout the entire United States capable of mobilizing on legislative matters within 24 hours.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps PARREN's greatest victory on the House floor was in 1976 when the first, now famous, Mitchell amendment was put on the public works bill. That amendment compelled State, county, and municipal governments seeking Federal grants to set aside 10 percent of each grant to retain minority firms as contractors, subcontractors, or suppliers. This amendment has now resulted in $625 million going to legitimate minority firms. In 1978, he won passage of his highly acclaimed bill known as Public Law 95-507 which requires Federal agencies to seek proportionate contracting awards to small disadvantaged minority business.

Following this, his next victory came when he won passage of a 10-percent set-aside to the Surface Transportation Act of 1982. This set-aside has resulted in hundreds of contracts to minority firms totalling billions of dollars.

Winning passage of this landmark legislation, however, did not end the battle. Due to the continuous legal challenges to his bill, in 1983 PARREN founded the minority Business Enterprise Legal Defense and Education Fund. The fund serves as a justice system for minorities which focuses its legal efforts on class action lawsuits and potential landmark decisions affecting minority business. Private contributions finance the nonprofit fund which PARREN fondly refers to as "my baby."

There is not enough time, nor enough space in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for me to do justice to PARREN MITCHELL's distinguished legislative career. I have not even touched upon his 6 years of outstanding service on the Budget Committee, paving the way for Congressman BILL GRAY to become chairman of that committee; nor have I touched upon his floor oratory in defense of the poor, the homeless, the disadvantaged, and the voiceless for whom he is so articulate.

In his own inimitable way, PARREN MITCHELL has left his own indelible mark on this U.S. Congress. In doing so, he followed no blueprint—he did it his way. To describe him finally as a legislator's legislator would not only be trite—but it would also be inaccurate. More accurately I predict that historians will say of him: PARREN J. MITCHELL—legislator—one of a kind.

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join in saluting our colleague, the Honorable MIKE BARNES of Maryland. We will miss him in the 100th Congress when the Committee on Foreign Affairs convenes and he is no longer a member of the committee. MIKE has served on the committee since his election to the 96th Congress and has chaired the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs since 1981. In that position, MIKE has been an effective critic of U.S. foreign policy toward Latin America.

As issues in Central and South America have assumed major importance in foreign policy in recent years, MIKE has been a central figure in shaping the debate. He and I have not always agreed, but we have always been able to accommodate our differences honorably and worked together frequently toward a consensus on these contentious matters.

MIKE recommended that the subcommittee change its name from Inter-American Affairs to Western Hemisphere Affairs in order to indicate more specifically our concern with relations to our Northern neighbor, Canada. MIKE has also served as chairman of the United States-Canadian Parliamentary Exchange and on many occasions provides the knowledge and expertise required to help us all better understand the issues involved in relations between our two countries.

On the national level, MIKE BARNES has played a vital part in the formulation of U.S. foreign policy. In Congress he has been an effective legislator and statesman, and the people of his congressional district have lost a dedicated representative.

I join MIKE's many friends in saying thanks and wishing him all the best in his new career.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, as the cofounder and cochairman of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, I have had many opportunities to deal on a one-to-one basis with each of the Members of the Maryland delegation. As we finish the business of the 99th Congress, it is only fitting that we bid a proper adieu to fully one-half of Maryland's eight-person congressional delegation. Each has brought his or her own unique talents to this Chamber, and each has made an indelible mark on me and on the House of Representatives.

The veterans of the crew, PARREN MITCHELL of Baltimore, has been for 16 years a leader in civil rights and the rights of the poor. PARREN leaves this House with eight terms of diligence in fighting for basic human dignity.

The gentleman from Baltimore is perhaps best known as the chairman of the House Small Business Committee. Following the many horrible tales of $2,000 coffee pots and $400 hammers, PARREN worked toward legislation to create greater competition for Federal spare parts contracts. His efforts to increase the quantity and success of minority-owned businesses played a major role in the minority "set-asides" on Federal projects.

I also had the pleasure of serving with PARREN's brother Clarence, a number of years ago. The Mitchell family has served Maryland well; Their legislative successes have been innumerable. The people of Baltimore will miss such a seasoned veteran fighting for them. His eloquent rhetorical and debating skills will be missed by all who seek floor debates with substance and indepth analyses.

Quiet but effective. That's the way I've often heard our seven-term colleague MARJORIE HOLT described. MARJORIE will be remembered for her continual efforts to maintain a strong national defense. As a senior member of the Armed Services Committee, for years she has fought—and usually won—battles to ensure reasonable pay and housing benefits for enlisted servicemen and women. She currently serves as the ranking Republican on the Subcommittee on Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems, chaired by my good friend and fellow New Yorker SAM STRATTON. On more than one occasion SAM has complimented Mrs. HOLT on her broad knowledge of the issues and ability to work with her committee members on complicated legislative matters.

MARJORIE made her mark on the 1960's and 1970's as a conservative but pragmatic political leader. In 1984, she was the Maryland director of the Reagan reelection committee. As she begins her retirement, I am sure that the President will continue looking to MARJORIE for her tremendous insight into budget and defense-related issues.

MICHAEL BARNES, Maryland Representative from the Eighth Congressional District, is also leaving the body. MIKE will be long remembered for his tremendous insight into the turmoil in Central and South America. From his position as chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee's Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs, MIKE has proved to be one of the Nation's foremost experts on Nicaragua.

The gentleman from Maryland has an interesting problem, in that liberals portray him as too conservative; conservatives claim he is too liberal. Often that means that MIKE can't be labeled simply in one faction or another, and then be expected to follow some pattern of voting. His support of the invasion of Grenada and his opposition to military aid to the Contras are perhaps the best examples of his individual style and determination to look toward long-term benefits of particular foreign policy moves by this country.

MIKE has also been a friend of our longtime ally—Israel. His dedicated work opposing the sale of sophisticated arms to Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations that refuse to recognize Israel's right to exist is work that will not soon be forgotten by Israel's supporters.

Last but certainly not least, the House will lose five-term Congresswoman BARBARA MIKULSKI, who won the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat in Maryland. She is currently locked in a struggle with Republican Linda Chavez.

BARBARA is small in stature, but her aggressiveness and earthiness make her a formidable opponent for anyone on the other side of an issue. From her position on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, BARBARA has been a staunch supporter of shipping for east coast ports, Baltimore in particular. She also has been an assiduous worker on the Energy and Commerce Committee, fighting for consumer rights and the environment.

Mr. Speaker, whether liberal or conservative, Democrat or Republican, one has to admire these four retiring Members of Congress from the Free State. Their collective wisdom will be sorely missed in the 100th Congress. My wife Nancy and I wish them all the very best on future endeavors, political and personal.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to praise a colleague for whom I have great respect, but I am sad to have to say goodbye to this good friend. Representative MARJORIE S. HOLT will be greatly missed here.

MARJORIE would roll up her sleeves and put in the hard work required to complete the job. As a result, she's been a real asset to the Congress and the Nation and her constituents have been well served. Working as an effective lawmaker during several administrations, she has left her mark.

I admire MARJORIE. She's tough. She's straightforward. And I think it is one of the great things about Congress that despite the fact you may have differences on issues and serve on different sides of the aisle, you nevertheless can be friends with those with whom you disagree. Often MARJORIE and I are not on the same side on issues, but I alway know we can talk, share our views and maintain our friendship. That's the caliber of people here, and especially MARJORIE.

For 14 years she has been a dedicated Member of this body and we have all benefited from her knowledge and her skills. MARJORIE HOLT deserves our recognition and our praise, and I wish the gentlewoman from Maryland all the best. She certainly has earned it.

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I want to make note of a number of our distinguished colleagues who are retiring: Representatives HOLT, KINDNESS, LOEFFLER, MITCHELL, MIKULSKI, and BARNES. While I did not have the opportunity to work closely with my colleagues from the other side of the aisle, I nonetheless, know them to be of fine reputation and good character. I wish them well in their future endeavors.

There has been no finer statesman to serve this institution than the distinguished dean of the Maryland delegation: Congressman PARREN J. MITCHELL of Baltimore.

This great champion of the civil rights movement, professor and Member of Congress since 1970, has been a strong voice for the poor and disenfranchised throughout his distinguished career. Congressman MITCHELL is affectionately known as Mr. Small and Minority Business, and has fought relentlessly for the rights of small and minority business interests throughout the Nation.

I cannot come up with all of the superlatives to rain upon my distinguished colleague. But, I believe he summed up his distinguished career in a recent speech by reciting the words of a popular song, "For what is a man; what has he got, if not himself he has not; to say the things he truly feels and not the words of one who kneels. The record shows, I took the blows, and did it My Way." Over the years, my colleague has done things his way!

Representative BARBARA MIKULSKI has been an example for all of us through her hard work and determination to serve her district and her State. BARBARA has been at the forefront of the women's movement and the entire civil rights movement. She has fought injustice at every turn and proved herself to be a constant friend to the less fortunate.

BARBARA has also fought hard for her home city of Baltimore and the entire State of Maryland. She has used her considerable legislative skill and determination to help the people back home. She has worked hard for consumer's rights as well, and she has never forgotten her roots.

Surely this body will miss BARBARA MIKULSKI and her fine sense of humor and boundless energy. It's nice to know, however, that we can expect to see her on the other side of the Capitol next year and for years to come.

We are losing another friend and colleague this year, MIKE BARNES. I have had the privilege of working with MIKE as a member of his subcommittee. It was a rewarding experience. I say that because I found MIKE to be both fair, yet faithful to his own principles. MIKE is one of those rare individuals who is a big enough person to hold fast to his own point of view, while at the same time be able to allow those who disagree with him the room to express themselves.

MIKE has been our party's standard-bearer for United States policy toward Latin America for the past 6 years. In that capacity, he has taken a lot of heat, but he has served his party, this body, and his country well. MIKE has made sure that Latin America was not forgotten in the course of our debates over United States foreign policy. He has also helped to ensure that America has projected a human face itself to our neighbors south of the border.

I will miss MIKE and his excellent subcommittee staff. They have served their Congress and country with distinction. But more importantly, they have been my friends, and I hope and believe that the future will be full of promise for all of them.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Small Business Committee and chairman of one of its subcommittees, I am very pleased to join with my colleagues from the Maryland delegation in paying tribute to the chairman of the House Small Business Committee, the Honorable PARREN J. MITCHELL, on the occasion of his retirement at the end of this Congress, after representing the Seventh Congressional District of Maryland for the past 16 years.

Chairman MITCHELL's contributions to public service go back much further than the eight terms he has served here in the House of Representatives. PARREN was one of the leaders of the civil rights movement, and continued to champion the cause of minority and disadvantaged individuals who have not always had an equal opportunity to participate in the American dream.

PARREN has effectively used the House Small Business Committee chairmanship to act as an advocate for America's would-be entrepreneurs who had viable products, services, and ideas, but who had found diminished capital and credit opportunities in the marketplace. These future business people had a friend in PARREN MITCHELL, who made every effort to continue the various SBA loan programs which, like so many other programs, have been subject to cuts in Federal spending in recent years.

And it was largely through the efforts of Chairman MITCHELL that the budget-cutting plans of this administration to dismantle the SBA were thwarted. The recent White House Conference on Small Business, which called to Washington, DC business men and women from across the country, affirmed the support and need for a strong SBA.

The citizens of the Seventh Congressional District of Maryland are losing a dedicated and effective public servant. Business men and women across America are losing an effective advocate and champion of small business, and we in the Congress are losing an able colleague and a friend. I join with my many colleagues in wishing Chairman MITCHELL a productive, happy, and well-deserved retirement.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join my colleagues today to express my appreciation to and admiration for our retiring colleague from Maryland, Representative MARJORIE HOLT.

She is a woman of principle and integrity who has served Maryland's Fourth District with distinction for 14 years. Her departure from the House will be a significant loss not only for her constituents, but for the Nation.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, she has recognized the importance of maintaining a strong defense and has fought to improve the pay and benefits for our Armed Forces. Earlier in her House career, she served on the Budget Committee and it was MARJORIE HOLT'S initiative that produced the first Republican substitute budget which has become a vital part of the budget process today.

As Members of the House from the Metropolitan Washington area, Mrs. HOLT and I have worked together on many issues of interest to the Washington community. As a true and loyal friend of active and retired Federal employees, she has fought with me to protect their benefits and preserve the Civil Service System. We also worked closely together on regional transportation issues including the reconstruction of the Woodrow Wilson Bridge and the building of the Metro system.

The "Almanac of American Politics" characterizes Mrs. HOLT as a person with "a certain dogged persistence that one might expect from a woman who entered law school in 1946, a year that professional schools were flooded with male veterans returning from war."

MARJORIE HOLT has never been afraid to tackle an issue she believes in and to work for changes to make government better. She has been a persistent fighter, working for the betterment of our Nation and working to preserve our freedom. She has also been a fighter for her constituents and has gained a reputation as a Member of Congress who provides vital constituency services.

That reputation brought her victories with ease against liberal and conservative opponents alike in a heavy Democratic district. It speaks also of the way in which she has worked to get things done in Congress—in a bipartisan manner which has gained her the respect of colleagues from both sides of the aisle.

I salute MARJORIE HOLT as an outstanding public servant and want her to know how much I appreciate her valuable contributions as a Member of Congress to our Nation. She will be missed.

It has been a pleasure to serve with her in Congress and I wish her the best in her retirement years with her family. She well deserves it.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in paying tribute to the Honorable BARBARA A. MIKULSKI, who is leaving the House of Representatives after 10 years of dedicated service to her constituents, to run for the U.S. Senate from the State of Maryland.

Congresswoman BARBARA MIKULSKI served in the Baltimore City Council from 1971 to 1976 before coming to the House of Representatives, and has tirelessly represented her constituents from the Third Congressional District of Maryland since her first election to Congress in 1976.

As a member of the Subcommittee on Merchant Marines of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and as a member of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, BARBARA MIKULSKI has compiled an outstanding record of achievement. She is a Congresswoman of deep compassion and courage, who has provided exemplary service to her constituents and to the people of this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I extend to BARBARA MIKULSKI my best wishes for continued success as she continues in her life of public service in devotion to the highest principles.

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to say a few words in tribute to MARJORIE HOLT. She has served with distinction for 14 years and been an excellent Representative of the people of Maryland's Fourth District.

MARJORIE and I have several things in common. I was born in Jacksonsville, FL, and, although MARJORIE was born in Alabama, she attended Jacksonville University and received her bachelor's degree. She has her law degree from the University of Florida where I received my bachelor's degree. She has also received the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the University of Florida for her tremendous efforts on behalf of our Nation and the university is very proud of her accomplishments.

As MARJORIE steps down after 14 years of honorable service, I wish her the very best in the years to come.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to join my colleagues today in this special order in tribute to our colleague from Maryland, Representative MICHAEL BARNES, who will be leaving public service at the end of the 99th Congress after a distinguished 8 years in the House of Representatives.

While we come from different sides of the aisle, as Members of the House from the Metropolitan Washington area, MIKE BARNES and I have worked together on many issues of interest to the Washington community. He has been a fervent supporter of Federal employees and retirees and has worked tirelessly to protect their pay and benefits and focus attention on the importance of a quality Federal work force.

We also have worked closely on area transportation issues and he has been a leader in the fight to continue the Federal commitment to build the regional Metro system.

Several years ago, when the Potomac River which separates our Maryland and Virginia districts was siphoning people to their deaths in its treacherous "drowning machine" at the Little Falls Dam, MIKE joined with me in working with local and State officials and the Army Corps of Engineers to redesign the dam and save lives.

This is an appropriate time, too, to salute MIKE BARNES for his extraordinary efforts to strengthen the drunk driving laws in our Nation. He was the driving force several years ago when Congress enacted a measure to cut off Federal highway aid to States that do not raise their drinking age to 21. The Nation owes him a debt of gratitude for his efforts to end the tragedy of "blood borders" which have taken the lives of so many young people.

MIKE BARNES has been a valued and respected colleague and an outstanding public servant and I wish him well in his future endeavors as he returns to the private sector, where I'm certain he will enjoy continued success.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, four of our colleagues from the State of Maryland will be leaving the House later this year. I have known them all throughout their tenure in this body and they will all be missed.

Chairman PARREN MITCHELL of the Small Business Committee has been an inspiring leader in the Nation's fight for civil rights and liberties and has championed the causes of small business as this sector of the economy has become increasingly important.

Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT has lent a dignified and reasoned voice to the deliberations of this Chamber. Her work to help build a strong and well-managed national defense has been most notable, as well as her leadership in establishing the National Homestead Act.

Congresswoman MIKULSKI—although only a short time in the House—has demonstrated her broad knowledge of issues of critical importance to the Nation. Her leadership in the area of improved conditions for women and her strong support for Federal workers are two accomplishments, among many, which are to her credit.

Finally, Congressman MIKE BARNES has served not only the Eighth District as a strong spokesman for Federal workers but also as a conscience for this body as we deliberate policies in Latin America. His strong and able leadership of the Western Hemisphere Affairs Subcommittee has been greatly appreciated by those of us who share his concerns.

Mr. Speaker, it is rare that this House loses so many able and respected Members at one time. Although all will be missed, I join their many friends and supporters in expressing appreciation for their contributions and best wishes for the lives they now enter.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I am very proud to join Mrs. BENTLEY and our other colleagues in paying tribute today to the gentlelady from Maryland, MARJORIE HOLT.

She has been one of my closest friends in the Congress. I have truly enjoyed working with MARJORIE over these past 14 years. I have had the pleasure of serving with her on the Armed Services Committee, and especially on the Personnel and Compensation Subcommittee. MARJORIE has also provided great leadership in her role as ranking minority member on the Procurement Subcommittee.

Mrs. HOLT was one of the original cosponsors of the new GI education bill. With her help, we were able to pass the bill which has become a tremendous success today in both the Active and Reserve Forces. The GI bill has saved the All-Volunteer Force and MARJORIE HOLT had a very big hand in making it happen.

I also appreciate the dedication she has shown over these years to improving our National Guard and Reserve Forces. She has been a very strong advocate for our Reserve components. Later this week, she will be honored by the National Guard for her work here in the Congress.

I want to wish MARJORIE all the best in the future. She is a great American and has made a very positive difference here on Capitol Hill. She can, and should, be proud of the things she achieved while in service to her State and her country. I know I am proud to have had the chance to serve with her.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to MARJORIE HOLT who is leaving Congress at the conclusion of this session after having ably and effectively represented the residents of Maryland's Fourth District since 1972.

During her 14 years of service, she has brought to the deliberations of the House a strong sense of personal conviction, integrity and high moral character. In establishing an outstanding record of public service, she has contributed creatively and constructively to legislation advancing the welfare of the Nation.

Her dedication and her love of her district, State, and country had a positive influence on all of us who knew and worked with her. She has won respect from her colleagues on both sides of aisle and from people familiar with her accomplishments.

I express my admiration and gratitude for a job well done, and I wish MARJORIE success and happiness in her future endeavors.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in paying tribute to the Honorable PARREN J. MITCHELL, who is retiring from Congress, after 16 years of dedicated services to the people of the Seventh Congressional District of Maryland.

PARREN and I serve on the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, and he is a member of the Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs and Coinage, which I have the honor to chair, and I have had the opportunity to work with him and have come to know and respect PARREN for his legislative and leadership abilities.

Before coming to Congress, PARREN MITCHELL served our country with distinction in the U.S. Army in the 92d Infantry Division during World War II, as a commissioned officer and company commander. For his heroic actions during the war, he was awarded the Purple Heart. PARREN MITCHELL also served as the executive director of the Maryland State Human Relations Commission and as executive director of Baltimore's Community Action Agency.

Elected to the 92d Congress in 1970, PARREN MITCHELL has distinguished himself as the chairman of the House Small Business Committee, and as a member of the Joint Economic Committee, and as a member of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, and its Subcommittees on Consumer Affairs and Coinage and on Housing and Community Development. He has worked tirelessly on behalf of the small businessman, the poor and all working Americans, and his unwaivering commitment to civil and human rights is most commendable and worthy of recognition.

Mr. Speaker, Congressman PARREN MITCHELL will be sorely missed by all of us in Congress who have had an opportunity to work with him, and I extend to PARREN MITCHELL my best wishes for continued good health and much happiness in the years ahead.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be paying tribute to MARJORIE today, while deeply regretting her retirement from the House. We are losing a truly dedicated servant of the people.

I served with MARJORIE on the Armed Services Committee when I first came to Congress 12 years ago. She isn't flamboyant, but she does get her point across. She doesn't speak loudly, but she does speak out. Her quiet manner belies a fierce determination, and those of us who know and respect MARJORIE know that she is about as effective a Member of Congress as there can be.

MARJORIE entered law school at a time when few women were entering the professions, and she ran for Congress when only a few women had won seats in either body. She has reached each of the goals she has set for herself with persistence, grace, and dignity. And she serves her constituents and her country with those same qualities that have meant personal success. MARJORIE is exacting when it comes to giving the residents of Maryland's Fourth District the service they deserve. No one can question that she does an excellent job, for she's won seven congressional races against Republicans and Democrats alike. In a district that has more registered Democrats than Republicans, that's certainly a tribute to her good constituent services.

But that isn't how I know MARJORIE best. I know her best as a person concerned about our national priorities in the areas of fiscal responsibility and a strong national defense. She has an extensive knowledge of these issues and is an able and articulate defender of her beliefs.

MARJORIE is hard working and committed and her talents and intelligence will be missed by her colleagues in this House. I am certain, however, that our loss will be another's gain, for she is not one to be idle. Best of luck to you and Duncan in whatever you next endeavor.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a great honor to rise today to join my colleagues in this well deserved salute to four outstanding House Members from the great State of Maryland who will be leaving us at the end of this session.

Representatives BARBARA MIKULSKI, MARJORIE HOLT, PARREN MITCHELL, and MIKE BARNES have all had a record of distinguished service in the House.

Mr. Speaker, while there is sadness in my heart that BARBARA MIKULSKI will not be counted among our numbers next year, there is the great joy that come January she may indeed join our Senate colleagues as a Member of that body. Her drive and feisty determination to achieve a better America for all will be sorely missed in this Chamber.

BARBARA MIKULSKI is truly a "people's Representative," deeply concerned with the needs and problems of our Nation. Whether it be consumerism, women's rights or other causes, BARBARA MIKULSKI has been there fighting for a better America. I wish her continued success in that effort.

During her 14 years of service in the House, MARJORIE HOLT has served her country with leadership and courage. As a key member of the House Armed Services Committee she has been a leader in the effort to secure a strong national defense for our Nation.

In 1973, MARJORIE HOLT participated in the historic mission to Egypt that met with the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, a meeting which opened the door the door to peace negotiations in the Middle East. Her expertise in those areas will be sorely missed.

Mr. Speaker, all House Members owe a particular debt of gratitude to PARREN MITCHELL, our good friend from the Seventh Congressional District of Maryland. During the 16 years he has served in the House, PARREN MITCHELL has been a guiding light in our fight to end all forms of discrimination in our society.

His work as chairman of the Small Business Committee has spearheaded the passage of legislation that has created literally thousands of jobs for minority-owned businesses throughout America.

I for one will miss his eloquent voice in the years ahead as we deal with key economic matters. My very best to PARREN in whatever new endeavor he undertakes in the future.

MIKE BARNES has become a recognized leader in the area of foreign affairs. As chairman of the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee dealing with Latin America, he has been in the forefront of efforts to limit our involvement in the turmoil taking place in that part of the world. His has been a voice of moderation in a sea of inflamed rhetoric.

MIKE has also become a champion of the Federal worker, fighting for their rights at a time when that segment of our population has become the scapegoat in the battle to reduce our record Federal deficits. While he may be leaving us now, I am sure we will be hearing from MIKE BARNES in some other forum in the very near future.

My congratulations to the people of Maryland for electing such fine Representatives to Congress and my shared sorrow that they are moving on to new careers away from Congress.

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to say a few words in tribute to our retiring colleague, PARREN MITCHELL. PARREN is one of the most respected Members of this body and all who have had the honor to serve with him realize that Congress will badly miss him.

As a former chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus and as the current chairman of the Small Business Committee, PARREN has been a leader in the quest for equality and justice in America. He has served with great dignity and distinction and I am proud to call him my friend.

As he retires, I wish PARREN the very best in the years to come.

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to recognize my colleague, MARJORIE HOLT, for her 14 years of service in the House of Representatives.

Prior to her election in 1972, MARJORIE served 6 years as the clerk of the circuit court of Anne Arundel County. Her remarkable leadership qualities and concern for the county were quickly recognized by the constituents of the Fourth District in Maryland as they made her the first woman elected to Congress in a general election in Maryland. During her term in Congress, she has been at the forefront of debate on national security and budgetary issues. As a fellow member of the Armed Services Committee, I have seen firsthand her concern for a strong national defense and peace and security in the world. MARJORIE also served on the House Budget Committee during the 95th and 96th Congresses, where her fight to restore fiscal responsibility in the Government received nationwide recognition.

MARJORIE HOLT is a woman of fine accomplishment. She will be missed by all of us who have come to respect and rely on her opinions and wisdom. I wish for her great happiness in her retirement years.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to the Honorable MARJORIE S. HOLT, who has conscientiously represented her constituents from the Fourth Congressional District of Maryland, since her election to Congress 14 years ago.

Before coming to Congress, MARJORIE HOLT received her law degree form the College of Law of the University of Florida, and she was the clerk of the circuit court of Anne Arundel County from 1966 to 1972. Also, she served two terms as the supervisor of elections for the county.

Elected to Congress in 1973, she has distinguished herself as the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems of the House Armed Services Committee, and as a member of the House Military Personnel and Compensation Committee.

MARJORIE HOLT is a dedicated public servant, and a fine legislator, who has served her constituents, and this Nation with diligence.

Mr. Speaker, I extend to MARJORIE HOLT my best wishes for continued success in all of her future endeavors in devotion to the highest principles.

Mr. FUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I must take time to honor today our colleague from the fair State of Maryland, MIKE BARNES, who will not be with us next year. Congressman BARNES will be sorely missed by the people of Puerto Rico who have found in him a tireless advocate and friend.

Personally, I feel that the U.S. Congress will lose an able leader who has been a staunch supporter of many important causes and who has left an indelible mark as chairman of the Western Hemisphere Subcommittee of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

MIKE's dedication to intercultural understanding in our Hemisphere, his tireless defense of Federal employees and women's rights and his concern for the well-being of his State and the District of Columbia have gained him special recognition in many fora.

For all the energy and vision that MIKE BARNES put into helping with the issues of fairness that often get neglected in support of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and Hispanic issues in the United States, he always holds, a position of honor among my people. We wish him the best in his future endeavors and hope he will some day return to the Halls of Congress.

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to tell BARBARA MIKULSKI how very much I appreciate the opportunity to serve with her in Congress and to wish her the best in her quest for the Senate.

BARBARA's district and my district are quite different and yet she always took the time to learn and understand the problems of farmers and those living in rural America. She has been called a gutsy fighter for what she believes in, and that she is. She is also a very capable legislator who has accomplished much in her tenure in this body.

I wish her luck in November and the best in the years to come.

Mr. BADHAM. Mr. Speaker, I am here to honor my distinguished colleague and good friend from Maryland, Congresswoman MARJORIE HOLT. For 14 years, MARJORIE has effectively served the Fourth District of Maryland in this House. As a Member from California, I must admit some envy about her short commute between Washington and her district. But, while MARJORIE has been an extremely effective spokesperson for her own constituents, she has also been a strong Representative for all of Maryland.

In addition, I have had the honor of serving for nearly 10 years with Congresswoman HOLT on the House Armed Services Committee. MARJORIE has always been a strong proponent of a strong national defense, and has been especially effective as the ranking Republican on the Subcommittee on Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems. She has been a strong leader and fair negotiator for the Armed Services Committee, which will most certainly miss her participation.

I am sorry to see MARJORIE retire from Congress, but I am happy to have had the opportunity to work closely with her for the last 10 years. MARJORIE HOLT has left her indelible imprint in the U.S. House of Representatives as an outstanding servant of the people of Maryland and of our Nation. MARJORIE, good luck and best wishes in your future pursuits.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to the able MICHAEL D. BARNES, who has ably ented the people of the Eighth Con- ional District of Maryland during the last years. His efforts on behalf of his constituency, and on behalf of the citizens of this Nation are both respected and admired, and are most worthy of recognition.

Before coming to Congress, MIKE BARNES received his law degree from the National Law Center of the George Washington University, and practiced law with the law firm of Covington & Burling.

Elected to the 96th Congress in 1978, MIKE BARNES has served with diligence and distinction as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and as a member of the Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs. He has also provided exemplary service as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Operations and Metropolitan Affairs of the House District of Columbia Committee, and as a member of its Subcommittee on Judiciary and Education, as well as a member of the House Budget Committee.

Congressman MIKE BARNES is a fine legislator, who will surely be missed by those of us in the House of Representatives who have had the pleasure of working with him and knowing him.

Mr. Speaker, I extend to MIKE BARNES my best wishes for continued success in all of his future endeavors in devotion to the highest principles.

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to say goodbye to a respected colleague and a dear friend of mine, the Honorable TOM LOEFFLER of Texas. I consider it an honor to call TOM my friend. In a place where one's party affiliation determines most friendships, I am pleased that I have been able to maintain a valued and trusted friendship with this man in spite of our opposing party affiliations.

TOM LOEFFLER'S contributions to this body have been great. Having served in some capacity of public service since 1971, including a stint as a congressional lobbyist under the Ford administration, he has brought with him a tremendous amount of experience, despite his youth. He has served the people of his district and his State of Texas well in his seats on the Appropriations and Budget Committees. Considered an astute political tactician, he has also served as the chief deputy whip for the minority. He truly represents the very nature and history of the people of Texas—independent, principled, and hard working.

As we bid farewell to TOM, we do so in hopes that our paths will cross again at some time in the future. He is a very talented individual who will continue to be a leader for Texas in years to come.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ABERCROMBIE). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, was this filed under unanimous consent, or was it filed as a privileged report?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Rules may be filed during special orders without unanimous consent.

Mr. ROYBAL. I still want to know whether unanimous consent was requested, or how was it filed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. They were filed as privileged.

Mr. ROYBAL. And, as a privileged matter, it can be, filed without asking for unanimous consent, is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ROYBAL. Then the procedure used is a correct procedure, but nevertheless they have still accomplished the purpose that they wanted to accomplish with regard to waiving all points of order in a subject matter that is to be filed by midnight tonight, is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House still must adopt the resolutions to make them effective.

Mr. ROYBAL. But when must the House adopt that resolution? Is that to be adopted tonight, or is that a subject matter for tomorrow's deliberations?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. They are scheduled for consideration later in the week.

Mr. ROYBAL. That can then be anytime during the week, but it can start anytime tomorrow and any day thereafter, is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ROYBAL. Then since it was done under that particular procedure, the Rules Committee can proceed to bring in a rule waiving all points of order prohibiting debate of any kind and in so doing continue to violate the rights of individual Members of the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is not stating a parliamentary inquiry. I am not sure whether he is making a statement or making an inquiry.

Mr. ROYBAL. I am asking whether or not that would be the effect of the request that has been made and has already been filed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will not entertain any motions, I am certain, that will violate the rights of any individual on the floor.

Mr. ROYBAL. Well, I contend that that is the end result of it. I will no longer pursue the subject matter because things are already greased, the report filed, and a point of order cannot be called on the many violations in the so-called immigration bill.

IN TRIBUTE TO HON. JAMES WEAVER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, it is with a sense of privilege and great personal pleasure that I take time today to honor my beloved colleague and friend, JIM WEAVER. JIM like me, will be retiring from Congress at the end of this year.

JIM WEAVER was first elected to Congress in 1974, and has been ably representing Oregon's Fourth Congressional District ever since. JIM has lived in Eugene, OR, for almost 40 years, having moved from Iowa in 1947 after having had a career in the U.S. Navy. JIM enlisted in the Navy at the age of 17 and served on an aircraft carrier in the South Pacific. Returning to Eugene, he earned a bachelor of science degree in political science from the University of Oregon in 1952. After working as a publisher's representative for Prentice-Hall Co., he served as staff administrator for the Oregon Legislative Assembly Interim Committee on Agriculture. Then, from 1960 to his election to Congress, he was a builder and developer in Eugene.

I first got to know JIM WEAVER when he joined the House Interior Committee in 1975. He also serves on the Agriculture Committee and became a Chairman of its Subcommittee on Forests in his second term, a post he held for 6 years until 1983, when he became Chairman of the Interior Subcommittee on Mines and Mining, Forest Management and the Bonneville Power Administration. In 1985 he became chairman of the Interior Subcommittee on General Oversight, Northwest Power and Forest Management.

Although he long ago gave up his business as a builder, it is accurate to say that as a legislator JIM WEAVER has also been a builder. His legislative career is distinguished by many outstanding achievements. JIM helped write and pass the National Forest Management Act of 1976, which laid down the basic format for management of the National Forests under a rational planning process, something that had been desperately needed for decades. As a freshman Congressman, JIM managed the Payment in Lieu of Taxes Act, which has helped many local governments with large amounts of Federal land within their boundaries which are unable to obtain any tax or other revenue from these lands. JIM WEAVER also fought successfully to keep the sustained yield harvest amendment in the National Forest Management Act. This amendment prohibits the Forest Service from cutting trees in the national forests at a rate faster than the regeneration rate that the particular forest is capable of. JIM has also campaigned ceaselessly against the flagrant violations of this amendment of the act by the Reagan administration. JIM authored and passed the Wood Waste Utilization Act, so important from the standpoint of energy conservation.

Indeed, JIM WEAVER has been a leading spokesman and champion in Congress for energy efficiency and energy conservation. JIM authored and kept in law the cost-effective requirements of the Northwest Power Act and wrote and fought for the energy conservation provisions included in that bill. JIM was appointed to chair the Interior Committee's investigation into the Three Mile Island accident and has been a leading member of the Energy and Environment Subcommittee of the Interior Committee.

It has always been a source of wonder and admiration to me that JIM WEAVER, even though representing an area dominated by the timber industry, has managed to be a courageous champion of wilderness legislation, despite the continuous opposition of powerful members of that industry in his district. As chairman of the Public Lands Subcommittee, I could always count on his unfailing support in any fight over wilderness legislation. It should come as no surprise that he was the chief sponsor of the Oregon Wilderness Act of 1984, which added 1.2 million acres of designated wilderness in the national forests in Oregon.

It is not surprising, either, that JIM WEAVER has been nationally recognized by conservation groups all across America, who have given him numerous awards for his efforts to preserve our Nation's forests, water, energy, and other national resources. Congress and the Nation will be losing one of the great conservationist legislators of our age when JIM WEAVER retur[illegible] private life.

JIM WEAVER's interests, however, [illegible] way beyond conservation in the narrow sense. JIM is a deep and original thinker about the problems of maintaining peace and a viable national economy. A conversation with him is a delight and an education. JIM is a humanitarian and a fighter for the common man and the underdog. JIM has been honored many times by Bread for the World, Americans for Democratic Action, senior citizen organizations, and many others dedicated to assuring greater equality and fairness in the policies of our country. JIM's interests in these areas have been appropriately recognized by his colleagues who elected him cochairman of the House Populist Caucus.

My friends, I have given only the barest outline of JIM WEAVER's achievements in his 12 years in Congress. In any case, words and a mere recital of his accomplishments can scarcely convey the true measure of this man. JIM and I sit together as the No. 2 and No. 3 ranking Democrats of the Interior Committee. Our offices join each other. I think I can safely say that I have been closer to JIM than any other Member of the House. JIM WEAVER is a person of the highest intellectual honesty and personal integrity. He has contempt for sham and pettiness. He is a person with a clear head and a loving heart, a person of great compassion. In a world, and particularly in an institution, which has more than we would like of posturing and dissembling, JIM WEAVER stands out as a genuine person, a straight shooter. He will be missed by his colleagues. However, because he is returning to Oregon, JIM's constituents will see more of him. Losing JIM WEAVER as a Representative, they will be regaining him as a neighbor and friend. I, too, look forward to keeping him as a friend for the rest of our days.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEIBERLING. I am happy to yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from the State of Texas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I, in turn, thank my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio, for this opportunity to join him and associate myself with the remarks he has made, and is making, with respect to a man I consider one of the most outstanding Members of the House that I have had the privilege of knowing and working with in the 25 years I have been honored to serve in this body.

Like the gentleman at the well, who is sponsoring this special order, JIM WEAVER represents that genre, or that kind of Congressman, who, I believe, perhaps only in America, is really produced under our parliamentary system or unique representative system, and particularly in the deliberative representative body known as the House of Representatives.

I believe very sincerely that in our country, particularly at this time, one of the basic functions, besides being accessible to his constituents and not preferential accessibility to those who have contributed to his campaigns, that one of the main functions of a representative or a lawmaker or a public official in America today is to be cast in the role of an educator.

He has to take the lead in informing. Education implies importation of information and knowledge and our constituents, given the intricacies, the complexities to today's life, have to depend on those they elect to represent them to kind of point out the facts on issues.

They trust that we will have the fortitude and the intelligence to stand up and be counted, even in those very difficult issues that the constituents themselves may feel passion and great emotion. So that in his capacity, and judged by that standard, JIM WEAVER ranks very high in my estimation.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] has done us a great service by outlining, and I am sure, in an abbreviated form, some of the accomplishments, every one of them creative. Because JIM WEAVER has served in the House of Representatives, our natural resources, our forests, all of the other natural resources that have become so embattled to be protected, will be better preserved for our children and grandchildren because of the efforts made successfully, and sometimes with great difficulty, by JIM WEAVER.

I want to say, for the record, that the greatest tribute that time will give JIM WEAVER is this sense of acomplishment in this respect: Getting elected, getting reelected in itself, yes, in today's context, is an accomplishment in a way, but it really is only providing the license for us to come up and then do the work.

So many times, Members find it so difficult and so expensive to get elected that they feel that once having been elected, they have done the job. The truth is that JIM WEAVER is the kind of fellow that sought the job with well-defined purposes in mind and he was not dissuaded from carrying out those basic purposes.

It was evident, when one would listen to him speak in special orders, speak before committees and hearings on some issues that involved, not only his particular State and area, but ours, too, in other parts of the Nation.

I compare him very much and put him in the company of the distinguished gentleman who has given us this chance to have this special order, and make note and mark for the RECORD our high esteem, our great respect and our very, very sincere hope that JIM will be happy and successful in whatever he undertakes after he leaves the House.

I thank the gentleman again for this opportunity.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished colleague and dear friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] for those remarks.

I might say that the gentleman from Texas himself is an example of a person of great compassion and great intellectual perception and one who, like JIM WEAVER, has done much to enlighten and educate many of us here in this House.

I think his words should carry particular weight as a result of that.

Let me just say that one of the things that I particularly treasure about JIM WEAVER is that he has never pandered to the people who would want cheap and simple and easy solutions to the problems of our times. He is a person who wants to discuss real issues, not phony issues. You will not see him running ads in the political campaign or elsewhere trying to trump up phony issues that do not have any real relationship, but are merely creatures of the media experts of the kind we are seeing all too much right in this current election.

In my district, you can see them on Washington, DC, TV, et cetera. It really is a shame that so many would-be Members of Congress, or even existing ones, resort to that kind of tactic, instead of discussing the real problems before the people of this country.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], like the gentleman from Washington, has tried to discuss the real issues, the real problems, and I think we are all the richer for it.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEIBERLING. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Oregon, who, likewise, has tried to stick to discussing the real problems that we face and has, again, helped to educate us as a Member.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding me this time and thank him for taking this time so that the colleagues of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] can pay appropriate tribute to the contributions he has made in the time he has served in the House.

I want to say to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING], who has taken this time, that I think JIM would appreciate very much, as I know his supporters and his friends do, that it is the gentleman from Ohio, who has served so brilliantly, if I may say so, as the chair of the Subcommittee on Public Lands of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, that it is he who has taken out this time because JIM WEAVER is a man like the gentleman from Ohio, who believes in the land.

Among the many causes he has given his time to and his energies to, it has been the issue of this land of ours and how it is managed and how it is husbanded and how we exercise stewardship to ensure that it is handled wisely and well for future generations; so it is very appropriate that the gentleman has taken out this time.

I can think of many things that I might talk about tonight as I think about my colleague from southern Oregon. It is no secret, I am sure, I know it is not to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] and I think to those who know both of us well, that there has been times when the gentleman from Oregon and I have had serious fights. Frankly, I would tell the gentleman from Ohio that there have been times when months have passed since we first arrived here in Congress together when we would not even speak to each other, JIM and me, but there have been other times when the opposite has also been true, when we have had the most outstanding cooperation between the two of us. As a result, concrete benefits and results have been delivered to the people of Oregon. No better example of that, it seems to me, is the Oregon wilderness bill, which Mr. WEAVER and I worked on and worked very closely I might say with the gentleman from Ohio in getting that Oregon wilderness bill through his committee with his great assistance and today as a consequence Oregonians can enjoy the use of some of the most pristine natural areas and wildlands in Oregon and it will be there in perpetuity for their use and their children's use and those who follow them.

I will never forget the time that JIM and I had dinner together here in Washington, DC. I think we were just patching up one of our old fights when we agreed that the time had come to bury our differences on one of those things, the differences that come and go, and work together in concert shoulder to shoulder to get this Oregon wilderness bill through. We had an unforgettable dinner at a restaurant here in Washington, DC. I hope very much that we can dine again there shortly and reminisce a bit before he leaves Washington, because it would be appropriate to do so.

We plotted our cooperation and planned our strategy and tried to pass a wilderness bill in a lameduck session of that Congress. We failed. We came within an inch of doing it. Though we failed, we came back in the next Congress and working with most of the Members of the Oregon delegation, the House and the Senate working together, and certainly with the leadership of the gentleman from Ohio, we passed in Oregon a wilderness bill that I think will be a monument to the contributions that Mr. WEAVER has made.

One of the other things I would like to say tonight and it is worthwhile for Members to pause and think about has to do with something that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] mentioned just a minute ago and that is what is it like to be a Member of Congress who comes here not with the objective of just securing one's next reelection, but rather comes with a set of specific issue objectives that they want to achieve, real differences in policy for this country, some of which may be controversial, as the gentleman from Ohio knows, and how lonely that course can be for such a person.

You know, it is not easy to stake out a tough position that runs perhaps against the grain of public opinion polls or the prevailing political winds in any 1 given year, but JIM WEAVER consistently has done that. I have differed with him on some of those stances he has taken. I have agreed with him on others, but in each of them I have admired that all too rare willingness to risk personal popularity, to risk impatience with one's colleagues or even among one's constituents, to fight for that which he believes in.

There is no Member in this body that I have served with, and we did, as I indicated, arrive together as freshmen in 1975, who I have observed in the 12 years I have served here who has been better at risk-taking than JIM WEAVER.

JIM WEAVER was the first Member of the Northwest delegation to call attention to and ring out the warning about the financial house of cards of the WPPS public power system represented in Oregon in the Pacific Northwest. It was not very popular to do it at the time. He stepped on a few toes here in this body in doing so. Members thought it easy to kind of disassociate themselves from JIM's stand at the time; but do you know what, the gentleman from Ohio knows this and I know the people or Oregon now know it, the people of the region know it, JIM was right. JIM has been shown to be right, and that is only one of many, many instances where that tough, courageous, early stance has been shown to be right and stood the test of time. I suspect there are other cases of that kind that will be shown as the years unfold and with each passing year this irascible gentleman, who is a friend and a foe all wrapped up in one, who is loved and hated almost at the same time, is going to be looked upon as being someone who really set out some benchmarks as to what leadership is about in the Congress; more importantly, why it is important, no matter what one's instincts, one's sense of conscience, and to provide that kind of representation rather than simply read the polls, lick one's finger and hold it to the wind and then go accordingly. That is not JIM WEAVER.

The legacy JIM leaves for those to follow and for the delegation that now has to carry on the work of the State of Oregon is to match that, maybe coming down differently on issues, but match that sense of risk-taking in the pursuit of that which one thinks is right.

So I appreciate the gentleman from Ohio taking this time and for letting me participate for somebody I have had a great deal of respect for, both through the fights as well as through those rare and priceless moments of cooperation.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I thank my dear colleague, LES AUCOIN, for those penetrating remarks.

Let me just respond very briefly. The gentleman has put his finger on something we all admire about JIM and that is that he came here because he believed in certain things, not because he wanted the prestige of this office. Anybody who has been in this office very long knows that prestige is not all that great. In fact maybe you are less prestigious after you have been a Congressman than you were before.

Also, the fact that JIM has been prepared to lose because of what he believes, I think maybe that is one reason I relate to JIM. My first year in Congress in 1971, the first time I ever got a vote on an amendment I offered was an amendment to separate out the funds in the continuing resolution for the continuing of the Vietnam war from everything else. I said I thought it was unfair to make Members who oppose the war vote for the money in order to get the other things that we needed to keep our country and our districts going.

Well, it was about 1:30 in the morning and I only got 10 votes; but nevertheless, I felt that at least I had a chance to make my point. Of course, 3 years later the Congress voted to cut off all funds for the war, so I felt in the end vindicated. I know JIM has felt that way and has been vindicated on many issues. You win a few and lose a few, but if you do not try, you are never going to win any or accomplish anything.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield at this time to JIM's distinguished colleague, our friend, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN].

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I, too, very much appreciate the gentleman taking out this special order.

I was a director of the Gray Panthers in Oregon for about 7 years before I got elected to the Congress. Even in those years JIM WEAVER was a champion of senior citizens' concerns. I remember when the Gray Panthers were interested in bringing more visibility to senior citizens' concerns and wanted to start a senior citizens' intern program, JIM had just gotten elected and the whole group said sure enough, that JIM WEAVER would be very supportive of this kind of effort. In fact, we met with them and he very readily agreed to support that kind of effort and has been a champion of consumer issues year after year in the Congress.

In fact, one of the really memorable times that I had on senior citizens' issues in Congress was an instance where in effect the Federal Government had really expropriated the land of some senior citizens in JIM's area; something like 3 acres, I think was involved. JIM had passed legislation to help these older people. They were really very advanced in years. The President, believe it or not, vetoed the legislation. JIM came back and I think really made a very eloquent case and we overrode the veto. I think there are few instances like that anybody can recall where on an issue of senior citizens' rights we were able to override the President's veto.

So JIM's record on consumer issues and elderly issues is really one that is exemplary.

Now, my colleagues have talked about some others that are very important. One other area that I think has been particularly valuable has been in the area of oversight. Frankly, I think a lot of our colleagues would say that we do not do enough oversight here in the House of Representatives. We spend a lot of time trying to work on new bills, new laws, and new programs, but really not anywhere enough time trying to make what is on the books work a little bit better.

I serve on the Commerce Oversight and Investigation Subcommittee, which is chaired by a master of oversight, Chairman DINGELL of Michigan. I see the best really there on a regular basis; but I can tell my colleagues in the House that JIM just does an exemplary job in the oversight process. I think he has really brought a very healthy skepticism to the way these decisions are made by agencies, and frankly his work in the oversight process really ought to be a model for young Members who want to work in the oversight area.

Now, my colleagues have mentioned a lot of bills. It seems more and more we go today on the basis of how many bills you got passed. The fact of the matter is that JIM's record stands with anybody on that. He has been a sponsor of the timber relief legislation, which is just one example. In addition to the long line of bills he passed in our region, he was really the first, I think along with our colleague from Washington, Mr. LOWRY, to blow the whistle on the colossal mismanagement of the WPPS plant, something which our great peers are still trying to dig out from under.

Of course, there is his emphasis on conservation and renewable energy resources purchases to be made by the Bonneville Power Administration. Those have just been critical, because frankly, had we done more of that years ago, we might not have faced some of the WPPS decisions that were before us on a later basis and some mistakes might possibly have been avoided.

So I think there is no question that JIM has been part of that Oregon tradition that says you call them like you see them and you are not afraid or reluctant to speak out on those issues.

Wayne Morris really set a standard of conscience for us and JIM WEAVER has spoken out on that in that very same way. It is something so important and something to be long remembered.

So I appreciate my colleague taking the time and I know others of our colleagues want to speak as well.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I certainly thank RON WYDEN, our good friend and distinguished colleague, for those very appropriate remarks.

If I may just respond briefly, let me say that I have participated with JIM in many an oversight hearing. He has done an outstanding job on that.

I remember some years ago when we learned that the Justice Department and the Forest Service, the Agriculture Department of this administration, had really neglected their duties in not suspending some of the timber contracts in the Tongass National Forest in Alaska after a very clear indication that there had been all kinds of antitrust violations and conspiracies in restraint of trade by the companies involved and the running out of business of several smaller timber companies as the result, and yet the Forest Service and the Department of Justice just went narrowly on ignoring that. It was necessary to hold some rather extensive joint hearings to bring out the really outrageous things that had been going on.

JIM did a great job on that sort of thing, and I am glad that the gentleman from Oregon pointed that out.

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEIBERLING. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I join in the thanks to him for calling this special order for one of our outstanding Members whom we are all going to miss very much.

I would like to add just a few words to those which I heard as I walked over by two excellent Members of the Oregon delegation, Mr. AUCOIN and Mr. WYDEN, as well as the gentleman's, about what a pleasure it has been to work with JIM WEAVER, a person whom I have found to be of the highest integrity, who always put what he thought was right ahead of political expediency. He really had the courage and the ability to question the general consensus, which I have found JIM WEAVER found was usually wrong.

On the huge mistake of WPPS JIM WEAVER had the sense to say—when all the utilities came marching in and many labor unions came marching in, and most public power associations came marching in and just about all of the leadership of this institution came marching in, and all of the leadership of the other institution came marching in—to say, "Let's take a look at this." And if the position that JIM WEAVER continually tried to get this Congress to listen to for years on the disaster of the nuclear powerplants in the Northwest, WPPS, would have been listened to, it would have been a giant savings for many investors in this country and to the people of the Northwest in general. He was right and they were by and large wrong.

What did JIM WEAVER really have the ability to do? Just because all of that power came out, just because they came in with their $500-an-hour lobbyists and made those grand presentations with all those charts, JIM WEAVER said, "It doesn't make sense to me." And it did not make sense to him, and he was right.

I am particularly, delighted the gentleman in the well, Mr. SEIBERLING called this special order because JOHN SEIBERLING so often joined JIM WEAVER in their important fights for our national heritage and I might add, on other issues, our national conscience. I want to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to JOHN SEIBERLING for his service and his personal leadership. I want to say to the gentleman in the well that he too will be greatly missed both for his leadership and his friendship. Thank you JOHN.

Like JOHN SEIBERLING, JIM WEAVER understood that not only was there no conflict between good environmental policy and good economic policy, JIM WEAVER understood that they were the same thing—that good conservation policy made good economic policy. He consistently, consistently tried to get the rest of us to have the foresight that he had to see that, to see that those dollars wasted, that those megawatts wasted, that those fishery runs wasted, that those resources lost to the expediency of the moment, that he tried so hard and worked so hard to protect, were not only just good environmental policy, those were correct economic policy.

I am going to miss JIM WEAVER a lot, as is, I know, the gentleman in the well, and the Members who spoke before us.

JIM WEAVER did not get swept aside by a lot of flowery little things, we had a little thing in the bill and so we get some little very small, incidental project, by which we miss the whole massive question of what was really there. JIM WEAVER never missed those things.

He was the conscience that we all need; he had the courage to question what others would not question; he was the height of integrity; and he was an excellent representative of the people of the State of Oregon. I am going to miss him, and we are all going to miss him.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank our colleague, the gentleman from Washington, Mr. MIKE LOWRY, one of the fearless Members of this House and one of the straight thinkers, for those penetrating remarks.

In response, let me say that JIM WEAVER had not only the ability to see beyond the immediate issue presented, but he also had the ability to think constructively for his own part of the country, as the gentleman mentioned.

I remember when we held hearings about the Oregon wilderness bill a number of years ago, and I was out in Portland, OR, with JIM, and we held a hearing in I guess it was the courthouse there, and Chamber of Commerce of Portland came in, as I recall, and opposed the bill.

I said to them, "you know, you fellows really ought to rethink your position. I think that you are out of your cotton-pickin' mind. My State of Ohio would give its eyeteeth to have just one of these potential wilderness areas in our State because we would understand that it not only is an attraction for the business of tourism, but that it gives us the kind of outdoor recreational resource that businesses want to know exists before they decide to build a plant or put an office in the area, because they want to go where they know that they can attract the kind of people that they want to work in their business, and where their employees can have outdoor recreation."

I said, "Oregon has such magnificent potential for this purpose that they are just missing a tremendous trick in attracting high-technology industry to their State." I said that actually I should not be telling them this, because it means that they are being told that they have another way of attracting investment from my part of the country. JIM WEAVER understands that, and the chamber of commerce of this town is so shortsighted that all they are thinking about is to continue their one-industry economic base, which is timber, and not thinking about how to attract high technology and all the other industries that having wilderness areas will do. I think that probably by now they are beginning to realize that they do have that kind of an asset.

Of course, Portland is a very forward looking city, but I thought that their chamber of commerce was way behind JIM WEAVER.

Another time, JIM decided to hold some hearings in San Francisco on the forest management practices in northern California. We had some of the most interesting testimony that I have ever heard by people in the fishing industry in California who were in there starting to educate us and the rest of the State on the importance to the fishing industry of preserving the last vestiges of wilderness in California.

Why was it important? Well, they pointed out this, that 100 years ago the State of California had 6,000 miles of salmon spawning streams in the State of California, and today there are only 300 miles left.

Can you imagine the incredible economic loss that that represents? Where did it all come from? JIM WEAVER pointed out, and we all now realize, that it came from the logging practices on the granitic soils and steep slopes of the California mountains, so that the minute you cut that forest cover, the soils start to wash into the stream, the salmon spawning gravel beds silt up, and goodbye salmon run.

One of the interesting things that came out of that was that the Congressman who represented that area, and I will not mention his name, he is no longer with us, suddenly woke up to the fact that he had a real problem because he had been working to try to prevent wilderness in northern California, and all of a sudden the fishing industry, which is also big in his district, came in and said, look we want wilderness here. And JIM WEAVER got that all started in terms of our articulating it as a practical issue.

There is one other thing I think is important to say, and the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LOWRY] called it to my mind. I sat here last week in the gallery and I listened to some of my colleagues make some very kind, though somewhat exaggerated remarks about my career in Congress. I realize now, though, that although it is a little bit embarrassing because you know that they are exaggerating a little bit your virtues and playing down your weaknesses, that this is an important part of our relationships here. We are all so busy that we do not have time to talk to each other on a human relationship basis and share our feelings about what we like about other Members, and it does seems to me that this is an opportunity that is not only good for those who are receiving the accolades, and perhaps it is not even good for them to think that they are really as good as their colleagues have said, but it is important to know that there are other Members, including many who will still be here, like the gentleman himself, who share those kinds of ideals and those kinds of principles and that kind of admiration for a man of courage like JIM WEAVER.

So again I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Washington, Mr. LOWRY, and express my affection for him, as well as the gentlemen from Oregon, Mr. AUCOIN and Mr. WYDEN, as well as the gentleman from Texas, Mr. GONZALEZ and others who have spoken here.

Let me just say one other thing. The gentleman from Arizona, Chairman UDALL of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, told me he would try to be here this evening, but he might have to step out because of other commitments. But none of us who are chairman of subcommittees of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, as JIM WEAVER and I have been, could have accomplished very much without the fantastic leadership and the example and the moral support of Mo UDALL. The longer I think about it, the more I am aware of just what a tower of strength Mo UDALL is, not only for our committee but for all of the Members of this House. I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the privilege of working with Mo in all of these years on the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee and emulating his leadership in the field of conservation.

There is only one other thing I think of, and this has nothing much to do with JIM WEAVER, but the other committee I served on, the Judiciary Committee, has been chaired for all but the first 2 years when I was on it by the gentleman from New Jersey, PETER RODINO, one of the most outstanding men that it has been my privilege to know in my lifetime. I think it is entirely fitting that this week we will be considering a conference report on an immigration bill to deal with the serious problem of illegal immigration.

When I first came to the House in 1971 I was on the Immigration Subcommittee, and the very first thing I went to work on was the problem of illegal immigration. This issue was kind of like the famous novel by Charles Dickens, "Bleak House," which you will remember was about a lawsuit, Jarndyce versus Jarndyce, which went on for generations and generations until finally the estate itself was exhausted after all of the original beneficiaries had died. The immigration bill is probably the legislative equivalent of the "Bleak House" story.

But I think it looks like it is about to have a happy ending, and I am happy that before I leave this House after 16 years I may have the opportunity to vote on an immigration bill conference report which will go to the President and be signed into law.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEIBERLING. I am happy to yield to my very good friend and distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts, who is also a member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding and thank him especially for conducting this special order for our colleague, JIM WEAVER, from the State of Oregon. I have served for 10 years on the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee with JIM, as I have with the gentleman from Ohio, and with those two gentlemen, along with others, but most notably those two, we have fought many, many issues, almost always on the same side. I would be hard-pressed to be able to identify an issue where we have parted company.

I come here with a great deal of sadness because I do recognize that this is the passing of an era. JIM WEAVER is without question sui generis, one of a kind, somebody special, somebody who is different than other politicians. When you look up the word "politician" in the dictionary, JIM WEAVER's picture will not be next to that word. He created a special type of character, and by that I mean his character, his integrity, his sense of right and wrong, his sense of what ought to happen, and he let the chips fall where they may. He called every shot I think according to his own best judgment.

That is why I think it is so important for us to be here tonight honoring him, because even those who I think might have disagreed with him over the years have to recognize that he always acted with the utmost of integrity, always intellectually tried his best to represent the views that he believed this country should hold most dearest, and fought for the principles that he believed this country should stand for.

The issues of nuclear power, the issues of Alaska wilderness, the issues of nuclear weaponry in this country, all of those issues plus a myriad of others have been among the most controversial that our country has had to debate over the past decade. JIM WEAVER has always tried to put himself at the cutting edge of all of those issues. It was he who sat very patiently with me back 8 or 10 years ago and tried to explain to me what was going to go wrong with a group of nuclear powerplants called WPPSS, as he always told me they were so aptly named up in the Pacific Northwest. And I have to admit that even as he foretold as a seer this financial catastrophe which was moving almost gla-

It is not oftentimes a popular position to have to take in this Congress. There is a great deal of importance which is attached to collegiality; but he I think intuitively knew where the line of collegiality had to end and the position of principle and courage and integrity had to take over.

So I am very, very saddened by the passing out of this body of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER]. I sometimes in these special orders for Members who are leaving feel as though the body is in a casket at a wake, but that the person is living and looking up at us and listening to every single word that we are saying; so it is a kind of awkward procedure that we go through here, since he is really not passing away; he is just passing on, probably to a better and more satisfying life, but at the same time one that will not as much benefit the public, the country, and us who have known him and loved him over the years.

I am going to miss JIM WEAVER. I am going to miss being able to yield to the gentleman from Oregon, so I could take a brief respite in my questioning of particular ne'er-do-wells that might appear before the Interior Committee.

I am as well going to miss the gentleman from Ohio, because very rarely have there been any with the integrity, the intelligence, the good sense, the good judgment, the good humor that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] has brought to Congress in his many, many years, that far predate my coming to this body.

I have admired the gentleman; I have learned from the gentleman; and I very much regret that he is moving on; but he leaves a legacy, a very important legacy, and he will not be forgotten. I think that all of our actions here will in some way or another be touched by the words and the actions of the gentleman and trying to meet the high standards that he and others like him, a certain type of breeding that we who come from a lesser stock cannot quite appreciate; but the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL], the gentleman from New York; that type of background and breeding that represents, I believe, the highest form of contribution to public service that this country can know.

I thank the gentleman for all of his service here. I thank the gentleman from Oregon, wherever he may be. There is a certain omnipresent quality to Mr. WEAVER. You knew that wherever there was an issue of any importance, that somehow, some way, that he would get his two cents in and let everyone know what he felt about it.

I want to thank both of you for all of your service and let you know that you will be gone but not forgotten for a long, long time.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my good friend, ED MARKEY. One of the reasons why JIM and I can feel that we can leave Congress in good conscience is because we have people like ED MARKEY and MIKE LOWRY and LES AUCOIN and of the others who spoke here tonight to carry on after we have left.

If I thought we did not, I probably would have not decided to retire at the end of this year; but it makes it a lot easier when we have ED MARKEYS to carry on, and I know that he will. It has been a great pleasure to serve with the gentleman from Massachusetts and to be educated by the process of learning what you have to give us all in the fields that you are most interested in.

I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts and I want him to carry on for the cause of peace and nuclear safety and a decent world and a world that is still viable as a natural ecosystem.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman: Your wish is my command. I will try to serve as you have in this body.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Thank you. It has also been a pleasure to serve with the gentleman from Wisconsin, a member of the Interior Committee, Mr. MOODY. I am happy to yield to him.

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, I want to join in these comments to pay tribute to our friend from Oregon who is leaving us; leaving us in body but not in spirit, because as a very junior Member here, I will never forget my first session with JIM WEAVER, sitting near his side in the Interior Committee, and in other places, as he brought his wit and humor and rock-rib integrity to the proceedings.

I think JIM WEAVER will always be remembered here as a free thinker; a man who is untrammeled by the pomposity and the procedural vigors that sometimes overtake this body; a man who cuts to the heart of the issue; a man who is fearless in his views, paying little if any heed to the political consequences that may flow from his spoken word or voting record.

We always know that JIM will absolutely vote his conscience, at every moment; he will not yield to pressure from any groups. He is a fighter for the little guy. I know JIM WEAVER will always be a fighter for the little guy. He has always been a fighter for the person without the power and the resources that the big groups have.

JIM WEAVER is an insightful man, and despite his laid-back demeanor and his humor, he also gets to the heart of many important issues. His insights on the WPPSS debacle, and the fiasco surrounding that whole matter, I think really showed many people that JIM WEAVER was not just a fighter for the little guy, but also had a lot of insight into an impending disaster.

Many people have thought he was just out to lunch when he brought this matter up, but we all learned to respect his analysis in this regard, as we did in many other areas.

JIM WEAVER has fought for sanity respecting forest lands and management, and he has fought the, what you might almost call the "timber robber barons" who have insisted on the one hand of free-spirited capitalism and untrammeled, non-Government interference; on the other hand they have insisted on socialism in the form of roads to timber areas that should probably never be cut; and it has been delightful to hear JIM WEAVER take off after those groups.

Again, his analysis was accurate, in my judgement; it was certainly fearless. So JIM WEAVER should be remembered by us all as a man of free and independent spirit, a man with fearless political instincts, a man of good humor, a man who was never pompous, and a fighter for the little guy.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad to be here today to join in this special order.

Mr. SEIBERLING. I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MOODY], Mr. Speaker. He is another person whose continued presence in this body makes me feel a little bit better about leaving it; it is being left in good hands.

If I may just say one other thing, I think that JIM WEAVER's vision of the kind of world we hope we will have some day is probably best summed up in encapsulated form by the famous line from Robert Burns' poem, which ends:

"for a' that and a' that,
It's comin' yet,
for a' that,
When man to man
The world arun
Shall brithers be,
for a' that!"

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, our colleague JIM WEAVER is retiring from Oregon's Fourth Congressional District seat after 12 dedicated and successful years of service. JIM has made a name from himself as a defender of the environment. He has managed to balance the needs of environmental stability and the logging interests so crucial to his district and his State.

A self-proclaimed populist, JIM's eloquence and aggressiveness made him a force to be reckoned with immediately after his arrival to these Chambers over a decade ago. From his post as the chairman of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee's Subcommittee on General Oversight, Northwest Power and Forest Management, JIM's immense knowledge of environmental, conservational, and agricultural issues made that subcommittee an excellent forum for potential long-term ramifications of issues relating to the environment.

JIM's tenacity will be missed by all who enjoy serious deliberations on important policy questions. My wife Nancy and I wish JIM, his wife Jane, and the Weaver family the very best in all they do.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise to mark this day in honor of my distinguished colleague from Oregon, the Honorable JIM WEAVER who is retiring at the end of this Congress.

The gentleman from Oregon has done much for the country and for his constituency in particular as evidenced by his many victories in environmental legislation.

His accomplishments on the National Forests Management Act and other endeavors have helped to ensure that his pristine State maintains its natural beauty and abundant resources.

His awards and recognitions from Oregon and other conservation groups for his efforts to preserve America's resources are numerous and I'm sure familiar to all assembled here.

His honors awarded him by various groups such as Bread for the World, Americans for Democratic Action, and others have demonstrated his dedication to assuring greater equality and fairness in U.S. policies.

Mr. WEAVER has ably represented the Fourth Congressional District of Oregon for many years, since 1975 in fact, and is a recognized leader on matters affecting agriculture, conservation, and the preservation of a livable environment.

I would ask that my other colleagues take a moment to recognize Mr. WEAVER's outstanding accomplishments and his devotion to public service as a U.S. Congressman.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues today in paying tribute to JIM WEAVER, who is retiring from this House at the end of this term.

JIM WEAVER, has been one of the hardest working members of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. He served with distinction both as chairman of the Subcommittee on Mines and Mining, Forest Management and the Bonneville Power Administration, and the Subcommittee on General Oversight, Northwest Power and Forest Management.

I've known JIM as a tenacious and spirited figther. He's a man who has a keen instinct for the basics, doesn't back away from his principles, and through it all, he's always been as fair as he has been tough.

I've enjoyed working with JIM through the years. His environmental and conservation achievements are considerable. He helped write and enact the National Forests Management Act, chaired the Interior Committee's investigation of the accident at Three-Mile Island and was chief sponsor of the 1.2 million acre Oregon Wilderness Act.

The people of the Fourth Congressional District have been served well by this man from Oregon, and I wish him all the best in the years ahead.

JIM, thanks for being a friend, and thanks for all that you did.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of this special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO HON. G. WILLIAM WHITEHURST

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, we have requested this time for the purpose of paying deserved tribute to Congressman G. WILLIAM WHITEHURST, of Virginia, who is retiring at the close of this year.

This is an occasion for special memories for me, because BILL and I entered the House on the same day, 18 years ago. He came from an academic background and I from private industry, but it was soon obvious that we shared many of the same concerns, and our philosophies had a common ground.

We began service on the Armed Services Committee and all those with whom he has served can attest to his dedication, sincerity, and expertise in national defense matters. His has been a valuable contribution to our committee and his eloquence on the floor of this Chamber is well known.

Before coming here, BILL had already made a valuable and significant contribution to the future of those students with whom he had been associated at Old Dominion University in Norfolk. Now he will return to the university, under an arrangement which offers him a singular opportunity. His years here will obviously be reflected in his future academic endeavors and this in itself is fortunate for the university.

His investment in public service has paid rich dividends for his constituents in the Second Congressional District. He has been a good and effective Congressman, and he can leave with the assurance that he has done his best and that he has the es[illegible] whelming majority of h[illegible]

His return to the worl[illegible] lectures, and report car[illegible] him still another opportu[illegible] His knowledge, his experie[illegible] keen sense of motivation wi[illegible] students all the more rich be[illegible] his decision.

BILL, we wish you well. We th[illegible] you for your fine service here, a[illegible] trust that the coming years will provide both you and Janie satisfaction and enjoyment.

□ 1915

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS].

Mr. PARRIS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am deeply honored today to have the opportunity to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to one of Virginia's most esteemed public servants, the Honorable G. WILLIAM WHITEHURST, who is leaving Congress this year after 18 years as one of Virginia's most capable and able Representatives.

As much as any Member of this body, it has been my privilege to have been a witness to the leadership, dedication, and selflessness that has characterized the service of Congressman "BILL" WHITEHURST.

When I was first elected to Congress in 1972, I was very fortunate to be able to seek counsel and guidance from BILL WHITEHURST. He had then, and he continues to have today, a keen intellectual capacity to grasp even the most difficult issues facing our Commonwealth and our Nation and to priortize them as to their potential impact on the daily lives of the people of Virginia.

I am pleased today to have this forum with which to thank BILL WHITEHURST for his assistance to me over the years and to salute him for his legislative and political skills and his distinguished career—a career that began with his education in the public schools of Norfolk, VA—continued in the skies of Japan as he saw combat in World War II—and began its dramatic ascent in the field of education as he graduated from Washington and Lee University and the University of Virginia and joined the faculty of Old Dominion University, where he served as dean of students prior to his election to Congress in 1968.

Since he has been in Congress, BILL WHITEHURST has been known and acknowledged as a Member of Congress who not only was willing to share his skills and abilities with his colleagues, but also as an international expert on many of the pressing defense and international issues of the day.

As a former ranking member of the House Select Committee on Intelligence and as a leading member of the House Armed Service Committee, BILL WHITEHURST has been an effective and forceful spokesman for an efficient, flexible, and mobile military capability.

As a founder of the Congressional Military Reform Caucus, he has earned national recognition for his efforts to ensure that America's defense funds are spent wisely. He has also been recognized for his service on the House Ethics Committee and his work with the House of Representatives Page Board.

BILL WHITEHURST. He has been a steadfast voice in his efforts to preserve the future of Virginia and America for our children and our children's children. He has been an exceptional Representative for Virginia's Second Congressional District for the past 18 years. And * * * he has been my very good friend.

I will miss him. My colleagues will miss him. Virginia will miss him. But he is on to grander and perhaps more rewarding activities * * * and we wish him God's speed.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in yielding to my good friend, FRENCH SLAUGHTER, with whom I served in the Virginia General Assembly for many years and later he served as rector at the University of Virginia.

Mr. SLAUGHTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I am happy to have this chance to pay a small tribute to BILL WHITEHURST, who has served in Congress for 18 years representing a district now composed of Norfolk and Virginia Beach. I did not know BILL when he was elected, but I certainly knew him from the time he was elected, very well by reputation, and later I came to know him personally.

But he has epitomized the best kind of service that a person can render in Congress and render to his constituents.

He knows his district, and I have never heard anyone in his district say other than the fact that BILL WHITEHURST had been a fine public servant for the area he represents in Congress.

He is recognized in Virginia as one of the outstanding men in public life.

He has had a distinguished career in education, and he is returning to education after his service in the Congress. His work has been cited here by Mr. PARRIS and others during his service in Congress. I think that the people of America, people all across the country owe BILL WHITEHURST a debt of gratitude for the great work that he has done in building up the defense capabilities of this country and preserving its freedom and safety.

He is a man of great character and intellect, and a winning personality, and his service to his country will always be remembered by those who realize the necessity for a strong defense and who realize that the American people must always be ready to serve their country.

He has served that country in a magnificent manner as the great patriot he has always been.

Mr. DANIEL. I thank the gentleman for his comments.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

Mr. HUNTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I will not take too long because I know other members of the Virginia delegation have important things to say. What I want to say about BILL and about all the Virginia delegation that I have always greatly admired the genteel quality with which you conduct your affairs in politics and present yourselves on the House floor and help to run this Nation as Virginia leaders have done since we were a Nation.

I am most impressed by one quality that BILL WHITEHURST has, in spades, and that is his kindness.

I can recall as a junior member of the House Armed Services Committee coming into a world that was very confusing, with all of the various legislation that was being proposed and all of the organizational problems that a young Member of Congress has.

BILL WHITEHURST, along with the gentleman who is in the well right now [Mr. DANIEL] did a great deal to allay that confusion and intimidation that the system imposed on me as a new Member.

One thing, a second thing that I am really impressed with BILL is his consistency. I have watched the House since 1980, when I came in, and I think other Members of the House recall that we had a strong support for national defense. The President came in riding on the crest of the proposition that this country had not addressed its defense requirements appropriately and needed to rebuild America's defenses, and we saw it go down from that high point in 1981 to lower ebbs and troughs in 1982 and 1983 and recently when the defense budget has been cut and slashed in many important areas, but BILL WHITEHURST never wavered. While public opinion rocked back and forth for defense, against defense, he was always consistently for the defense of America and had consistently a long-range view.

So I will simply finish by saying that when the Founding Fathers of this country put together our three branches of Government, I think they had a vision of the House of Representatives that was filled with BILL WHITEHURST's, with people of impeccable character and tremendous dedication to the defense of America.

I thank my colleague for yielding.

Mr. DANIEL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, this gentleman also served in the Virginia General Assembly at the same time I did. He, Mr. SLAUGHTER, and I were all Democrats at that time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BATEMAN. I thank the distinguished gentleman, the very genial gentleman from Danville for yielding to me. I thank him for taking out this special order.

All of us in the Virginia delegation have a special feeling for one another, and that feeling certainly is as warm in my heart as to the gentleman in the well as it is to any gentleman in the Virginia delegation without regard to which aisle of the House they normally occupy.

Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to take part in one of those bittersweet ceremonies which mark the end of each Congress—a tribute to a departing colleague.

This occasion, however, is both more bitter and more sweet than most. For in bidding farewell to BILL WHITEHURST, I feel a special sense of loss—loss of the day-to-day guidance and companionship of a man who has been a mentor and a dear friend since my earliest days in this House. Yet at the same time, I am honored to be among those saluting BILL for all that he has been and all that he has done since he arrived here in January 1969.

All of us are aware of Congressman WHITEHURST's brilliant record in the Committee on Armed Services. He brought to that committee the profound insights of an authentic expert in our Nation's history, holder of a doctor's degree in that discipline and long a professor at Old Dominion University in Norfolk. Before his election to Congress, he served as a news analyst for a major television station in Norfolk, bringing an historian's insights to the developments of the day. He has often served that function here in Congress, reminding us of our heritage, urging that we take the long view in our actions and deliberations.

Over the years he has added to his store of knowledge of defense matters and how they interact with foreign policy. Today, I know of no Member who surpasses his expertise in these fields. I would only say to BILL tonight, please keep in touch with your old colleagues and let us know if we are going astray. Your counsel will always be needed and welcome.

BILL WHITEHURST is the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Readiness, a founder of the Military Reform Caucus, a former distinguished member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and for the last 2 years has performed not-always-welcome duties on the Ethics Committee.

It is a pleasure to report that BILL is not retiring. Instead, he is returning to the academic environs whence he came, once again taking up teaching duties at Old Dominion University. Just think of the good fortune of the students in those classes—to be instructed by a man who combines the broad perspective of history with an in-depth knowledge of present-day government and politics.

I'll conclude by saying simply that I know I speak for my colleagues when I express the hope that BILL and his lovely wife, Janie, will return often to Washington and grace us with their presence as they have for so many years.

□ 1930

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. Bosco].

Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, I have not had the privilege of a long friendship will BILL WHITEHURST, nor have I served on committees with him, but I do want to express my personal sense of loss at seeing him retire as a Member of the Congress. I first met BILL on a trip to Taiwan, where he led our small delegation. I was impressed with the poise and diplomacy he employed in helping us spread American goodwill to this important area of the world. During this trip, and afterwards, I have come to know BILL as a thoughtful, kind, and refreshingly intellectual Member of Congress. He is always a true gentleman. Most of all, I know I speak for his many friends here in the House when I say we will miss his wonderful humor. Humor comes naturally for BILL, but his manner is so soft spoken that his dry wit can be lost to those not fortunate enough to be attentive.

BILL WHITEHURST's sense of history and perspective are so badly needed in this House. I can only say that we will miss him and his wife Janie enormously, and that I, for one, envy each of his future students at Old Dominion University because, were I younger, I would give anything to sit in one of his classes. I feel fortunate to have served with him these last 4 years as a Member of the Congress.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California. The gentleman characterized him properly.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. I also thank the gentleman for holding this special order for our colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, I want to just comment briefly about three aspects of BILL WHITEHURST's service.

First, as a fellow historian, I have enjoyed very much serving with a real mentor, somebody who had come to this Congress and had brought the best kind of tradition of public service and had brought to bear his academic knowledge.

Second, I would commend to all of my colleagues and to political science and history professors everywhere the two volumes that BILL has published so far of his memoirs. I think that those memoirs give you as good an insight into how the U.S Congress currently works and are, frankly, as candid as anything I have written by a Member of the Congress. I think they are a refreshingly honest, and yet a warm and a positive view of this Congress. I think they would be good for most students to read, and I would encourage most political scientists to look at them as potential sources of knowledge about the U.S. Congress. I might mention in passing they are available in paperback. I would strongly recommend that our colleagues look at them.

Finally, one of the highlights of my service has been to work with BILL WHITEHURST in founding the Military Reform Caucus. BILL played a very unusual role in that he is a senior member. He is the second ranking Republican in the Armed Services Committee. He had a very responsible position on the Intelligence Committee. Yet he felt that it was necessary to take a new look and to take a fresh approach to rethinking how we manage defense in the United States. In 1981, it was in his office that the Military Reform Caucus was founded. I think it is a very unusual thing for a man of his background, with his position in the established Halls of Congress to have lent his credibility and his prestige, and he served as cochairman for the first several years of the Military Reform Caucus. And with the recent passage of what Senator BARRY GOLDWATER called the most important legislation on defense in the 34 years that Senator GOLDWATER served in Congress, I think that BILL WHITEHURST can leave feeling that in many different ways, as an academic, as a historian, as an intellectual and as a good citizen, he contributed to developing the kind of Congress and the kind of defense he wanted to when he came to this Congress.

I really thank the gentleman from Virginia for hosting this. I hope that wherever he goes, whatever he does, BILL WHITEHURST will realize that in many of our hearts there was a very warm spot of gratitude for the sincerity and the commitment and the integrity that BILL WHITEHURST brought to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I know that Mr. WHITEHURST and Jennie deeply appreciate all the kind remarks that have been made here on the floor this evening about them.

Let me say in conclusion that this body can ill afford to lose men with the foresight and the integrity of BILL WHITEHURST.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Virginia, BILL WHITEHURST, is retiring at the close of this session to rejoin the faculty of Old Dominion University. He deserves our very best wishes as he embarks upon yet another career because he has devoted 18 years of conscientious service to this body and to the people who have elected him for nine terms running.

BILL is one of the most devoted and honest men I have had the pleasure of knowing in my service in the House of Representatives. He is dedicated to a strong defense and his record on armed services certainly reflects that thinking. On the other hand, he does not march in lockstep with defense proponents who would spend heavily on defense weapons, machinery, and systems to the detriment of our troops being combat ready. Yes, he is for a strong defense. But BILL is also for sound fiscal policy and believes that a strong defense begins with our servicemen and women, whose proper training is uppermost in his thinking.

I served with BILL on the Armed Services Committee when I first came to Congress in 1975. He was for military reform long before it became a catch phrase around these Halls in the name of deficit reduction. He spoke of the need for reform when spending wasn't nearly the issue it is today. His ideas on reform were to strike a balance between necessary spending for current and ongoing projects and for research and development of new weapons systems. He reasons that you take care of the tried and true lines of defense while moderately spending on new and better ways to protect the citizens of this country. And he's got a lot of support for his thinking from colleagues who know of his expertise in this arena and who know that he carefully researches the issues.

BILL is a most thoughtful and learned colleague and his absence will be keenly felt in this House. I know the decision to leave must have been a difficult one for BILL because he greatly believes in this institution. But he also has a great affection for teaching and for Old Dominion University and he looks forward to that challenge with as much relish as he faced the challenges of politics and legislating. So I bid you a very fond farewell, BILL, and wish you success and happiness as a member of Old Dominion's faculty.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, my good friend and colleague, Congressman BILL WHITEHURST, will be leaving the 99th Congress after 18 years of distinguished service on behalf of his State and Nation.

During the time I have known BILL, several features have clearly defined why this man, who has so ably represented the Second District of Virginia, has become one of the most respected Members in this body.

BILL WHITEHURST will leave a legacy in the House of Representatives for being both a gentleman and a scholar. Prior to his election to Congress, BILL WHITEHURST was both a professor of history and dean of students at Old Dominion University. He will return to this institution after serving out his term and begin again the life of an academician. Mr. Speaker, with all sincerity, I can say that the loss of BILL WHITEHURST will leave a void in this institution—but will add tremendously to the future of Old Dominion University and the many students he will educate and guide with his principles and wisdom.

BILL and I have traveled together on several assignments overseas as delegates to the North Atlantic Assembly and I have greatly enjoyed my association with him. My wife, Anne, and I have valued our friendship with BILL and Janie WHITEHURST. We wish them all the best in their future endeavors.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join my colleagues today to pay tribute to my colleague from Virginia, BILL WHITEHURST, as he nears the end of a distinguished 18-year career in the House of Representatives.

It has been an honor to serve in this House for the past 6 years with BILL WHITEHURST. He has been a valuable asset to the Virginia delegation through his work on the Armed Services Committee and he will leave a void in our delegation that will be difficult to fill.

BILL WHITEHURST is a man of intellect and many talents who has devoted his life to the service of others. He holds bachelor's, master's, and doctor's degrees and began serving his country in the Navy during World War II. As an educator, he served our future generations at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, VA, and became a well-known public figure in the Norfolk area as a television journalist, prior to his election to Virginia's Second District seat in Congress in 1968.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, he has recognized the importance of maintaining a strong defense posture while working to foster a strong maintenance program for the Armed Forces and to improve the pay and benefits for our Armed Forces personnel.

He's also a man of compassion who, working with his wife Janie, has devoted endless hours to saving the lives of animals and working for the enactment of the Animals Protection Act.

I salute BILL WHITEHURST as an outstanding public servant and appreciate so much his wise counsel. He will be missed. He's been quoted as saying, "It's very important to believe there is a life after Congress. And there is," He has given 18 distinguished years of service to the Nation and it's been a pleasure to have served in Congress with BILL WHITEHURST. I wish him well as he moves on to his "new life," returning to teaching at Old Dominion University.

Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Speaker, this is a very special pleasure for me to say a few words about my distinguished colleague and friend, BILL WHITEHURST. During my 4 years in Congress, I've worked closely with BILL WHITEHURST on many issues that have affected our Tidewater, VA districts.

From the very first day that I entered Congress, I have been able to count on BILL WHITEHURST for sound advice, for generous cooperation, and for his valued friendship. Whenever I needed his time or his counsel, BILL was always there, always willing to lend a hand.

It is to BILL WHITEHURST's great credit that he never let partisan considerations get in the way of his serving the people. BILL WHITEHURST set the example; he made cooperation the hallmark of congressional relations in Tidewater. Whenever an issue came up before the House that affected the Tidewater region, BILL WHITEHURST would always treat it as an areawide issue, and not one that just concerned his district. For BILL, his concern was for the welfare of all Virginians in the Tidewater area.

I have also had the privilege of serving with BILL WHITEHURST on the Armed Services Committee. We've worked together on many issues of great concern for America's national security. I know that every member on Armed Services has nothing but the highest respect for BILL WHITEHURST's keen intellect, his wealth of knowledge in all aspects of defense matters, and above all, his dedication to America and our national security.

BILL, we will sorely miss your wisdom and your counsel on the Armed Services Committee. We are proud of your efforts on behalf of military reform and your insistence that defense funds be spent more effectively. You have made major contributions to America's defense and you have served your Nation proudly.

We've come to know BILL WHITEHURST not only through his activities in committee and on the floor of the House, but also through his writings. In BILL WHITEHURST's diaries, we have seen the thoughtful, erudite, and introspective side of our colleague. We have seen a man who has a keen understanding of the legislative process, and works tirelessly for his constituents, who has great concern for the important issues facing us today, and who has a deep love of his country.

The students at Old Dominion University are going to benefit tremendously from BILL's experience and his perspective. I hope that BILL will do more writing, will lecture widely, and will share his vast knowledge of Government, national defense, and international affairs. I hope, BILL, that you will be back in Washington and will visit with us often.

Virginia's Second Congressional District has been ably served during these past 18 years, not only by BILL WHITEHURST, but by his dedicated and talented wife Janie. This has to be one of the best bargains in our lifetime—the second district has been served by not just one, but two WHITEHURSTs for the price of one.

BILL and Janie, all of us in this Chamber will miss you. We will miss your warmth, sincerity, and your dedication to public service. We will miss your friendship. We wish you both the best of health, the chance to catch up with your grandchildren, and the opportunity to take on new projects and new challenges. Godspeed to both of you.

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the opportunity to participate in this special order in honor of our good friend and colleague, Congressman BILL WHITEHURST from Virginia. Congressman WHITEHURST will be leaving at the end of the 99th Congress, and we all wish him well as he returns to his teaching at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, the school with which he was associated prior to coming on the Washington scene.

In my 7 years on the Armed Services Committee, I have very much enjoyed working with BILL WHITEHURST. He is a dedicated American, who takes the defense of our country very seriously. Because of his good work, in the last few years, he has shared in the rebuilding of our defensive strength so that we can continue to have a deterrence, knowing, of course, that it would be great if we could reduce the level of arms in the world but this would be impossible without a strong defense. Perhaps BILL WHITEHURST understands the need for negotiating from a position of strength better than most people.

I have had the pleasure of working not only in the full Armed Services Committee with BILL but also on subcommittees and in conference. Always, he has been a person who is easy to work with, who understands the process, and who is effective in carrying out the functions of the committee.

It was a great opportunity for my wife Nancy and me to lead an Armed Services Committee trip to the northern flank of NATO and to have BILL WHITEHURST as the ranking Member, along with his wife Janie. It was a working trip in every sense of the word, and I shall never forget the dedication of BILL WHITEHURST in putting on paper all of the things that we saw and heard. Onboard the aircraft, he was constantly writing, yet taking time to enter into delightful conversation with others around him. As you probably know, BILL is a prolific writer, and I hope one of these days to be able to read all of his publications. Without a doubt, they will command long periods of my time because the gentleman from Norfolk has a flare for writing in an interesting manner. I suspect that in his retirement from Congress, he will be using his pen even more to chronicle many of the exciting events which occurred during his tenure in Congress.

When BILL WHITEHURST leaves the 99th Congress, he will do so with the satisfaction of knowing that he has done his job well. He has distinguished himself here in this body and will continue to do so at Old Dominion University and in whatever personal pursuits he chooses to follow. We wish him well. May God bless you, BILL, your wife Janie, and all of your family.

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, today we recognize one of the long-standing and outstanding members. G. WILLIAM WHITEHURST retires at the end of this session with an 18-year record of dedicated public service. He has served the constituents of his second Virginia district and this Nation in a most conscientious and loyal fashion. I would like to praise BILL for his untiring efforts and to say how much I've appreciated having the opportunity to serve with him in this Chamber.

As the second ranking Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee, BILL has supported a strong military and has done much to ensure that our Armed Forces have kept pace with the changing technology of the times. He as also taken another issue to heart that of animals rights, being in the forefront of enactment of the Animal Protection Act which would set humane standards for both research labs and zoos. It is this regard for all living creatures that perhaps best exemplifies BILL's deep felt concern for the safety and preservation of life in general and for the environment in which we reside.

Having earlier distinguished himself as a professor at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, BILL will return to the faculty there where I am sure he will continue to impact his knowledge and expertise to all he comes in contact with. We wish him well as he leaves this Chamber; we will miss his many contributions to this body.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, BILL WHITEHURST has been a respected member of the House for the past 18 years and I am proud to have known and worked with him for the past 8 years since I first came to Congress.

I have thoroughly enjoyed reading his first two books, Diary of a Congressman and Abscam and Beyond regarding his experiences as a Congressman. I have found them to be extremely candid and a witty discussion of his life in Congress. I anxiously look forward to the publication of his third book which will bring him up to his retirement.

The House's loss however will be academia's gain as BILL will be returning to Old Dominion University where he distinguished himself before coming to Congress in 1969. I want BILL to know we all appreciate what he has given to this institution and wish him and his family the very best in Norfolk.

Mr. BADHAM. Mr. Speaker, when BILL WHITEHURST returns to the faculty at Old Dominion University following this, his final term in the House of Representatives, our loss here will be to the tremendous benefit of the students who will gain from his experience, knowledge, and understanding.

When I came to this House in 1976 and became a freshman member of the Armed Services Committee, BILL already was a veteran of 7 years standing and had been fighting the battle for higher military spending to rebuild our national defense. I learned a great deal about what is and is not important for members to concern themselves with in committee deliberations by talking with and listening to BILL WHITEHURST.

With his background as a history professor and television news analyst, BILL brought to the House and his committee assignments a more thoughtful, scholarly and logic-based approach to problem solving. This ability to place major issues into perspective has helped all of us in our evaluation of such compelling matters as funding for chemical weapons, Pentagon reforms, Central America and many others.

Of course, in addition to his dedication to armed services matters, BILL has focused on his other legislative passion—the protection of animals. He and his wife, Jennette, have worked hard on legislation that would expand humane standards for both zoos and research labs.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that BILL WHITEHURST represented his constituents well and with honor. He ran unopposed for the past 10 years and certainly could have held his seat for as long as he wanted to be in the House. However, he has chosen to take his considerable talents back to academe and in that endeavor, I offer my very best wishes.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, as we reach the end of the 99th Congress, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to our friend and colleague, BILL WHITEHURST of the Commonwealth of Virginia. After 18 years of dedicated productive service to our Nation here in Congress, BILL will be retiring and returning to Old Dominion University in Norfolk where he distinguished himself before coming to Washington.

I know we will miss the guidance and leadership BILL provided on the Armed Services Committee. Being a supporter of strong national defense and knowing the importance of maintaining a credible defense posture, BILL has fought many long and hard battles on our behalf to prevent a dangerous decline in our national security. His successors on the Subcommittees on Military Installations and Readiness will have to work very hard to equal the outstanding job done by BILL WHITEHURST.

I am envious of the students at Old Dominion who will have the opportunity to discuss with BILL his experiences in Congress and debate current political issues in an academic setting. If his record and service in Congress are an indicator, the Old Dominion community will be receiving a great asset with the return of Congressman WHITEHURST.

I know the people of Norfolk and Virginia Beach have much to be proud of knowing they have been represented by one of the most outstanding Members of Congress for the past 18 years. Like them, I am sorry that this most capable, honest representative will not be returning to the 100th Congress. BILL WHITEHURST has done a most praiseworthy job in Congress serving the people of Virginia and this Nation most admirably. I wish him the best of success at Old Dominion and would, again, like to thank him for all the help he has provided to me since I came to Congress in 1974.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in paying tribute to the Honorable G. WILLIAM WHITEHURST, who will be retiring from the Congress after 18 years of dedicated service to his constituents in the Second Congressional District of Virginia, and to the people of this Nation.

BILL and I have worked together on several occasions as members of the NATO delegation, and I have come to know him for his fairness, his intellect, and for his legislative and leadership abilities.

Before coming to Congress, Congressman WHITEHURST served our country with distinction in the U.S. Navy as an aviation radioman during World War II, and received his doctorate in American diplomatic history from West Virginia University. Also, he taught history at Old Dominion University, and at the end of the 99th Congress, he will be returning to the faculty at Old Dominion in Norfolk, Elected to the 91st Congress in 1968, Congressman WHITEHURST has ably served as the ranking minority of the Subcommittee on Readiness of the House Armed Services Committee, and as a member of the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities. He also has earned the respect of his colleagues in the House of Representatives for his service as a member of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

BILL is a fine legislator, and a Congressman of compassion and courage, who has provided exemplary service to his constituents and to our Nation. He will be missed by those of us in the House of Representatives who have had the pleasure of working with him.

Mr. Speaker, I extend to BILL WHITEHURST my best wishes for continued success in devotion to the highest principles.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleagues in this special order to bid farewell to our colleague from Virginia, BILL WHITEHURST.

I have had the privilege to serve with BILL on the Armed Services Committee. We worked together on the Installations and Facilities Subcommittee. He has been a true friend of the service personnel around the world, and has been strong in his support of a strong national defense. We will miss his leadership on our subcommittee.

BILL has given the people of Virginia and this great country 18 years of distinguished service. He can be proud of the record he is leaving behind here in the House. I know he is looking forward to return to the faculty at Old Dominion University. He has been "on loan" from ODU these past 18 years and now they will have the benefit of his experiences in Washington.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WALDON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to take my special order at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

FAMINE AID: WERE WE DUPED?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, there is a tragedy going on in Africa, and that tragedy is not, as most people would guess, in South Africa. South Africa has many problems, but as I was flying home to my district last week, it was brought to my attention by a fellow traveler that in the Reader's Digest of October there is an article written by a doctor who has worked in Ethiopia for some time telling in some detail of the atrocities, the horrible human drama that has unfolded in that country that is taking an untold number of human beings to their graves.

There are problems in Tanzania, there are problems caused by the Communists in Mozambique and Angola, and problems in South Africa with apartheid and with the Communist ANC there.

But I think that the problem that is of the greatest magnitude is the problem that is faced by the people of this world that is unfolding in Ethiopia.

I do not like to read to my colleagues who are sitting back in their offices and to the people who might be watching across this country, but tonight I ask the indulgence of those who might be watching because I think this is extremely important.

This article was written by a doctor named Rony Brauman. It goes like this:

On a hot afternoon in early 1985, I stood on the tarmac of the airport at Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, and lived a privileged moment. As cargo plane after cargo plane landed, others circled overhead, awaiting their clearance to come in. The Western world's air bridge to Ethiopia was in full swing. In whatever direction I looked, those hulking giants, symbols of the best that is in humanity, were unloading food and grain, tents, blankets, jeeps, even fully equipped hospitals.

Shocked by the terrible images of starvation brought into their homes by television, millions of ordinary citizens throughout Western Europe and North America spontanesouly dug into their pockets and gave unreservedly to the charities that asked for their help. The surge of generosity that I witnessed that day only grew greater as the months passed. A host of rock stars in America recorded the spectacular best-seller "We Are the World" (more than 16 million copies sold) and dedicated 90 percent of the proceeds to African famine relief. Irish musician Bob Geldof founded Band Aid and its American counterpart Live Aid, and organized the hugely successful 16-hour, all-star rock marathon held simultaneously in Philadelphia and London, and beamed to the whole world via satellite. More than $100 million was gathered in response to the call for help.

In the months that followed, the euphoria that swept over me that day at the airport gradually gave way to bitter disappointment while we watched the cynical betrayal of the international-aid campaign. Here is the harsh truth: your donations have been massively misappropriated by Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam's Soviet-dominated regime. Money, food and equipment intended for the starving have been hijacked by the authorities and used as a means of pressure on the anti-government peoples of Ethiopia's northern provinces.

Like bait in a trap, Western-donated food is being used to lure the starving from their villages into deportation centers. From there, the people are herded away at gunpoint to barely disguised labor camps.

In the words of my colleague and predecessor at Doctors Without Borders, Dr. Claude Malhuret, now France's Secretary of State for Human Rights: "Western governments and humanitarian groups unwittingly fueled—and are continuing to fuel—an operation that will be described in hindsight in a few years' time as one of the greatest slaughters of our time."

Hidden Famine. We at Doctors Without Borders should have known better. We had first applied to enter Ethiopia in 1982 when the country was in one of its cyclical periods of drought. Since our request was ignored, we served clandestinely in the northern provinces of Tigray and Eritrea, treating the sick and starving. In this region of unrest, we had seen the scorched-earth tactics of Mengistu's army in its attempt to suppress the rebel fronts.

The army's drives into enemy territory were a deliberate attempt to ruin that secessionist part of the country and one of the main reasons why the famine reached such dramatic proportions. Villages suspected of supporting the rebels were systematically pillaged, their stocks of grain confiscated or burned, their livestock slaughtered. Dispossessed of reserves, the peasants were helpless when the cycle of drought struck again. This made them prime candidates for "resettlement" in the southwest, where they could no longer help the rebels.

For two years the Mengistu government hid the famine from the world. But after a lavish celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Ethiopian revolution—at a cost of $100 million—the government threw open the doors of the country to the Western press. With the rush of TV crews and newspapermen, alarming stories about the suffering were encouraged. The government now did its best to magnify the famine, flying journalists to carefully chosen locations. It took us months to understand that the aim was to make the West pay for the resettlement scheme and help the war effort in the north.

As Western food and medical aid flooded in, the Soviets sent arms. Grain rotted on docks and in warehouses, because the only trucks available belonged to the army, which did not consider food transport for the starving a priority. Wheat ships were made to wait several days at anchor while Soviet freighters unloaded tanks, ammunition and cement. In November 1984, Ethiopian authorities even brazenly demanded that the United States pay for the rental of government-owned vehicles to distribute the $100 million of emergency aid that it had sent to Addis.

If Americans were naïve in their response to the Marxist government's call for help, so, too, were Doctors Without Borders. We had eagerly accepted the Ethiopians' sudden invitation to join the struggle against famine. By late fall of 1984, we had two teams working in the worst areas. In those days before the international rescue effort was in full swing, there was a shortage of food, medication and supplies. In the vast camp of Korem, 385 miles north of Addis in Welo Province, the 100,000 inmates were dying by the hundreds before we could give them the least care.

Terror Raids. When, food, tents and blankets first arrived, Dr. Brigitte Vasset, chief of our medical crew at Korem, joyfully ordered all 150 tents to be set up and the blankets distributed: the cold season was already on the land, complicating and worsening the problems of mainutrition. Hardly had her order been given when the camp's Communist Party chief stormed into Dr. Vasset's consulting room to countermand it. "We don't want the camps to be comfortable," he said.

It was a question of life or death, not comfort, but the message was clear. We had assumed that the camps were relief stations where the peasants could regain their strength before returning to their farms after the drought. We were wrong. The government saw them as nothing more than way stations on the road to resettlement, the first step to emptying the north of a large part of its population—over one million people who did not want to leave.

In December Dr. Vasset returned from Addis Ababa to find the camp empty except for babies, the aged and the sick. It was her first experience with a resettlement raid. The army had arrived with its trucks, herded away as many people as the vehicles could carry and driven them off for transport south. Terrorized, the remaining Korem inhabitants who were strong enough fled into the nearby mountains. But, stalked by hunger, they soon straggled back, resigned to whatever fate had been decided for them.

Next a quota system was established: so many individuals required from each district; never mind the niceties. Husbands and wives were split up, probably never to see each other again. Hundreds of children were left behind to fend for themselves. The kids who did not die were sent to orphanges to be raised as Menguistu's "new human beings."

Dr. Vasset and her colleagues witnessed three deportation raids at Korem. A total of 17,232 were taken away, almost all of them against their will. By the time of the third raid, the militia moved right into our hospital and convalescence shelters and dragged off those who were too weak to flee. As the militiamen beat them to the trucks with sticks, Dr. Vasset protested that most would not survive the trip. The Party chief shrugged. He had a quota to fill.

We and our brother organizations in the field watched helplessly as the sick, hungry and dying were manipulated and coerced into joining the flood south. Time and again, even when stocks were overflowing, we saw food withheld from the camps while being made abundantly available in nearby resettlement transit centers. The bargain was starkly simple: if you want to eat, come in for deportation.

The same kinds of tactics operated in the countryside far from the camps. Promises of grain distribution brought farmers trudging from miles around to central trapping points where the soldiers were waiting in hiding. A call for free vaccination of cattle served doubly well, because it netted both the farmers and their herds. The farmers joined the lists of resettlers, and the cattle went to the militia. It was after campaigns of this sort that relief workers discovered what otherwise would have been inexplicable: ghost villages with huts, tools and household utensils intact, and crops untended in the fields.

Slave Labor. In June 1985 we installed a treatment center at Sek'ot'a, an important northern city. We found desolation. The Ethiopian army had destroyed all the crops, herds and farms in the vicinity. With no food available, the people would become dependent on the government camps, and the rebels would lose their support. To the world's press who were ushered into Sek'ot'a, these masses of barely living humanity were presented as victims of natural calamity—in fact they were victims of the government.

Even the famous drought proved to be something of a false issue. Our organization dispatched a hydrogeologist to Sek'ot'a and he discovered an enormous deposit of readily accessible underground water. At relatively low cost—only a small fraction of what was being raised for famine aid—there could have been water for everyone. Our representations to the government fell on deaf ears. What was desired was not water but a Sek'ot'a emptied of people.

The longer we stayed, the more the horror stories repeated themselves. By the middle of 1985, grain was rotting on the docks at the port of Aseb because trucks that had been donated for its transport were being used in the relentless pursuit of resettlement. Today, I am certain that at least half the deaths in Ethiopia must be attributed directly or indirectly to its own government.

The majority of the deportees serve the government as slave labor on the coffee plantations, which account for two-thirds of the country's hard currency. The death toll in these resettlement villages is appalling. An estimated 15 to 20 percent of the resettlers died in the first three months after being taken from their homes. For these population shifts alone, not taking into account the deliberate starvation instituted in the north, the Ethiopian government has on its hands the blood of at least 100,000 victims.

The failure of the resettlement program has been total, as demonstrated by Cultural Survival, Inc., a nonprofit group of Harvard anthropologists. Their comprehensive study, based on hundreds of interviews with victims of government-imposed resettlement, presents a shattering image of the Ethiopian tragedy. Not only are the work camps unable to feed the Ethiopian people, but these very collectives are prime candidates for future famines.

Even the collective farms, established several years earlier, are still so notoriously inefficient that they consume 90 percent of the government's agricultural investment, while producing barely five percent of the country's farm output. Yet Mengistu and his fellow theorists plow obdurately forward on their corpse-littered path.

Guided Tours. As the mass deportations continued, the situation in the field camps and nutrition centers continued to be desperate, in spite of the massive arrival in Ethiopia of foodstuffs from the West. The notables who visited the camps, the charity representatives and even the ambassadors of the donating countries were continually duped by their Ethiopian guides. Every time, the scenario was the same: suddenly, as if by magic, the trucks got through and the sacks of grain were plentiful. The notables returned home to write glowing reports about the efficient distribution system, but as soon as they left, the miracles ceased. The desire to believe in the success of the good cause was so powerful that these people fell into a bizarre kind of voluntary blindness.

I was particularly shocked by the U.N.'s resident representative, an assistant secretary-general installed in Addis, who invariably dismissed our protests with a few condescending phrases. Even when I told him point-blank that the resettlement program which the West's aid had made possible was killing more Ethiopians than the famine was, he answered, "I have no reason to believe that these people left the camps against their own free will." One day I should like to understand how the U.N.'s highest representative in Ethiopia could be unable to see the murderous nature of these deportations, thereby lending a blessing to one of the world's bloodiest and most tyrannical governments.

Numerous and prominent were the victims of the same hoodwinking-show-business stars, Western government ministers, ambassadors—all good and concerned human beings. They usually arrived in the Korem camp by government helicopter or car, spent an hour or so on the standard VIP tour, then were whisked away as swiftly as they had arrived. As far as they could see, all was well.

In June 1985 the government allowed us to set up a regional food-distribution center in Kelala, a sprawling farm district in southwest Welo Province. By then the zeal with which resettlement was pursued was utterly unbelievable.

To survive, the thousands of malnourished little children at Kelala required small amounts of high-energy food six to eight times a day. We had the food, but authorities refused to allow us to carry out the treatment. The system of nourishment we had proposed was unacceptable, a functionary explained, because it would maintain the population at Kelala. By October nearly all the children—3000 of them—were dead. They were as good as murdered.

Finance Famine? Last December we were ordered out of Ethiopia. Armed militiamen burst into our compounds, seized our equipment and menaced our volunteers. Some of our employees were beaten, and our trucks, medicines and food stores confiscated. We left Ethiopia branded as enemies of the revolution. The regime spoke the truth. The atrocities committed in the name of Mengistu's master plan did make us enemies of the revolution.

Today, Ethiopia remains the only country in the region still demanding huge quantities of food aid, even though the drought has long since ended. It is because the government has destroyed its own agricultural structures. It has prepared future famines. Meanwhile, the mass deportations and the work camps continue, and we in the West are expected to pay for them.

I am convinced that it is morally wrong for us to assist Mengistu and his callous functionaries in carrying out this murderous policy. During the famine, millions in the West responded with unequaled generosity, and no doubt saved many people from starvation. Now, however, the main cause of death in the northern provinces is no longer famine but forced resettlement.

It is tragic, but what I am saying is this: we have been duped. The best way to save lives now is for the West to demand an end to the forced resettlements. Unless they cease, further food aid will only grease the gears of Mengistu's killing machine.

Now, about Mengistu. The Ethiopian regime's cynical manipulation of Western generosity should have come as no suprise to aid donors. From the first days of his rise to power, Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam has shown himself utterly ruthless in destroying opponents and not averse to resorting to personal violence.

Mengistu emerged the country's undisputed strongman in 1977 when scores of rivals were either killed or executed. In the years that followed, an estimated 5,000 Ethiopians were killed as Mengistu forced his brand of Soviet-supported Marxism on his country. Bodies of tortured political prisoners were displayed on state-owned television. Amnesty International charged in its latest report that thousands of political prisoners still languish in Ethiopian prisons.

Mengistu has been particularly implacable in his attempts to suppress the rebellion in Eritrea, a northern province that has been fighting for independence for a quarter century. A second rebellion erupted in neighboring Tigray Province, where much of the forced resettlement has occurred.

Through it all, the Soviet Union has lavished billions of dollars in military aid on Ethiopia, helping to make its 300,000-man army the largest in black Africa. Soviet advisers in Ethiopia number in the thousands.

This is the main tragedy in Africa. Millions of people are being killed systematically by their own government, and nobody in America is talking about it. This is the first article I have seen in any major publication in the last 6 months about this. It really bothers me.

All of the attention of America has been focused on the problems of apartheid in South Africa, and they are major problems, but the tragedy, the holocaust that is taking place in Ethiopia is being ignored, and I wonder why?

Why do we focus on an area where hundreds have died, when hundreds of thousands and millions are dying right now through government-imposed starvation? It makes no sense to us, to me, in particular.

But I want to shift your attention just a little bit, if I may, now to South Africa, because the sanctions that we imposed are going to cause, I believe, famine and hardship and possibly a Communist takeover of the entire southern tier of Africa, including South Africa itself.

I use as an example a speech or a statement made by Dr. Christian Barnard, the man who originated heart transplants. Dr. Barnard was reported in the Indianapolis Star yesterday, and this is the article that he had published on the editorial page.

Dr. Christian Barnard, now retired from the Cape Town hospital where he pioneered the world's first successful heart transplant, has added his voice to those warning that sanctions against South Africa will hurt most the people that sanctions are allegedly intended to help.

Writing in the Sunday Times of Capetown, Barnard says that sanctions mean starvation and that most of the victims will be children.

"Southern Africa is home to more than 60 million people. A quarter of the population are below the age of 14," writes Barnard. As the ripple effect of sanctions spread through the region, he warns, 15 million children will be threatened with starvation.

Barnard says he feels a "white-hot fury" at the conditions which allow children to starve. "There is a stink to starvation that doesn't show on the television screen. It assaults the nostrils and revolts the stomach—a smell you can never forget: the stench of obscenity.

"Once you have seen a starving child you know the real meaning of obscenity—a condition which is an affront to all humanity," Barnard writes.

Barnard says he is angered by churchmen who support sanctions. "I try to believe that, like the Roman soldiers who crucified Christ, they know not what they do. But belief comes hard when you consider that those who ask for the bread to be taken out of the mouths of other people's children know that their own will never suffer." He writes:

"No churchman's salary will stop when trade comes to a halt. Priests and prelates, like the lilies of the field, toil not for their cash. It comes to them on a silver plate. And it keeps coming whether the stock market rises or falls.

"When sanctions bite, no one will knock on the door to repossess the furniture. The cars in the garage will be safe and the church will not call in the mortgage on the rectory, the manse or the deanery.

"Bishops will be safe, too. Princes of the church live in palaces where sanctions don't apply.

"Church walls are thick. Especially high church where they build monuments of dead stone to a living God.

"It's hard to hear the cries of the unfed when you're inside."

Barnard asks churchmen who support sanctions: "Would the Almighty really risk the life of a single child—just to replace a white Caesar with a black one?"

If Barnard is right, and famine does spread through South Africa, will the clergy, the politicans and others who were so zealous in imposing sanctions be equally zealous in providing food for the starving?

□ 2000

That is a very valid question. When we debated sanctions on this floor, I told my colleagues, 600,000 blacks will be put out of work immediately. That means that 3½ million people will be without food who have food today. Those people will be ripe for the revolutionary rhetoric of the African National Congress, which is controlled by the Communists. Nineteen of the thirty members of the executive committee are members of the South African Communist Party being supplied by the Soviet Union to the tune of $80 million in military hardware last year. They are the ones who are providing the necklacing mechanism to keep people in line, where they put a tire around their necks, fill it with gasoline and set it on fire. Those are the people that these people who are not going to be fed in the near future will turn to. They will listen to that revoluntary rhetoric and we will end up seeing another holocaust in South Africa and it may very well in time rival what is going on in Ethiopia.

I must say, I am very ashamed to say that we will have had a very significant role in bringing this about.

We in the free world, while trying to bring about positive change in countries like South Africa where aparthied which is repugnant prevails, should think about the long-term ramifications of our actions.

We said we want to help the black South Africans. We want to help them find the quality. We want to help them participate in the governmental process. We want a postapartheid constitution which would provide at least power sharing. But what did we give them?

We gave them a piece of legislation which provided for economic sanctions, boycotts of their products here in the United States, and as a result 600,000 people initially will be put out of work and 3½ million people will be without sustenance in a very short period of time, and all this is playing right into the hands of the Soviet Union.

I talked to a man from southern Africa today in my office. This man told me that the military buildup in Angola is unprecedented. The Soviet Union has sent 2 billion dollars' worth of military equipment into that country in the last year just north of South Africa. There are MIG-21 fighters, MIG-23 Flogger bombers, thousands of tanks are coming into South Africa.

In Mozambique just north of South Africa over on the other side, $1 billion in Soviet aid has been sent into that country, military aid.

There are Soviet advisers in both these countries. There are 35,000 to 45,000 Cubans in Angola and we believe there are a couple thousands Cubans in Mozambique.

Just north of there is Zimbabwe. Zimbabwe is supported by the Chinese Communists. So we see just north of South Africa a tremendous military buildup that threatens that country as far as the Communists are concerned.

And inside, instead of solving the problems of apartheid by helping the economic plight and putting internal pressure on the Government, helping the economic plight of the blacks and putting internal pressure on that government to bring about positive change, we have imposed sanctions which will play right into the hands of the Communists within South Africa, so they are being attacked, they will be attacked from outside where the buildup is taking place and they are going to be attacked internally. If that takes place, I submit to you there will be blood running in the streets, probably 2 or 3 million blacks will die and there will be famine that will rival what is going on in Ethiopia today.

If the Communists take over, we will have a tyrannical government to boot.

What does that mean for the United States of America? We will have to provide aid for those people who are starving to death because we are a humanitarian nation. We will be trying to save starving children who are starving as the result of actions that we have taken. I think that is a tragic mistake.

But in addition to that, the vital minerals that we need for our own economy and for the defense of this Nation will no longer be available from southern Africa. Manganese, which is a component part of steel, the preponderance of the manganese we buy comes from South Africa; platinum, cobalt, chromium, magnesium, those are all metals that come from South Africa. Those metals, which will only be able to be bought in bulk from one other source, which is the Soviet Union, will put us in an economic and military trick bag.

In addition to that, 40 percent of the free world's oil supplies come around the southern tip of Africa.

So I guess what I am doing tonight is trying to vent my anguish at what is taking place not only in Ethiopia, but southern Africa as well, in Angola, in Mozambique, and especially in South Africa. I think the United States has made a tragic mistake and I hope before all hell breaks loose over there the United States and our allies will find an answer that will help solve this solution before it turns out the way I think it will.

We should I believe be anxious to help the poor, the underprivileged, the needy around this world. We should think long and hard about what needs to be done to help these people in places like Ethiopia and South Africa, but before we make a decision that is going to create a tragedy, a terrible human tragedy, we should think of all the ramifications of our actions before we pass legislation in this body. I do not think we did that with the South African sanctions bill and I think it is going to come back to haunt us down the road.

DEATH AND TAXES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. WALDON). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, our topic tonight is "death and taxes." There is an old saying that you can escape everything in life except death and taxes. I thought I would start by talking about those who are and who still vote and how they affect the taxes of those of us who are alive, whose votes are canceled when those who are dead still vote.

I want to begin by pointing out that there seems to be a great deal of misunderstanding in some of the national press about the scale of vote fraud and the degree to which people who have moved or die continue to vote.

I notice, for example, that on October 5, 1986, the Washington Post in an editorial entitled, "Valid Integrity?" said:

The Republicans have come forward with no evidence that vote fraud and ballot stuffing are anything more than isolated rare incidents in American politics today. Effective anti-fraud operations by Republicans and others have pretty well stamped out fraud in the jurisdictions where it was once the ordinary way of doing business.

Well, I want to report to the Washington Post and to my colleagues that that is just clearly not accurate, that in fact there is a significant amount of vote fraud in America today, that fraud often involves buying votes, stealing votes, voting people who are not alive or voting people who have moved and who have left their names behind on the rolls.

I think in order to understand the scale of that it is useful to take three cases where we know there has been vote fraud recently and in one case where we know there has been a great deal of trouble with the question of whether or not the voting rolls are accurate. The four cases are in four different States: Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Louisiana.

In Michigan, I will report on the Michigan Committee for Honest Elections, which undertook a bipartisan study of registration procedures and election irregularities and found that in some areas of Michigan as many as 33 percent of the registered letters were returned. These are letters that were sent to presumed registered voters; that in the city of Pontiac they sent out 20,000 letters to registered voters and they got back 6,555 of those letters, or approximately one-third of the letters were not deliverable to the voter who was registered at that address. I will come back to that and report on that case.

In Illinois it was estimated by the U.S. attorney that the number of votes that were illegally cast in 1982 came to approximately 100,000 votes in the city of Chicago. Now, if you will remember, in 1982 the Governor's race was decided between Jim Thompson and Adlai Stevenson by 5,000 votes, which means that had those votes and the 100,000 fraudulent votes cast in the city of Chicago were all cast for the Democrats, that in fact Thompson's margin was not 5,000 votes, but 105,000 votes.

Furthermore, in the Eighth Congressional District of Indiana, which this House fought over a great deal last year, there have now been election officials indicted by Federal grand juries for having been involved in buying votes.

Finally, in Louisiana there was clear evidence of voter fraud in past elections. We have in fact had several Members of the U.S. Congress resign from the U.S. Congress from Louisiana. One Democratic Member of Congress from Louisiana had to resign his office after 19 poll commissioners were pleading guilty to stealing votes to assure his election. One former Democratic Member of Congress has served jail time for having been involved in stealing a race in Louisiana.

Let me start, if I might, with the example of Michigan, because in Michigan we have a study that was being done on a bipartisan basis. This is from the Michigan Committee for Honest Elections, October 1986. It says:

In 1984, the Michigan State Senate undertook a bipartisan study of voter registration procedures and election irregularities in Michigan. To initiate this study, the Senate sent a first class mailing, address correction requested, to registered voters in 15 different communities throughout the State. These communities were selected after consultation with the chairmen of both the Republican and Democratic State Parties.

The report from the study was released on August 7, 1985. This report showed that of the 15 communities selected, the city of Pontiac had the highest percentage of returned mail. Of the selected precincts in Pontiac where letters were sent to registered voters, 45 percent were returned as undeliverable or forwarded to a different address.

The Michigan Committee for Honest Elections was formed this year to determine if the types of problems identified by the Senate in 1984 and 1985 continue to exist today. The committee is a bipartisan, nonprofit corporation whose membership includes individuals from areas throughout the State. The goal of this committee is to insure the integrity of the voting process for all Michigan voters.

Based on the results of the 1985 Senate mailing, the city of Pontiac was selected as the first city to be studied by the committee. In July of this year the committee sent a first class, address correction requested letter to approximately 20,000 registered voters in Pontiac. The committee received back 6,555 mailings, or 33 percent of the total. While this percentage of return mail was slightly lower than the percentage returned in 1984, the committee felt that this was an extremely large percentage of return mail.

As a result of the mailing the committee notified the Pontiac city clerk that it believed that over 6,500 registered voters in Pontiac were improperly registered. Michigan law requires that the city clerk send a notice of these persons whose qualifications have been questioned, and that these notices be sent "forthwith". Each person receiving a notice has 30 days to appear before the clerk or file an affidavit with the clerk to establish that he or she is properly registered. If the person whose qualifications are challenged does not appear or file the required affidavit, the clerk is required to remove their name from the registered voter rolls. Since August, the committee has provided the city clerk with these 6,500 names, and to the best of the committee's knowledge, the clerk has only notified 581 registered voters that there are questions concerning their registration. The committee finds this disturbing since the November general election is less than 30 days away.

Let me make this point for a second. In Michigan where the Bipartisan Commission for honest elections reached out and found 6,500 registered voters who were not at the address they had signed up at, the city clerk in Pontiac, a Democrat, had only notified 500 of the 6,500 that they had a problem. In other words, there was deliberate foot dragging, apparently, based on this report, by the clerk who did not want to stop dead people and people who had moved away from having their names voted.

Let me go on:

The committee is not demanding that the clerk remove these names from the registered voter rolls. All the committee is asking is that the clerk follow the Michigan statute and investigate whether these people are, in fact, properly registered. Those that are properly registered are encouarged to vote and participate in the electoral process. Those not properly registered, however, must be removed from the voter rolls, as directed by Michigan law. It is clear that each person whose registration has been questioned has more than ample opportunity to establish that they are properly registered and entitled to vote.

Additionally, the committee has investigated whether these people whose registration is questionable have voted in the last several elections. The committee has determined that a substantial number of questionable votes have been cast in recent elections. Inaccurate voter registration records create the potential for fraud in our election process. Voting by people who are not properly registered is actual fraud.

Again, let me make this point. If there is somebody who has moved away but their name is still on the rolls, the local Democratic machine is able to vote them by simply getting someone to walk in, claim they are that person, sign their name, and then go vote. I will prove to the House in a minute that in fact there are people who voted who clearly could not have voted, because they are now dead.

Let me go on:

Once it was determined that a substantial number of questionable votes had been cast in recent elections, the committee hired investigators to determine whether the voters in question actually lived at the addresses shown on the voter registration information. The results of these investigations are shocking.

Of the 271 field investigations conducted, the committee found 175 cases where the registered voters clearly do not currently live at their registered address. These cases can be broken down into the following categories:

Vacant lots	25
Abandoned stores	2
Moved, address unknown	102
Abandoned homes	12
Moved, address known	12
Address totally unknown	15
Dead	4
No such address	7
Total	175

Again, let me make the point: Out of 271 cases in Pontiac, MI, which a bipartisan honest elections commission went out and sent someone to check on the street address that was listed on the registration roll, out of 271 cases, there were 175 that did not exist, clearly did not exist.

Now, that should concern anyone who has an interest in good government. That is about 65 percent of the people who were registered whose letters have been returned.

But let me continue. The committee went on to say:

Some of the mail received as undeliverable was marked by the post office to indicate that the addressee was deceased. Of the July mailing, 8 such letters were returned. The committee obtained the death certificates of these 8 voters, and found it interesting to note that the Pontiac city clerk signed 7 out of 8 of these death certificates, which indicated her awareness of these deaths. A review of the registered voter rolls indicates, however, that the names of these voters were purged from the registered voter rolls only after the results of the committee mailing were filed with the city clerk, even though she signed these death certificates as long ago as 1985. The committee is concerned that the names of most, if not all, people who have died in Pontiac in recent years still remain on the registered voter rolls.

The committee was shocked and dismayed by the results of its investigation. Every voter in Michigan has the right to believe in the integrity of the electoral process. The principle of "one person—one vote" is meaningless if the registered voter records are not kept current and people are allowed to vote who no longer, or in many cases, never did live at the address shown on the registered voting rolls.

The committee will be turning the results of its investigation over to the U.S. attorney later this week. The committee intends to request the U.S. attorney to make U.S. marshals available to supervise the election on November 4, 1986 in Pontiac to ensure the integrity of this election.

Now, that is a report by the Michigan Committee for Honest Elections, October 8, 1986. The point that I want to make here is that that is a bipartisan committee of citizens in Michigan who simply want to have an honest election.

This is an old problem. Honest elections have been a difficulty in American life for a very, very long time. This is not something new. As Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf has pointed out, there has been a public program of the Republican National Committee since the 1976 Presidential election. That program has specifically involved asking secretaries of state to notice that the Republican National Committee has posted a reward.

Let me read the letter which Chairman Fahrenkopf sent on October 9, 1984—that is, during the Presidential election last time—to every secretary of state:

DEAR SECRETARY OF STATE: As we approach this important general election, we wish to recognize the excellent work of the hundreds of thousands of American Citizens who will serve their fellow citizens as election officials. We recognize they must serve long hours, often for nominal pay, and often in cramped work places. In the vast majority of cases, American election workers do a fine job of quickly and accurately obtaining the vote and reporting the totals to their fellow citizens.

However, it has saddened us in the last few years to learn that vote fraud still exists in certain areas of this country. Fraud serves to undermine the most precious right of Americans—the right to vote. Since the right to vote is the keystone of all other rights we cherish as Americans, any dilution of the vote by fraud or error must be stopped. We know that your office will make every effort to see that every lawful vote is counted accurately, and that violations of the law are quickly stopped and offenses are prosecuted.

In order to help in such efforts, the Republican National Committee has decided to post a reward of $5,000 to any citizen who gives information which leads to the arrest, conviction, and punishment of any election official who violates state or federal laws against vote fraud. We have established telephone numbers that will be manned by attorneys who will assist in putting them in touch with the proper state and federal officials who will proceed with such complaint.

We ask you to cooperate with us by informing us of a contact person in your office whom we might call in the event such an occurrence takes place in your state. Please contact Mark Braden, Chief Counsel . . . at 202/863-8638.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Very truly yours,

FRANK J. FAHRENKOPF, Jr.

Now, I want to make several points. First of all, there has been a long-standing Republican effort to have honest elections. We recognize that in modern America, just by the nature of who controls local machinery, most vote theft is done by Democrats. We think as the minority party that it is incumbent upon us to fight for honest elections in places like Chicago. We have worked hard to have those honest elections.

Second, we offer the $5,000 reward on a nonpartisan basis. If a Democrat wants to call in and say, "I'm in a Republican-controlled precinct; the Republican is cheating" and that Republican is convicted, the Democrat would get the reward.

The point is, we have as deep an interest in honest elections in America as we do in the Philippines, where everybody condemned Marcos. It is unusual, I would say bizarre, that liberal Democrats who are infuriated that Marcos was stealing votes somehow turn their head and ignore when in cities like Chicago and States like Louisiana it is Democrats who are stealing votes.

I would say that a Democrat who steals a vote in America is at least as dangerous to democracy as when Marcos was stealing votes in the Philippines. I think that we need to confront the fact that stealing votes is wrong. If you and I vote honestly but our vote is canceled by somebody who is dead, who has been illegally voted by a machine, we are clearly, I think, losing our capacity to have honest elections and to be represented.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am glad to yield to my friend from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman contending that there is evidence that some of these people who have been found to be deceased have in fact voted in elections in recent years?

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, I am going to cite two clear-cut examples: One in Indiana, where we actually have a person who voted a year after they died. I am going to enter that into the RECORD in a minute, and the other is——

Mr. WALKER. They have been dead for a year, and they showed up voting in an election?

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, if I can find the exact citation for a minute, I will be glad to share with my friend.

Mr. WALKER. That was a feat of some accomplishment.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, certainly for people who are concerned about religion in politics, this is a minor miracle.

The gentleman apparently died on May 13, 1985, and voted in May of 1986.

Mr. WALKER. Would the gentleman repeat that again? He died in 1985 and he showed up and voted?

Mr. GINGRICH. According to the Evansville Courier, from Indiana, the gentleman died—a man, David Hobart Adams, died on May 13, 1985, and then voted a year later.

The RECORD is not designed so that we can put in the RECORD the exact signatures, but in fact the newspaper, in a very fine piece of investigative work, the Evansville Courier printed both the original gentleman's signature, which was signed "David Hobart Adams," and he always apparently put his middle name in when he would sign to vote, and he died at the age of 88, and at the age of 89 a year later he voted, having been dead approximately 12 months.

Mr. WALKER. Well, I must say to the gentleman that I sometimes tell a story about a mythical uncle of mine who lived in a heavily Democratic ward in Philadelphia and who was a Republican there and voted Republican right up until the day he died, and has been voting Democratic ever since.

I always thought that I was telling kind of a humorous story. But the gentleman cites examples of this actually taking place in the country today, and it is extremely disturbing to think that we are seeing examples of dead people voting.

I think the example the gentleman cited a while ago was some of the addresses that the investigating teams found did not even exist. I think I heard the gentleman say that at least seven of the places that they went to were addresses that did not even exist, and they had people on the voting rolls.

One has to guess that that was for a purpose and that, in fact, there were people being voted there in extremely fraudulent ways. So I think the gentleman does a great service by bringing this up.

Mr. GINGRICH. Let me cite, Mr. Chairman, Frank Fahrenkoph, Jr. in a recent paper that he wrote. He said:

In the same Indiana district in which a Republican congressional candidate "lost" by four votes, one conscientious citizen has voted in every election since 1978, the year of his death. Evidence indicates that this one dead man was joined by at least three other corpses, forming the needed margin of "victory" for the Democratic winner, Francis McClosky.

Mr. WALKER. Wait a minute, the guy died in 1978 and he has voted in every election since 1978?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am citing from Mr. Fahrenkoph's record, and he says unequivocably that there is a gentleman who died in 1978 and has voted in every election since then, which would mean that he was canceling out somebody who was alive in a Federal election in 1980, 1982, 1984, and 1986, this year. So I mean personally, I think it is amazing.

Let me read a little further from Mr. Fahrenkoph.

In this same congressional district, the Evansville Press reported similar cases, listing nine voters by name who could not be located by reporters. The Press, however, was able to locate the vacant lots to which they were registered. On Oct. 9, The Evansville Courier ran banner headlines on the front page saying: "Records Show Dead Man Voted."

Mr. WALKER. Now, this is the same district where last year we had such an all-out congressional investigation as to whether or not an honest election had taken place there, and the Democratic Party decided, almost to a man on a party line vote, to elect someone here in the Congress who had not been elected in this district by four votes. And what the gentleman is citing is in going back and examining the situation what we did not seem to find in the investigation that took place here in the Congress was the fact that dead people were voting.

Mr. GINGRICH. I think that is exactly correct, and perfectly legitimate to say that apparently if you look carefully, in one town alone the Democrats had voted at least four people who were dead, which was the margin by which they claim the election was decided.

Mr. WALKER. I think that is an important point to make. In other words, the margin of victory was established by the House of Representatives, and the margin of victory we were told in the House of Representatives was four votes that gave their man the election. What the gentleman has now cited is in one town there were four dead people who voted in that election which, in fact, is the margin of victory declared by the House.

Mr. GINGRICH. That is correct. And again, this is not a minor thing. As Mr. Fahrenkoph points out, the Senate Judiciary Committee investigation documented 100,000 fraudulent votes cast in Democratic Chicago in 1982 when Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson won by just 5,000 votes. I mean this is not a minor item.

In addition, one might note that in the very same Indiana congressional district, the Eighth Congressional District, there have been eight Democrats indicted for election fraud coming out of the very same congressional election, so now you have eight people indicted, four dead people voting in a district which even the Democrats were only able to recount into a margin of four votes.

So let me point out, as my colleague knows full well, not very long ago on this House floor the largest spending bill in history passed by one vote. Now it is fairly clear that that one vote margin almost certainly came from a district in which dead people and indicted officials swung the election. So the largest spending bill in the history of the United States, in the history of the world, passed by a margin provided by dead people.

Mr. WALKER. I think the gentleman makes a very clear point. In other words, that one vote was provided by the person that was elected in the district where we now know that four dead people voted, and that was the margin of victory certified by this Congress, and where eight people are under indictment for additional vote fraud. So we passed this largest single spending bill in the history of mankind out on this floor with that one vote margin, and I would say to the gentleman that that is fairly significant. That included such things as the congressional pay raise in it and so on that made it a very interesting bill, to say the least.

Mr. GINGRICH. I think that Bill Greener, the Republican National Committee's chief of staff for field operations called it correctly when he said, "In my view, voter fraud is the Democrats' dirty little secret. What they don't like is they've been caught."

The point is, consistently around America when you find a precinct which has a lot of illegal voting, it is almost certainly run by the Democrats. That goes back to Tammany Hall in New York City, to the Chicago machine, to southern Indiana, to the Louisiana precincts we have been talking about.

Let me explain why the Republican Party began mailing nonforwardable mail, that is taking the voter roll and sending the letter out to the name exactly as listed, and asking that the Post Office return the letter. Again this comes from Chairman Fahrenkoph. He said:

Non-forwardable mailings to eliminate incorrect or bogus registrations are technically used by statute in many states. Why are we concerned about a pool of improper registration? Consider the testimony of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, the most successful recent prosecutor of vote fraud cases, before the Senate Committee investigating Illinois vote fraud. It is as follows:

I am quoting now the U.S. attorney:

. . . . two very simple propositions concerning vote fraud: Number one, for massive or substantial vote fraud—and that's all we were interested in. I don't care about someone voting twice. I don't care about illegal voter assistance. I wanted to find the real massive and substantial vote fraud, and it is our belief it cannot occur unless you actually have forgeries of ballot applications for voters who did not show up at the polling place.

The second proposition that we based our investigation on is that in order for those ballot applications to be forged, there had to be a pool of registered voters on the books in that precinct from which the precinct captain and the election officials could draw from. They needed a pool of registered voters because you can't vote for someone who is not registered.

Fahrenkoph goes on to say:

For massive fraud, a large pool of bogus residents is needed. We are using the very techniques which have been most effective in combating vote fraud. Maybe the Post believes this is only a Chicago problem. It is not. David Epstein, the former Democratic staff counsel for the Illinois House Elections Committee (who has represented both Adlai Stevenson and the Cook County Democratic Party) observed in these same hearings that ballot fraud wasn't unique to Chicago and that it had been investigated in Chicago and had not been investigated in other areas.

Let me carry it a stage further. Let us take the case of Evansville and the Evansville Courier.

An Evansville man who died in 1985 is shown as voting in the May 1986 Democratic primary, voter registration records show.

David Hobart Adams, described as a well-known man in his neighborhood, died on May 13, 1985, at age 88. Almost a year later, according to records, someone forged his name on a poll sign-in sheet and cast a ballot.

The Adams vote is one instance of what Republicans say are hundreds of examples of fraudulent voting or questionable voter registrations in the 8th Congressional District.

The FBI has acknowledged it is conducting an investigation into vote fraud in southern Indiana. Republican Party officials say there are more than 5,000 problem registrations in Vanderburgh County alone.

□ 2035

Let me just point out, 5,000 problem registrations in one county, in a congressional district where the election was decided by 4 votes.

I go on to quote from the newspaper story:

Adams was registered to vote on Sept. 10, 1983, by his son, Ron Adams, an employee of the city-county Human Relations Commission.

"All I can tell you is that I registered him to vote in 1983." Ron Adams said. "He passed away in May 1985. All I can say is I know he wasn't here to vote.

"No one has ever approached me or anything with any effort or any kind of request that I forge anything."

Close quote.

The newspaper article goes on to say and I quote:

Sign-in sheets maintained by poll workers for the May primary show the signature "David Adams" next to Adams' name. There is no other David Adams registered to vote in the 4th Ward.

Records show a David R. Adams registered to vote in the 5th Ward, but he was born in 1960 and lives on the North Side.

Officials in the Voter Registration Office said Adams' name was not removed from voter lists after his death because information supplied by the state Board of Health and the local Health Department contained birth dates differing from the date of birth on Adams' registration card.

The registration card lists his date of birth as July 7, 1899. Death records from the state Board of Health show Adams' birthday as Nov. 19, 1896, while the local Health Department list states that Adams died at age 83 last year, making his birth year 1897.

Ron Adams said that his father's actual birth date is unclear because of poor record-keeping at the time of his birth.

He said he took his father to vote once at his 4th Ward precinct poll in Lincoln School, but does not know anything about someone voting in his father's name in May.

Rosetta Ervin, the Democratic poll clerk at Lincoln School in the primary, said she does not remember a voter named David Adams.

"I can't remember nobody. All I know is they tell me their name and mark it" she said.

She said she did not know Adams before his death.

Others, though, said Adams was well-known. A longtime Democratic Party worker said he was known throughout the neighborhood as "Mr. Hobart." Leona Christian at the Lincoln Senior Center and the Rev. W.R. Brown of New Hope Baptist Church also said he was well-known.

Ms. Ervin said she has complained before that dead people are left on voter lists, though she said she was aware of no instances where someone voted for a dead person.

"We didn't know they were dead until later on," she said.

Vanderburgh County Prosecutor Robert Pigman said he would look into the situation if the FBI is not already investigating Adams' vote.

"That's forgery as far as I'm concerned," Pigman said. "If it's not one they're turned over to the bureau then I'll definitely look at it."

Meanwhile, a suit filed by Democrats in a federal count in New Jersey could halt the Republican voter integrity program in Indians and other states as well.

Close quote.

Let me make the point here—

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield.

Mr. GINGRICH. I am glad to yield.

Mr. WALKER. There is a suit that has been filed to stop the integrity program from finding these dead people who are voting?

Mr. GINGRICH. The Democratic Party has filed suit to keep the election rolls dishonest.

Mr. WALKER. The Democratic Party has filed suit to allow dead people to continue to vote?

Mr. GINGRICH. I think that is fair. I think the Democratic Party nationally has filed lawsuits in a number of places, asking the U.S. judges to stop purging the lists.

In other words, to ensure that the maximum number of dead people are still on the rolls.

Mr. WALKER. For this November?

Mr. GINGRICH. For this November.

Mr. WALKER. And the gentleman has cited that in 1982, 100,000 fraudulent votes were cast in one city in this country? That could have influenced the outcome of a number of congressional races, it seems to me; 100,000 votes is an awful lot of votes.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, it seems to me when you talk about 100,000 votes in Chicago alone, and then you add up Louisiana and Indiana, and you look at potentially a third of the votes in some cities in Michigan, and you start going to New York and to Philadelphia; it is possible that by the time you are done adding up votes you are talking about 500,000 votes.

Mr. WALKER. And the Democratic Party has filed suit to make certain that those fraudulent voters stay on the rolls?

Mr. GINGRICH. My understanding is that the Democratic Party nationally is committed to keeping the rolls as full of dead people as possible.

Mr. WALKER. Incredible.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, Mr. Speaker, let me continue for just a moment by shifting, still in Indiana, to the Evansville Press, which had an article entitled "Confusion Arises Over Vote, Man's Death," and this continues the same story that was stated in the other article.

Let me pick up where they talk about other people.

Quote:

Republicans have said their inability to find voters who list addresses in Vanderburgh County raises the possibility of fraud.

In a new list of 25 Evansville voters supplied yesterday to The Evansville Press, reporters were able to locate the whereabouts of 15 voters.

The questioned registrations released by the National Republican Committee in Washington listed addresses that now are vacant lots or locations they say are nonexistent.

Most of those who were located had moved from addresses listed in Voter Registration records. Some had not changed their registrations. One said he changed his registration address recently—since GOP investigators put together their lists.

There were nine voters Press reporters could not locate yesterday. They are:

Beatrice Dees, registered at 577 S. Governor St., a vacant lot.

Catherine Jones, 412 E. Walnut, a vacant lot.

Sidney Collins, 820 Line St., an address reported to be a vacant lot.

David Adams, 484 E. Walnut St., a vacant lot.

Chan C. Miles, 516 John St., reported now to be part of the Lloyd Expressway.

Earsley Northern, 309 S. Garvin St.

Bobby Clark, 622 Judson St.

Michael D. Rankins, 19 S. Denby.

Larry Copeland, 308 Line St.

The investigators say the number of returns from a mailing to check addresses has been unusually high in Vanderburgh County.

Mark Braden, National Republican Committee general counsel, said 4,096 of 20,000 letters were returned and the amount represents "a pool of potential vote fraud. We want to get rid of it."

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, do I understand correctly, then, that that suit that was filed would also protect those vacant lots and that expressway as well?

Mr. GINGRICH. I want to say proudly to my colleagues in the House who are Democrats, that their party is standing firmly for the right of Lloyd Expressway to vote.

Mr. WALKER. Of the Lloyd Expresseway to vote.

Mr. GINGRICH. The Lloyd Expressway in Evansville, IN is, by George, going to be defended by the Democratic Party in its right to cast a vote.

Mr. WALKER. In addition to the vacant lots?

Mr. GINGRICH. Apparently there will be 8 vacant lots and the Lloyd Expressway voting if the Democratic Party has its way.

Let me complete this article, Mr. Speaker, which goes on to say, and I quote from the Evansville Press:

Evansville Mayor Michael Vandeveer said he too is concerned about voters whose addresses are vacant lots and cannot be found. However, he said the GOP's inference the Democratic Party has participated in a conspiracy of fraud is unfounded.

Republicans said the names provided The Press were not necessarily the "best" of their list, but were representatives of problems they say they've found.

Close quote.

Now, notice what the Evansville Press story says. Out of 25 letters that were returned, over a third were in fact people who either were dead or had moved. Their house did not exist; it was either an expressway or a vacant lot.

Multiply that randomly times the 4,096 returned letters, that means that in Vanderburgh County alone, there are over 1,000 people, about 1,400 people on the voting rolls who could be voted by the local Democratic machine.

I think for the mayor of Vanderburgh to suggest the Democratic Party is not attempting to stop this effort to clean up the rolls is just wrong.

Let me quote. The New York Times, October 8, headline from page A28 Quote:

"Democrats Sue Republicans On Plan to Challenge Voters"

The article begins:

The Democratic Party filed a $10 million lawsuit against the Republican National Committee today, charging that the Republicans' program to purge ineligible voters from the rolls was really an attempt to "harass intimidate and improperly challenge" Blacks.

Close quote.

In other words, when you attempt to make sure that dead people and expressways and vacant lots do not vote, you are promptly sued by the Democratic National Committee.

A similar story, October 8, in the Washington Post. Headline, "Democrates Sue Over GOP's Voter Project."

It seems to me quite clear that the Democratic Party is filing suit and feels very confident filing suit on behalf of the dead, of expressways and of vacant lots to vote.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that in the last couple of weeks, we even had some Democratic Members of this House come to the floor and defend that suit, and to say that what they were doing was perfectly right in defending vacant lots, expressways, and dead people being on the voter rolls.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, I think it is fair to say that there are colleagues of ours, Democrats who come from cities and States that have a long tradition of organized, Democratic machine politics; and that they have risen nobly to the defense of the machine's right to vote people who do not exist.

I think that there has been a—the only modern change has been that for most of American history, machine politicians were embarrassed if you pointed out voter fraud; today they jump up and yell "civil rights."

Mr. WALKER. They file suit in Federal courts.

Mr. GINGRICH. And then they go and file suit.

Mr. WALKER. We must remember—the gentleman is a historian by profession; but I do not remember Tammany Hall filing suit in Federal court to protect its activities.

□ 2045

As I recall, what we did at that time in our history was, it was Tammany Hall that ended up in court being prosecuted as a result of their activities. This is an interesting reversal in history that we have taking place here.

Mr. GINGRICH. As you will remember, there is a famous definition of the word "chutzpah" as a person who kills both parents and then throws himself on the mercy of the court on the grounds of being an orphan.

I would say to you the machine politician cheerfully walking in to defend the right of machines to vote people who have died is a new example of chutzpah. In fact, when you have, as they did in Louisiana, a local Democratic elected judge, elected by the machine which was using the votes of people who were dead, blocking an effort to get those people off the rolls, I think it is a new example of chutzpah.

What you have got here is a Democratic Party which in many parts of America stays in power only by voting people who do not exist. Either they have moved away or they have died and they are voted by the local machine.

Mr. WALKER. Or they are a vacant lot or they are an expressway.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, one, I would hope they are not originally forged registrations, although, frankly, we have no proof of that. And I will get to that in just a minute. But let me quote what Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said on October 7 in response to a Democratic attack, and I think he was exactly right.

He said:

I am extremely disappointed that the Democratic Party leadership has decided to take the low road on the issue of the integrity of our election system.

I think it would hardly be possible to state the opposite of the truth with more precision than the Democrats have done today. Their press conference accusing us of attempting to intimidate minority voters is nothing more than Democratic politics as usual.

They took the same approach in 1984. A very similar press conference was called and almost identical charges were made. Yet almost two years after the 1984 election, not one shred of evidence has been presented to indicate that our efforts intimidated a single voter.

Their charges are as false today as they were two years ago. The program we have put in place with the National Republican Congressional Committee and the National Republican Senatorial Committee is completely open and above board. We have invited and continue to invite any interested member of the media to come and see what we have done and what we are doing.

Additionally, we will gladly join the Democrats any place any time to eliminate any voter intimidation or abuse. We ask them, as we have in the past, to join us to eliminate voter fraud.

Any attempt to threaten or intimidate any voter is a reprehensible attack on the sanctity of the vote. However, votes cast by deceased or nonexistent individuals are also reprehensible. Every time a vacant lot, abandoned building, or a grave votes, the civil rights of all Americans are in danger.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

"UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT OF ALIENS

"SEC. 274A. (a) MAKING EMPLOYMENT OF UNAUTHORIZED ALIENS UNLAWFUL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—It is unlawful for a person or other entity to hire, or to recruit or refer for a fee, for employment in the United States—

"(B) an individual without complying with the requirements of subsection (b).

"(2) CONTINUING EMPLOYMENT.—It is unlawful for a person or other entity, after hiring an alien for employment in accordance with paragraph (1), to continue to employ the alien in the United States knowing the alien is (or has become) an unauthorized alien with respect to such employment.

"(3) DEFENSE.—A person or entity that establishes that it has complied in good faith with the requirements of subsection (b) with respect to the hiring, recruiting, or referral for employment of an alien in the United States has established an affirmative defense that the person or entity has not violated paragraph (1)(A) with respect to such hiring, recruiting, or referral.

"(4) USE OF LABOR THROUGH CONTRACT.—For purposes of this section, a person or other entity who uses a contract, subcontract, or exchange, entered into, renegotiated, or extended after the date of the enactment of this section, to obtain the labor of an alien in the United States knowing that the alien is an unauthorized alien (as defined in subsection (h)(3)) with respect to performing such labor, shall be considered to have hired the alien for employment in the United States in violation of paragraph (1)(A).

"(5) USE OF STATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCY DOCUMENTATION.—For purposes of paragraphs (1)(B) and (3), a person or entity shall be deemed to have complied with the requirements of subsection (b) with respect to the hiring of an individual who was referred for such employment by a State employment agency (as defined by the Attorney General), if the person or entity has and retains (for the period and in the manner described in subsection (b)(3)) appropriate documentation of such referral by that agency, which documentation certifies that the agency has complied with the procedures specified in subsection (b) with respect to the individual's referral.

"(b) EMPLOYMENT VERIFICATION SYSTEM.—The requirements referred to in paragraphs (1)(B) and (3) of subsection (a) are, in the case of a person or other entity hiring, recruiting, or referring an individual for employment in the United States, the requirements specified in the following three paragraphs:

"(ii) a document described in subparagraph (C) and a document described in subparagraph (D).

A person or entity has complied with the requirement of this paragraph with respect to examination of a document if the document reasonably appears on its face to be genuine. If an individual provides a document or combination of documents that reasonably appears on its face to be genuine and that is sufficient to meet the requirements of such sentence, nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as requiring the person or entity to solicit the production of any other document or as requiring the individual to produce such a document.

"(i) United States passport;

"(ii) certificate of United States citizenship;

"(iii) certificate of naturalization;

"(v) resident alien card or other alien registration card, if the card—

"(I) contains a photograph of the individual or such other personal identifying information relating to the individual as the Attorney General finds, by regulation, sufficient for purposes of this subsection, and

"(II) is evidence of authorization of employment in the United States.

"(C) DOCUMENTS EVIDENCING EMPLOYMENT AUTHORIZATION.—A document described in this subparagraph is an individual's—

"(i) social security account number card (other than such a card which specifies on the face that the issuance of the card does not authorize employment in the United States);

"(iii) other documentation evidencing authorization of employment in the United States which the Attorney General finds, by regulation, to be acceptable for purposes of this section.

"(D) DOCUMENTS ESTABLISHING IDENTITY OF INDIVIDUAL.—A document described in this subparagraph is an individual's—

"(ii) in the case of individuals under 16 years of age or in a State which does not provide for issuance of an identification document (other than a driver's license) referred to in clause (ii), documentation of personal identity of such other type as the Attorney General finds, by regulation, provides a reliable means of identification.

"(2) INDIVIDUAL ATTESTATION OF EMPLOYMENT AUTHORIZATION.—The individual must attest, under penalty of perjury on the form designated or established for purposes of paragraph (1), that the individual is a citizen or national of the United States, an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or an alien who is authorized under this Act or by the Attorney General to be hired, recruited, or referred for such employment.

"(3) RETENTION OF VERIFICATION FORM.—After completion of such form in accordance with paragraphs (1) and (2), the person or entity must retain the form and make it available for inspection by officers of the Service or the Department of Labor during a period beginning on the date of the hiring, recruiting, or referral of the individual and ending—

"(A) in the case of the recruiting or referral for a fee (without hiring) of an individual, three years after the date of the recruiting or referral, and

"(B) in the case of the hiring of an individual—

"(i) three years after the date of such hiring, or

"(5) LIMITATION ON USE OF ATTESTATION FORM.—A form designated or established by the Attorney General under this subsection and any information contained in or appended to such form, may not be used for purposes other than for enforcement of this Act and sections 1001, 1028, 1546, and 1621 of title 18, United States Code.

"(c) NO AUTHORIZATION OF NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION CARDS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the issuance or use of national identification cards or the establishment of a national identification card.

"(d) EVALUATION AND CHANGES IN EMPLOYMENT VERIFICATION SYSTEM.—

"(1) PRESIDENTIAL MONITORING AND IMPROVEMENTS IN SYSTEM.—

"(A) MONITORING.—The President shall provide for the monitoring and evaluation of the degree to which the employment verification system established under subsection (b) provides a secure system to determine employment eligibility in the United States and shall examine the suitability of existing Federal and State identification systems for use for this purpose.

"(B) IMPROVEMENTS TO ESTABLISH SECURE SYSTEM.—To the extent that the system established under subsection (b) is found not to be a secure system to determine employment eligibility in the United States, the President shall, subject to paragraph (3) and taking into account the results of any demonstration projects conducted under paragraph (4), implement such changes in (including additions to) the requirements of subsection (b) as may be necessary to establish a secure system to determine employment eligibility in the United States. Such changes in the system may be implemented only if the changes conform to the requirements of paragraph (2).

"(2) RESTRICTIONS ON CHANGES IN SYSTEM.—Any change the President proposes to implement under paragraph (1) in the verification system must be designed in a manner so the verification system, as so changed, meets the following requirements:

"(A) RELIABLE DETERMINATION OF IDENTITY.—The system must be capable of reliably determining whether—

"(i) a person with the identity claimed by an employee or prospective employee is eligible to work, and

"(ii) the employee or prospective employee is claiming the identity of another individual.

"(B) USING OF COUNTERFEIT-RESISTANT DOCUMENTS.—If the system requires that a document be presented to or examined by an employer, the document must be in a form which is resistant to counterfeiting and tampering.

"(C) LIMITED USE OF SYSTEM.—Any personal information utilized by the system may not be made available to Government agencies, employers, and other persons except to the extent necessary to verify that an individual is not an unauthorized alien.

"(D) PRIVACY OF INFORMATION.—The system must protect the privacy and security of personal information and identifiers utilized in the system.

"(E) LIMITED DENIAL OF VERIFICATION.—A verification that an employee or prospective employee is eligible to be employed in the United States may not be withheld or revoked under the system for any reason other than that the employee or prospective employee is an unauthorized alien.

"(F) LIMITED USE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES.—The system may not be used for law enforcement purposes, other than for enforcement of this Act or sections 1001, 1028, 1546, and 1621 of title 18, United States Code.

"(G) RESTRICTION ON USE OF NEW DOCUMENTS.—If the system requires individuals to present a new card or other document (designed specifically for use for this purpose) at the time of hiring, recruitment, or referral, then such document may not be required to be presented for any purpose other than under this Act (or enforcement of sections 1001, 1028, 1546, and 1621 of title 18, United States Code) nor to be carried on one's person.

"(3) NOTICE TO CONGRESS BEFORE IMPLEMENTING CHANGES.—

"(ii) one year, in the case of a major change described in subparagraph (D)(iii), or

"(iii) two years, in the case of a major change described in clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (D), before the date of implementation of the change, the President has prepared and transmitted to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate a written report setting forth the proposed change. If the President proposes to make any change regarding social security account number cards, the President shall transmit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Finance of the Senate a written report setting forth the proposed change. The President promptly shall cause to have printed in the Federal Register the substance of any major change (described in subparagraph (D)) proposed and reported to Congress.

"(C) CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW OF MAJOR CHANGES.—

"(i) HEARINGS AND REVIEW.—The Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and of the Senate shall cause to have printed in the Congressional Record the substance of any major change described in subparagraph (D), shall hold hearings respecting the feasibility and desirability of implementing such a change, and, within the two year period before implementation, shall report to their respective Houses findings on whether or not such a change should be implemented.

"(ii) CONGRESSIONAL ACTION.—No major change may be implemented unless the Congress specifically provides, in an appropriations or other Act, for funds for implementation of the change.

"(D) MAJOR CHANGES REQUIRING TWO YEARS NOTICE AND CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.—As used in this paragraph, the term 'major change' means a change which would—

"(i) require an individual to present a new card or other document (designed specifically for use for this purpose) at the time of hiring, recruitment, or referral,

"(ii) provide for a telephone verification system under which an employer, recruiter, or referrer must transmit to a Federal official information concerning the immigration status of prospective employees and the official transmits to the person, and the person must record, a verification code, or

"(iii) require any change in any card used for accounting purposes under the Social Security Act, including any change requiring that the only social security account number cards which may be presented in order to comply with subsection (b)(1)(C)(i) are such cards as are in a counterfeit-resistant form consistent with the second sentence of section 205(c)(2)(D) of the Social Security Act.

"(E) GENERAL REVENUE FUNDING OF SOCIAL SECURITY CARD CHANGES.—Any costs incurred in developing and implementing any change described in subparagraph (D)(iii) for purposes of this subsection shall not be paid for out of any trust fund established under the Social Security Act.

"(B) for the investigation of those complaints which, on their face, have a substantial probability of validity,

"(C) for the investigation of such other violations of subsection (a) as the Attorney General determines to be appropriate, and

"(D) for the designation in the Service of a unit which has, as its primary duty, the prosecution of cases of violations of subsection (a) under this subsection.

"(2) AUTHORITY IN INVESTIGATIONS.—In conducting investigations and hearings under this subsection—

"(A) immigration officers and administrative law judges shall have reasonable access to examine evidence of any person or entity being investigated, and

"(B) administrative law judges, may, if necessary, compel by subpoena the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence at any designated place or hearing.

In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpoena lawfully issued under this paragraph and upon application of the Attorney General, an appropriate district court of the United States may issue an order requiring compliance with such subpoena and any failure to obey such order may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

"(3) HEARING.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Before imposing an order described in paragraph (4) or (5) against a person or entity under this subsection for a violation of subsection (a), the Attorney General shall provide the person or entity with notice and, upon request made within a reasonable time (of not less than 30

"(B) CONDUCT OF HEARING.—Any hearing so requested shall be conducted before an administrative law judge. The hearing shall be conducted in accordance with the requirements of section 554 of title 5, United States Code. The hearing shall be held at the nearest practicable place to the place where the person or entity resides or of the place where the alleged violation occurred. If no hearing is so requested, the Attorney General's imposition of the order shall constitute a final and unappealable order.

"(C) ISSUANCE OF ORDERS.—If the administrative law judge determines, upon the preponderance of the evidence received, that a person or entity named in the complaint has violated subsection (a), the administrative law judge shall state his findings of fact and issue and cause to be served on such person or entity an order described in paragraph (4) or (5).

"(4) CEASE AND DESIST ORDER WITH CIVIL MONEY PENALTY FOR HIRING, RECRUITING, AND REFERRAL VIOLATIONS.—With respect to a violation of subsection (a)(1)(A) or (a)(2), the order under this subsection—

"(ii) to take such other remedial action as is appropriate.

In applying this subsection in the case of a person or entity composed of distinct, physically separate subdivisions each of which provides separately for the hiring, recruiting, or referring for employment, without reference to the practices of, and not under the control of or common control with, another subdivision, each such subdivision shall be considered a separate person or entity.

In determining the amount of the penalty, due consideration shall be given to the size of the business of the employer being charged, the good faith of the employer, the seriousness of the violation, whether or not the individual was an unauthorized alien, and the history of previous violations.

"(6) ADMINISTRATIVE APPELLATE REVIEW.—The decision and order of an administrative law judge shall become the final agency decision and order of the Attorney General unless, within 30 days, the Attorney General modifies or vacates the decision and order, in which case the decision and order of the Attorney General shall become a final order under this subsection. The Attorney General may not delegate the Attorney General's authority under this paragraph to any entity which has review authority over immigration-related matters.

"(8) ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS.—If a person or entity fails to comply with a final order issued under this subsection against the person or entity, the Attorney General shall file a suit to seek compliance with the order in any appropriate district court of the United States. In any such suit, the validity and appropriateness of the final order shall not be subject to review.

"(f) CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND INJUNCTIONS FOR PATTERN OR PRACTICE VIOLATIONS.—

"(1) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Any person or entity which engages in a pattern or practice of violations of subsection (a)(1)(A) or (a)(2) shall be fined not more than $3,000 for each unauthorized alien with respect to whom such a violation occurs, imprisoned for not more than six months for the entire pattern or practice, or both, notwithstanding the provisions of any other Federal law relating to fine levels.

"(2) ENJOINING OF PATTERN OR PRACTICE VIOLATIONS.—Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that a person or entity is engaged in a pattern or practice of employment, recruitment, or referral in violation of paragraph (1)(A) or (2) of subsection (a), the Attorney General may bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States requesting such relief, including a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order against the person or entity, as the Attorney General deems necessary.

(4) Such study shall be conducted within twelve months of the date of enactment of this Act.

(5) The Attorney General shall prepare and transmit to the Congress a report—

"SEC. 274B. (a) PROHIBITION OF DISCRIMINATION BASED ON NATIONAL ORIGIN OR CITIZENSHIP STATUS.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—It is an unfair immigration-related employment practice for a person or other entity to discriminate against any individual (other than an unauthorized alien) with respect to the hiring, or recruitment or referral for a fee, of the individual for employment or the discharging of the individual from employment—

"(A) because of such individual's national origin, or

"(B) in the case of a citizen or intending citizen (as defined in paragraph (3)), because of such individual's citizenship status.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to—

"(A) a person or other entity that employs three or fewer employees,

"(B) a person's or entity's discrimination because of an individual's national origin if the discrimination with respect to that person or entity and that individual is covered under section 703 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, or

"(C) discrimination because of citizenship status which is otherwise required in order to comply with law, regulation, or executive order, or required by Federal, State, or local government contract, or which the Attorney General determines to be essential for an employer to do business with an agency or department of the Federal, State, or local government.

"(3) DEFINITION OF CITIZEN OR INTENDING CITIZEN.—As used in paragraph (1), the term 'citizen or intending citizen' means an individual who—

"(A) is a citizen or national of the United States, or

"(4) ADDITIONAL EXCEPTION PROVIDING RIGHT TO PREFER EQUALLY QUALIFIED CITIZENS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, it is not an unfair immigration-related employment practice for a person or other entity to prefer to hire, recruit, or refer an individual who is a citizen or national of the United States over another individual who is an alien if the two individuals are equally qualified.

"(b) CHARGES OF VIOLATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), any person alleging that the person is adversely affected directly by an unfair immigration-related employment practice (or a person on that person's behalf) or an officer of the Service alleging that an unfair immigration-related employment practice has occurred or is occurring may file a charge respecting such practice or violation with the Special Counsel (appointed under subsection (c)). Charges shall be in writing under oath or affirmation and shall contain such information as the Attorney General requires. No charge respecting an employment practice may be filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission under such title if a charge with respect to such practice based on the same set of facts has been filed under this subsection, unless the charge is dismissed under this section as being outside the scope of this section.

"(c) SPECIAL COUNSEL.—

"(1) APPOINTMENT.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a Special Counsel for Immigration-Related Unfair Employment Practices (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Special Counsel') within the Department of Justice to serve for a term of four years. "(d) INVESTIGATION OF CHARGES.—

"(1) BY SPECIAL COUNSEL.—The Special Counsel shall investigate each charge received and, within 120 days of the date of the receipt of the charge, determine whether or not there is reasonable cause to believe that the charge is true and whether or not to bring a complaint with respect to the charge before an administrative law judge. The Special Counsel may, on his own initiative, conduct investigations respecting unfair immigration-related employment practices and, based on such an investigation and subject to paragraph (3), file a complaint before such a judge.

"(2) PRIVATE ACTIONS.—If the Special Counsel, after receiving such a charge respecting an unfair immigration-related employment practice which alleges knowing and intentional discriminatory activity or a pattern or practice of discriminatory activity, has not filed a complaint before an administrative law judge with respect to such charge within such 120-day period, the person making the charge may (subject to paragraph (3)) file a complaint directly before such a judge.

"(3) TIME LIMITATIONS ON COMPLAINTS.—No complaint may be filed respecting any unfair immigration-related employment practice occurring more than 180 days prior to the date of the filing of the charge with the Special Counsel. This subparagraph shall not prevent the subsequent amending of a charge or complaint under subsection (e)(1).

"(e) HEARINGS.—

"(1) NOTICE.—Whenever a complaint is made that a person or entity has engaged in or is engaging in any such unfair immigration-related employment practice, an administrative law judge shall have power to issue and cause to be served upon such person or entity a copy of the complaint and a notice of hearing before the judge at a place therein fixed, not less than five days after the serving of the complaint. Any such complaint may be amended by the judge conducting the hearing, upon the motion of the party filing the complaint, in the judge's discretion at any time prior to the issuance of an order based thereon. The person or entity so complained of shall have the right to file an answer to the original or amended complaint and to appear in person or otherwise and give testimony at the place and time fixed in the complaint.

"(2) JUDGES HEARING CASES.—Hearings on complaints under this subsection shall be considered before administrative law judges who are specially designated by the Attorney General as having special training respecting employment discrimination and, to the extent practicable, before such judges who only consider cases under this section.

"(3) COMPLAINANT AS PARTY.—Any person filing a charge with the Special Counsel respecting an unfair immigration-related employment practice shall be considered a party to any complaint before an administrative law judge respecting such practice and any subsequent appeal respecting that complaint. In the discretion of the judge conducting the hearing, any other person may be allowed to intervene in the said proceeding and to present testimony.

"(f) TESTIMONY AND AUTHORITY OF HEARING OFFICERS.—

"(1) TESTIMONY.—The testimony taken by the administrative law judge shall be reduced to writing. Thereafter, the judge, in his discretion, upon notice may provide for the taking of further testimony or hear argument.

"(2) AUTHORITY OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGES.—In conducting investigations and hearings under this subsection and in accordance with regulations of the Attorney General, the Special Counsel and administrative law judges shall have reasonable access to examine evidence of any person or entity being investigated. The administrative law judges by subpoena may compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence at any designated place or hearing. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpoena lawfully issued under this paragraph and upon application of the administrative law judge, an appropriate district court of the United States may issue an order requiring compliance with such subpoena and any failure to obey such order may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

"(g) DETERMINATIONS.—

"(1) ORDER.—The administrative law judge shall issue and cause to be served on the parties to the proceeding an order, which shall be final unless appealed as provided under subsection (i).

"(2) ORDERS FINDING VIOLATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If, upon the preponderance of the evidence, an administrative law judge determines that that any person or entity named in the complaint has engaged in or is engaging in any such unfair immigration-related employment practice, then the judge shall state his findings of fact and shall issue and cause to be served on such person or entity an order which requires such person or entity to cease and desist from such unfair immigration-related employment practice.

"(B) CONTENTS OF ORDER.—Such an order also may require the person or entity—

"(i) to comply with the requirements of section 274A(b) with respect to individuals hired (or recruited or referred for employment for a fee) during a period of up to three years;

"(ii) to retain for the period referred to in clause (i) and only for purposes consistent with section 274A(b)(6), the name and address of each individual who applies, in person or in writing, for hiring for an existing position, or for recruiting or referring for a fee, for employment in the United States;

Interim earnings or amounts earnable with reasonable diligence by the individual or individuals discriminated against shall operate to reduce the back pay otherwise allowable under such paragraph. No order shall require the hiring of an individual as an employee or the payment to an individual of any back pay, if the individual was refused employment for any reason other than discrimination on account of national origin or citizenship status.

"(D) TREATMENT OF DISTINCT ENTITIES.—In applying this subsection in the case of a person or entity composed of distinct, physically separate subdivisions each of which provides separately for the hiring, recruiting, or referring for employment, without reference to the practices of, and not under the control of or common control with, another subdivision, each such subdivision shall be considered a separate person or entity.

"(3) ORDERS NOT FINDING VIOLATIONS.—If upon the preponderance of the evidence an administrative law judge determines that the person or entity named in the complaint has not engaged or is not engaging in any such unfair immigration-related employment practice, then the judge shall state his findings of fact and shall issue an order dismissing the complaint.

"(h) AWARDING OF ATTORNEYS' FEES.—In any complaint respecting an unfair immigration-related employment practice, an administrative law judge, in the judge's discretion, may allow a prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee, if the losing party's argument is without reasonable foundation in law and fact.

"(i) REVIEW OF FINAL ORDERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the entry of such final order, any person aggrieved by such final order may seek a review of such order in the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the violation is alleged to have occurred or in which the employer resides or transacts business.

"(2) FURTHER REVIEW.—Upon the filing of the record with the court, the jurisdiction of the court shall be exclusive and its judgment shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

"(j) COURT ENFORCEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE ORDERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If an order of the agency is not appealed under subsection (i)(1), the Special Counsel (or, if the Special Counsel fails to act, the person filing the charge) may petition the United States district court for the district in which a violation of the order is alleged to have occurred, or in which the respondent resides or transacts business, for the enforcement of the order of the administrative law judge, by filing in such court a written petition praying that such order be enforced.

"(2) COURT ENFORCEMENT ORDER—Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the administrative law judge. In such a proceeding, the order of the administrative law judge shall not be subject to review.

"(3) ENFORCEMENT DECREE IN ORIGINAL REVIEW.—If, upon appeal of an order under subsection (i)(1), the United States court of appeals does not reverse such order, such court shall have the jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the administrative law judge.

"(4) AWARDING OF ATTORNEY'S FEES.—In any judicial proceeding under subsection (i) or this subsection, the court, in its discretion, may allow a prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of costs but only if the losing party's ar-

(2) OFFSET.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraphs (B) through (D), the amount described in this paragraph for a fiscal year is equal to the amount estimated to be expended by the Federal Government in the fiscal year for the programs of financial assistance, medical assistance, and assistance under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 for aliens who would not be eligible for such assistance under paragraph (1)(A) of section 245A(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act but for the provisions of paragraph (2) or paragraph (3) of such section.

(C) ESTIMATED INITIAL OFFSET.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), with respect to fiscal year 1988, the amount estimated to be expended is equal to $70,000,000. (A) the number of eligible legalized aliens (as defined in subsection (j)(4)) residing in the State in that fiscal year;

(B) the ratio of the number of eligible legalized aliens in the State to the total number of residents of that State and to the total number of such aliens in all the States in that fiscal year;

(F) such other factors as the Secretary deems appropriate to provide for an equitable distribution of such amounts.

(2) To the extent that all the funds appropriated under this section for a fiscal year are not otherwise allotted to States either because all the States have not qualified for such allotments under this section for the fiscal year or because some States have indicated in their description of activities that they do not intend to use, in that fiscal year or the succeeding fiscal year, the full amount of such allotments, such excess shall be allotted among the remaining States in proportion to the amount otherwise allotted to such States for the fiscal year without regard to this paragraph.

(3) In determining the number of eligible legalized aliens for purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the Secretary may estimate such number on the basis of such data as he may deem appropriate.

(4) For each fiscal year the Secretary shall make payments, as provided by section 6503 of title 31, United States Code, to each State from its allotment under this subsection. Any amount paid to a State for any of the following fiscal years and remaining unobligated at the end of such year shall remain available to such State for the purposes for which it was made in subsequent fiscal years, but shall not remain available after September 30, 1994.

(c) PROVIDING ASSISTANCE.—(1) Of the amounts allotted to a State under this section, the State may only use such funds, in accordance with this section—

Subject to paragraph (2), the State may select the distribution of the use of such funds among such purposes.

(2)(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), of the amounts allotted to a State under this section in any fiscal year, 10 percent shall be used by the State for reimbursement under paragraph (1)(A), 10 percent shall be used by the State for reimbursement under paragraph (1)(B), and 10 percent shall be used by the State for payments under paragraph (1)(C).

(B) If a State does not require the use of the full 10 percent provided under subparagraph (A) for a particular function described in a subparagraph of paragraph (1) for a fiscal year, the unused portion shall be equally distributed among the two other subparagraphs.

(C) In no case shall the funds provided under this section be used to provide reimbursement for more than 100 percent of the costs described in paragraph (1)(A) or (1)(B).

(3) To the extent that a State provides for the use of funds for the purpose described in paragraph (1)(C), the definitions and provisions of the Emergency Immigrant Education Act of 1984 (title VI of Public Law 98-511; 20 U.S.C. 4101 et seq.) shall apply to payments under such paragraph in the same manner as they apply to payments under that Act, except that, in applying this paragraph—

(A) any reference in such Act to "immigrant children" shall be deemed to be a reference to "eligible legalized aliens" (including such aliens who are over 16 years of age) during the 60-month period beginning with the first month in which such an alien is granted temporary lawful residence under section 245A(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act;

(B) in determining the amount of payment with respect to eligible legalized aliens who are over 16 years of age, the phrase "described under paragraph (2)" shall be deemed to be stricken from section 606(b)(1)(A) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 4105(b)(1)(A));

(C) the State educational agency may provide such educational services to adult eligible legalized aliens through local educational agencies and other public and private nonprofit organizations, including community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness; and

(D) such services may include English language and other programs designed to enable such aliens to attain the citizenship skills described in section 245A(b)(1)(D)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

(d) STATEMENTS AND ASSURANCES.—(1) No State is eligible for payment under subsection (b) unless the State—

(A) has filed with, and had approved by, the Secretary an application containing such information, including the information described in paragraph (2) and criteria for and administrative methods of disbursing funds received under this section, as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this section, and

(B) transmits to the Secretary a statement of assurances that certifies that (i) funds allotted to the State under this section will only be used to carry out the purposes described in subsection (c)(1), (ii) the State will provide a fair method (as determined by the State) for the allocation of funds among State and local agencies in accordance with paragraph (2) and subsection (c)(2), and (iii) fiscal control and fund accounting procedures will be established that are adequate to meet the requirements of paragraph (3) and subsections (e) and (f).

(2) The application of each State under this subsection for each fiscal year must include detailed information on—

(A) the number of eligible legalized aliens residing in the State, and

(B) the costs (excluding any such costs otherwise paid from Federal funds) which the State and each locality is likely to incur for the purposes described in subsection (c)(1).

(e) REPORTS AND AUDITS.—(1)(A) Each State shall prepare and submit to the Secretary annual reports on its activities under this section. In order to properly evaluate and to compare the performance of different States assisted under this section and to assure the proper expenditure of funds under this section, such reports shall be in such form and contain such information as the Secretary determines (after consultation with the States and the Comptroller General) to be necessary—

(i) to secure an accurate description of those activities,

(ii) to secure a complete record of the purposes for which funds were spent, and of the recipients of such funds, and

(iii) to determine the extent to which funds were expended consistent with this section.

Copies of the report shall be provided, upon request, to any interested public agency, and each such agency may provide its views on these reports to the Congress.

(B) The Secretary shall annually report to the Congress on activities funded under this section and shall provide for transmittal of a copy of such report to each State.

(2)(A) For requirements relating to audits of funds received by a State under this section, see chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code (relating to requirements for single audit).

(B) Each State shall repay to the United States amounts ultimately found not to have been expended in accordance with this section, or the Secretary may offset such amounts against any other amount to which the State is or may become entitled under this section.

(C) The Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, withhold payment of funds to any State which is not using its allotment under this section in accordance with this section. The Secretary may withhold such funds until the Secretary finds that the reason for the withholding has been removed and there is reasonable assurance that it will not recur.

(3) The State shall make copies of the reports and audits required by this subsection available for public inspection within the State.

(4)(A) For the purpose of evaluating and reviewing the assistance provided under this section, the Secretary and the Comptroller General shall have access to any books, accounts, records, correspondence, or other documents that are related to such assistance, and that are in the possession, custody, or control of States, political subdivisions thereof, or any of their grantees.

(B) In conjunction with an evaluation or review under subparagraph (A), no State or political subdivision thereof (or grantee of either) shall be required to create or prepare new records to comply with subparagraph (A).

(f) LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS.—(1) Payment under this section shall not be made for costs to the extent the costs are otherwise reimbursed or paid for under other Federal programs.

(2) Payment may only be made to a State with respect to costs for assistance of a program of public assistance or a program of public health assistance generally to the extent such assistance is otherwise generally available under such programs to citizens residing in the State.

(g) CRIMINAL PENALTIES FOR FALSE STATEMENTS.—Whoever—

(1) knowingly and willfully makes or causes to be made any false statement or misrepresentation of a material fact in connection with the furnishing of assistance or services for which payment may be made by a State from funds allotted to the State under this section, or

(2) having knowledge of the occurrence of any event affecting his initial or continued right to any such payment conceals or fails to disclose such event with an intent fraudulently to secure such payment either in a greater amount than is due or when no such payment is authorized, shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

(h) ANTI-DISCRIMINATION PROVISION.—(1)(A) For the purpose of applying the prohibitions against discrimination on the basis of age under the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, on the basis of handicap under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, on the basis of sex under title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, or on the basis of race, color, or national origin under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, programs and activities funded in whole or in part with funds made available under this section are considered to be programs and activities receiving Federal financial assistance.

(B) No person shall on the ground of sex or religion be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity funded in whole or in part with funds made available under this section.

(2) Whenever the Secretary finds that a State or locality which has been provided payment from an allotment under this section has failed to comply with a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1)(A), with paragraph (1)(B), or with an applicable regulation (including one prescribed to carry out paragraph (1)(B)), he shall notify the chief executive officer of the State and shall request him to secure compliance. If within a reasonable period of time, not to exceed 60 days, the chief executive officer fails or refuses to secure compliance, the Secretary may—

(A) refer the matter to the Attorney General with a recommendation that an appropriate civil action be instituted,

(B) exercise the powers and functions provided by title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, or section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as may be applicable, or

(C) take such other action as may be provided by law.

(3) When a matter is referred to the Attorney General pursuant to paragraph (2)(A), or whenever he has reason to believe that the entity is engaged in a pattern or practice in violation of a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1)(A) or in violation of paragraph (1)(B), the Attorney General may bring a civil action in any appropriate district court of the United States for such relief as may be appropriate, including injunctive relief.

(i) CONSULTATION WITH STATE AND LOCAL OFFICIALS.—In establishing regulations and guidelines to carry out this section, the Secretary shall consult with representatives of State and local governments.

TITLE III—REFORM OF LEGAL IMMIGRATION

PART A—TEMPORARY AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

SEC. 301. H-2A AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.

(a) PROVIDING NEW "H-2A" NONIMMIGRANT CLASSIFICATION FOR TEMPORARY AGRICULTURAL LABOR.—Paragraph (15)(H) of section 101(a) (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)) is amended by striking out "to perform temporary services or labor," in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "(a) to perform agricultural labor or services, as defined by the Secretary of Labor in regulations and including agricultural labor defined in section 3121(g) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and agriculture as defined in section 3(f) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(f)), of a temporary or seasonal nature, or (b) to perform other temporary service or labor".

(b) INVOLVEMENT OF DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR AND AGRICULTURE IN H-2A PROGRAM.—Section 214(c) (8 U.S.C. 1184(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "For purposes of this subsection with respect to nonimmigrants described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a), the term 'appropriate agencies of Government' means the Department of Labor and includes the Department of Agriculture. The provisions of section 216 shall apply to the question of importing any alien as a nonimmigrant under section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a).".

(c) ADMISSION OF H-2A WORKERS.—Chapter 2 of title II is amended by adding after section 215 the following new section:

"ADMISSION OF TEMPORARY H-2A WORKERS

"SEC. 216. (a) CONDITIONS FOR APPROVAL OF H-2A PETITIONS.—(1) A petition to import an alien as an H-2A worker (as defined in subsection (i)(2)) may not be approved by the Attorney General unless the petitioner has applied to the Secretary of Labor for a certification that—

"(A) there are not sufficient workers who are able, willing, and qualified, and who will be available at the time and place needed, to perform the labor or services involved in the petition, and

"(B) the employment of the alien in such labor or services will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed.

"(2) The Secretary of Labor may require by regulation, as a condition of issuing the certification, the payment of a fee to recover the reasonable costs of processing applications for certification.

"(b) CONDITIONS FOR DENIAL OF LABOR CERTIFICATION.—The Secretary of Labor may not issue a certification under subsection (a) with respect to an employer if the conditions described in that subsection are not met or if any of the following conditions are met:

"(1) There is a strike or lockout in the course of a labor dispute which, under the regulations, precludes such certification.

"(2)(A) The employer during the previous two-year period employed H–2A workers and the Secretary of Labor has determined, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, that the employer at any time during that period substantially violated a material term or condition of the labor certification with respect to the employment of domestic or nonimmigrant workers.

"(B) No employer may be denied certification under subparagraph (A) for more than three years for any violation described in such subparagraph.

"(3) The employer has not provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that if the employment for which the certification is sought is not covered by State workers' compensation law, the employer will provide, at no cost to the worker, insurance covering injury and disease arising out of and in the course of the worker's employment which will provide benefits at least equal to those provided under the State workers' compensation law for comparable employment.

"(4) The Secretary determines that the employer has not made positive recruitment efforts within a multi-state region of traditional or expected labor supply where the Secretary finds that there are a significant number of qualified United States workers who, if recruited, would be willing to make themselves available for work at the time and place needed. Positive recruitment under this paragraph is in addition to, and shall be conducted within the same time period as, the circulation through the interstate employment service system of the employer's job offer. The obligation to engage in positive recruitment under this paragraph shall terminate on the date the H-2A workers depart for the employer's place of employment.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES FOR CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.—The following rules shall apply in the case of the filing and consideration of an application for a labor certification under this section:

"(1) DEADLINE FOR FILING APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary of Labor may not require that the application be filed more than 60 days before the first date the employer requires the labor or services of the H–2A worker.

"(2) NOTICE WITHIN SEVEN DAYS OF DEFICIENCIES.—(A) The employer shall be notified in writing within seven days of the date of filing if the application does not meet the standards (other than that described in subsection (a)(1)(A)) for approval.

"(B) If the application does not meet such standards, the notice shall include the reasons therefor and the Secretary shall provide an opportunity for the prompt resubmission of a modified application.

"(3) ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATION.—(A) The Secretary of Labor shall make, not later than 20 days before the date such labor or services are first required to be performed, the certification described in subsection (a)(1) if—

"(i) the employer has complied with the criteria for certification (including criteria for the recruitment of eligible individuals as prescribed by the Secretary), and

"(ii) the employer does not actually have, or has not been provided with referrals of, qualified eligible individuals who have indicated their availability to perform such labor or services on the terms and conditions of a job offer which meets the requirements of the Secretary.

In considering the question of whether a specific qualification is appropriate in a job offer, the Secretary shall apply the normal and accepted qualifications required by non-H-2A-employers in the same or comparable occupations and crops.

"(B)(i) For a period of 3 years subsequent to the effective date of this section, labor certifications shall remain effective only if, from the time the foreign worker departs for the employer's place of employment, the employer will provide employment to any qualified United States worker who applies to the employer until 50 percent of the period of the work contract, under which the foreign worker who is in the job was hired, has elapsed. In addition, the employer will offer to provide benefits, wages and working conditions required pursuant to this section and regulations.

"(ii) The requirement of clause (i) shall not apply to any employer who—

"(I) did not, during any calendar quarter during the preceding calendar year, use more than 500 man-days of agricultural labor, as defined in section 3(u) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(u)),

"(II) is not a member of an association which has petitioned for certification under this section for its members, and

"(III) has not otherwise associated with other employers who are petitioning for temporary foreign workers under this section.

"(iii) Six months before the end of the 3-year period described in clause (i), the Secretary of Labor shall consider the findings of the report mandated by section 403(a)(4)(D) of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 as well as other relevant materials, including evidence of benefits to United States workers and costs to employers, addressing the advisability of continuing a policy which requires an employer, as a condition for certification under this section, to continue to accept qualified, eligible United States workers for employment after the date the H-2A workers depart for work with the employer. The Secretary's review of such findings and materials shall lead to the issuance of findings in furtherance of the Congressional policy that aliens not be admitted under this section unless there are not sufficient workers in the United States who are able, willing, and qualified to perform the labor or service needed and that the employment of the aliens in such labor or services will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the United States similarly employed. In the absence of the enactment of Federal legislation prior to three months before the end of the 3-year period described in clause (i) which addresses the subject matter of this subparagraph, the Secretary shall immediately publish the findings required by this clause, and shall promulgate, on an interim or final basis, regulations based on his findings which shall be effective no later than three years from the effective date of this section.

"(iv) In complying with clause (i) of this subparagraph, an association shall be allowed to refer or transfer workers among its members: Provided, That for purposes of this section an association acting as an agent for its members shall not be considered a joint employer merely because of such referral or transfer.

"(v) United States workers referred or transferred pursuant to clause (iv) of this subparagraph shall not be treated disparately.

"(vi) An employer shall not be liable for payments under section 655.202(b)(6) of title 20, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation) with respect to an H-2A worker who is displaced due to compliance with the requirement of this subparagraph, if the Secretary of Labor certifies that the H-2A worker was displaced because of the employer's compliance with clause (i) of this subparagraph.

"(vii) (I) No person or entity shall willfully and knowingly withhold domestic workers prior to the arrival of H-2A workers in order to force the hiring of domestic workers under clause (i).

"(II) Upon the receipt of a complaint by an employer that a violation of subclause (I) has occurred the Secretary shall immediately investigate. He shall within 36 hours of the receipt of the complaint issue findings concerning the alleged violation. Where the Secretary finds that a violation has occurred, he shall immediately suspend the application of clause (i) of this subparagraph with respect to that certification for that date of need.

"(4) HOUSING.—Employers shall furnish housing in accordance with regulations. The employer shall be permitted at the employer's option to provide housing meeting applicable Federal standards for temporary labor camps or to secure housing which meets the local standards for rental and/or public accomodations or other substantially similar class of habitation: Provided, That in the absence of applicable local standards, State standards for rental and/or public accomodations or other substantially similar class of habitation shall be met: Provided further, That in the absence of applicable local or State standards, Federal temporary labor camp standards shall apply: Provided further, That the Secretary of Labor shall issue regulations which address the specific requirements of housing for employees principally engaged in the range production of livestock: Provided further, That when it is the prevailing practice in the area and occupation of intended employment to provide family housing, family housing shall be provided to workers with families who request it: And provided further, That nothing in this paragraph shall require an employer to provide or secure housing for workers who are not entitled to it under the temporary labor certification regulations in effect on June 1, 1986.

"(d) ROLES OF AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS.—

"(1) PERMITTING FILING BY AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS.—A petition to import an alien as a temporary agricultural worker, and an application for a labor certification with respect to such a worker, may be filed by an association of agricultural producers which use agricultural services.

"(2) TREATMENT OF ASSOCIATIONS ACTING AS EMPLOYERS.—If an association is a joint or sole employer of temporary agricultural workers, the certifications granted under this section to the association may be used for the certified job opportunities of any of its producer members and such workers may be transferred among its producer members to perform agricultural services of a temporary or seasonal nature for which the certifications were granted.

"(3) TREATMENT OF VIOLATIONS.—

"(A) MEMBER'S VIOLATION DOES NOT NECESSARILY DISQUALIFY ASSOCIATION OR OTHER MEMBERS.—If an individual producer member of a joint employer association is determined to have committed an act that under subsection (b)(2) results in the denial of certification with respect to the member, the denial shall apply only to that member of the association unless the Secretary determines that the association or other member participated in, had knowledge of, or reason to know of, the violation.

"(B) ASSOCIATION'S VIOLATION DOES NOT NECESSARILY DISQUALIFY MEMBERS.—(i) If an association representing agricultural producers as a joint employer is determined to have committed an act that under subsection (b)(2) results in the denial of certification with respect to the association, the denial shall apply only to the association and does not apply to any individual producer member of the association unless the Secretary determines that the member participated in, had knowledge of, or reason to know of, the violation.

"(ii) If an association of agricultural producers certified as a sole employer is determined to have committed an act that under subsection (b)(2) results in the denial of certification with respect to the association, no individual producer member of such association may be the beneficiary of the services of temporary alien agricultural workers admitted under this section in the commodity and occupation in which such aliens were employed by the association which was denied certification during the period such denial is in force, unless such producer member employs such aliens in the commodity and occupation in question directly or through an association which is a joint employer of such workers with the producer member.

"(e) EXPEDITED ADMINISTRATIVE APPEALS OF CERTAIN DETERMINATIONS.—(1) Regulations shall provide for an expedited procedure for the review of a denial of certification under subsection (a)(1) or a revocation of such a certification or, at the applicant's request, for a de novo administrative hearing respecting the denial or revocation.

"(2) The Secretary of Labor shall expeditiously, but in no case later than 72 hours after the time a new determination is requested, make a new determination on the request for certification in the case of an H-2A worker if able, willing, and qualified eligible individuals are not actually available at the time such labor or services are required and a certification was denied in whole or in part because of the availability of qualified workers. If the employer asserts that any eligible individual who has been referred is not able, willing, or qualified, the burden of proof is on the employer to establish that the individual referred is not able, willing, or qualified because of employment-related reasons.

"(f) VIOLATORS DISQUALIFIED FOR 5 YEARS.—An alien may not be admitted to the United States as a temporary agricultural worker if the alien was admitted to the United States as such a worker within the previous five-year period and the alien during that period violated a term or condition of such previous admission.

"(g) AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 1987, $10,000,000 for the purposes—

"(A) of recruiting domestic workers for temporary labor and services which might otherwise be performed by nonimmigrants described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a), and

"(B) of monitoring terms and conditions under which such nonimmigrants (and domestic workers employed by the same employers) are employed in the United States.

"(2) The Secretary of Labor is authorized to take such actions, including imposing appropriate penalties and seeking appropriate injunctive relief and specific performance of contractual obligations, as may be necessary to assure employer compliance with terms and conditions of employment under this section.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 1987, such sums as may be necessary for the purpose of enabling the Secretary of Labor to make determinations and certifications under this section and under section 212(a)(14).

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 1987, such sums as may be necessary for the purposes of enabling the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the Secretary's duties and responsibilities under this section.

"(h) MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.—(1) The Attorney General shall provide for such endorsement of entry and exit documents of nonimmigrants described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii) as may be necessary to carry out this section and to provide notice for purposes of section 274A.

"(2) The provisions of subsections (a) and (c) of section 214 and the provisions of this section preempt any State or local law regulating admissibility of nonimmigrant workers.

"(i) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'eligible individual' means, with respect to employment, an individual who is not an unauthorized alien (as defined in section 274A(g)) with respect to that employment.

"(2) The term 'H-2A worker' means a nonimmigrant described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a).".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section apply to petitions and applications filed under sections 214(c) and 216 of the Immigration and Nationality Act on or after the first day of the seventh month beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "effective date").

(e) REGULATIONS.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall approve all regulations to be issued implementing sections 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a) and 216 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, final regulations to implement such sections shall first be issued, on an interim or other basis, not later than the effective date.

(f) SENSE OF CONGRESS RESPECTING CONSULTATION WITH MEXICO.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should establish an advisory commission which shall consult with the Governments of Mexico and of other appropriate countries and advise the Attorney General regarding the operation of the alien temporary worker program established under section 216 of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

(g) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 215 the following new item:

"Sec. 216. Admission of temporary H-2A workers.".

SEC. 302. LAWFUL RESIDENCE FOR CERTAIN SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 1 of title II is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

"SEC. 210. (a) LAWFUL RESIDENCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall adjust the status of an alien to that of an alien lawfully admitted for temporary residence if the Attorney General determines that the alien meets the following requirements:

"(A) APPLICATION PERIOD.—The alien must apply for such adjustment during the 18-month period beginning on the first day of the seventh month that begins after the date of enactment of this section.

"(B) PERFORMANCE OF SEASONAL AGRICULTURAL SERVICES AND RESIDENCE IN THE UNITED STATES.—The alien must establish that he has—

"(i) resided in the United States, and

"(ii) performed seasonal agricultural services in the United States for at least 90 man-days, during the 12-month period ending on May 1, 1986. For purposes of the previous sentence, performance of seasonal agricultural services in the United States for more than one employer on any one day shall be counted as performance of services for only 1 man-day.

"(C) ADMISSIBLE AS IMMIGRANT.—The alien must establish that he is admissible to the United States as an immigrant, except as otherwise provided under subsection (c)(2).

"(2) ADJUSTMENT TO PERMANENT RESIDENCE.—The Attorney General shall adjust the status of any alien provided lawful temporary resident status under paragraph (1) to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence on the following date:

"(A) GROUP 1.—Subject to the numerical limitation established under subparagraph (C), in the case of an alien who has established, at the time of application for temporary residence under paragraph (1), that the alien performed seasonal agricultural services in the United States for at least 90 man-days during each of the 12-months periods ending on May 1, 1984, 1985, and 1986, the adjustment shall occur on the first day after the end of the one-year period that begins on the later of (I) the date the alien was granted such temporary resident status, or (II) the day after the last day of the application period described in paragraph (1)(A).

"(B) GROUP 2.—In the case of aliens to which subparagraph (A) does not apply, the adjustment shall occur on the day after the last day of the two-year period that begins on the later of (I) the date the alien was granted such temporary resident status, or (II) the day after the last day of the application period described in paragraph (1)(A).

"(C) NUMERICAL LIMITATION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to more than 350,000 aliens. If more than 350,000 aliens meet the requirements of such subparagraph, such subparagraph shall apply to the 350,000 aliens whose applications for adjustment were first filed under paragraph (1) and subparagraph (B) shall apply to the remaining aliens.

"(3) TERMINATION OF TEMPORARY RESIDENCE.—During the period of temporary resident status granted an alien under paragraph (1), the Attorney General may terminate such status only upon a determination under this Act that the alien is deportable.

"(4) AUTHORIZED TRAVEL AND EMPLOYMENT DURING TEMPORARY RESIDENCE.—During the period an alien is in lawful temporary resident status granted under this subsection, the alien has the right to travel abroad (including commutation from a residence abroad) and shall be granted authorization to engage in employment in the United States and shall be provided an 'employment authorized' endorsement or other appropriate work permit, in the same manner as for aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

"(5) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, an alien who acquires the status of an alien lawfully admitted for temporary residence under paragraph (1), such status not having changed, is considered to be an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence (as described in section 101(a)(20)), other than under any provision of the immigration laws.

"(b) APPLICATIONS FOR ADJUSTMENT OF STATUS.—

"(1) TO WHOM MAY BE MADE.—

"(A) WITHIN THE UNITED STATES.—The Attorney General shall provide that applications for adjustment of status under subsection (a) may be filed—

"(i) with the Attorney General, or

"(ii) with a designated entity (designated under paragraph (2)), but only if the applicant consents to the forwarding of the application to the Attorney General.

"(B) OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—The Attorney General, in cooperation with the Secretary of State, shall provide a procedure whereby an alien may apply for adjustment of status under subsection (a)(1) at an appropriate consular office outside the United States. If the alien otherwise qualifies for such adjustment, the Attorney General shall provide such documentation of authorization to enter the United States and to have the alien's status adjusted upon entry as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(2) DESIGNATION OF ENTITIES TO RECEIVE APPLICATIONS.—For purposes of receiving applications under this section, the Attorney General—

"(A) shall designate qualified voluntary organizations and other qualified State, local, community, farm labor organizations, and associations of agricultural employers, and

"(B) may designate such other persons as the Attorney General determines are qualified and have substantial experience, demonstrated competence, and traditional long-term involvement in the preparation and submittal of applications for adjustment of status under section 209 or 245, Public Law 89-732, or Public Law 95-145.

"(3) PROOF OF ELIGIBILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An alien may establish that he meets the requirement of subsection (a)(1)(B)(ii) through government employment records, records supplied by employers or collective bargaining organizations, and such other reliable documentation as the alien may provide. The Attorney General shall establish special procedures to credit properly work in cases in which an alien was employed under an assumed name.

"(B) DOCUMENTATION OF WORK HISTORY.—(i) An alien applying for adjustment of status under subsection (a)(1) has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the alien has worked the requisite number of man-days (as required under subsection (a)(1)(B)(ii)).

"(ii) If an employer or farm labor contractor employing such an alien has kept proper and adequate records respecting such employment, the alien's burden of proof under clause (i) may be met by securing timely production of those records under regulations to be promulgated by the Attorney General.

"(iii) An alien can meet such burden of proof if the alien establishes that the alien has in fact performed the work described in subsection (a)(1)(B)(ii) by producing sufficient evidence to show the extent of that employment as a matter of just and reasonable inference. In such a case, the burden then shifts to the Attorney General to disprove the alien's evidence with a showing which negates the reasonableness of the inference to be drawn from the evidence.

"(4) TREATMENT OF APPLICATIONS BY DESIGNATED ENTITIES.—Each designated entity must agree to forward to the Attorney General applications filed with it in accordance with paragraph (1)(A)(ii) but not to forward to the Attorney General applications filed with it unless the applicant has consented to such forwarding. No such entity may make a determination required by this section to be made by the Attorney General.

"(5) LIMITATION ON ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—Files and records prepared for purposes of this section by designated entities operating under this section are confidential and the Attorney General and the Service shall not have access to such files or records relating to an alien without the consent of the alien.

"(6) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—Neither the Attorney General, nor any other official or employee of the Department of Justice, or bureau or agency thereof, may—

"(A) use the information furnished pursuant to an application filed under this section for any purpose other than to make a determination on the application or for enforcement of paragraph (7),

"(B) make any publication whereby the information furnished by any particular individual can be identified, or

"(C) permit anyone other than the sworn officers and employees of the Department or bureau or agency or, with respect to applications filed with a designated entity, that designated entity, to examine individual applications.

Anyone who uses, publishes, or permits information to be examined in violation of this paragraph shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"(7) PENALTIES FOR FALSE STATEMENTS IN APPLICATIONS.—

"(A) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Whoever—

"(i) files an application for adjustment of status under this section and knowingly and willfully falsifies, conceals, or covers up a material fact or makes any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statements or representations, or makes or uses any false writing or document knowing the same to contain any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry, or

"(ii) creates or supplies a false writing or document for use in making such an application, shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"(A) GROUNDS OF EXCLUSION NOT APPLICABLE.—The provisions of paragraphs (14), (20), (21), (25), and (32) of section 212(a) shall not apply.

"(B) WAIVER OF OTHER GROUNDS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the Attorney General may waive any other provision of section 212(a) in the case of individual aliens for humanitarian purposes, to assure family unity, or when it is otherwise in the public interest.

"(ii) GROUNDS THAT MAY NOT BE WAIVED.—The following provisions of section 212(a) may not be waived by the Attorney General under clause (i):

"(I) Paragraph (9) and (10) (relating to criminals).

"(II) Paragraph (15) (relating to aliens likely to become public charges).

"(III) Paragraph (23) (relating to drug offenses), except for so much of such paragraph as relates to a single offense of simple possession of 30 grams or less of marihuana.

"(IV) Paragraphs (27), (28), and (29) (relating to national security and members of certain organizations).

"(V) Paragraph (33) (relating to those who assisted in the Nazi persecutions).

"(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR DETERMINATION OF PUBLIC CHARGE.—An alien is not ineligible for adjustment of status under this section due to being inadmissible under section 212(a)(15) if the alien demonstrates a history of employment in the United States evidencing self-support without reliance on public cash assistance.

"(d) TEMPORARY STAY OF EXCLUSION OR DEPORTATION AND WORK AUTHORIZATION FOR CERTAIN APPLICANTS.—

"(1) BEFORE APPLICATION PERIOD.—The Attorney General shall provide that in the case of an alien who is apprehended before the beginning of the application period described in subsection (a)(1) and who can establish a nonfrivolous case of eligibility to have his status adjusted under subsection (a) (but for the fact that he may not apply for such adjustment until the beginning of such period), until the alien has had the opportunity during the first 30 days of the application period to complete the filing of an application for adjustment, the alien—

"(A) may not be excluded or deported, and

"(B) shall be granted authorization to engage in employment in the United States and be provided an 'employment authorized' endorsement or other appropriate work permit.

"(2) DURING APPLICATION PERIOD.—The Attorney General shall provide that in the case of an alien who presents a nonfrivolous application for adjustment of status under subsection (a) during the application period, and until a final determination on the application has been made in accordance with this section, the alien—

"(A) may not be excluded or deported, and

"(B) shall be granted authorization to engage in employment in the United States and be provided an 'employment authorized' endorsement or other appropriate work permit.

"(e) ADMINISTRATIVE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW.—

"(1) ADMINISTRATIVE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW.—There shall be no administrative or judicial review of a determination respecting an application for adjustment of status under this section except in accordance with this subsection.

"(2) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—

"(A) SINGLE LEVEL OF ADMINISTRATIVE APPELLATE REVIEW.—The Attorney General shall establish an appellate authority to provide for a single level of administrative appellate review of such a determination.

"(B) STANDARD FOR REVIEW.—Such administrative appellate review shall be based solely upon the administrative record established at the time of the determination on the application and upon such additional or newly discovered evidence as may not have been available at the time of the determination.

"(3) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—

"(A) LIMITATION TO REVIEW OF EXCLUSION OR DEPORTATION.—There shall be judicial review of such a denial only in the judicial review of an order of exclusion or deportation under section 106.

"(B) STANDARD FOR JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Such judicial review shall be based solely upon the administrative record established at the time of the review by the appellate authority and the findings of fact and determinations contained in such record shall be conclusive unless the applicant can establish abuse of discretion or that the findings are directly contrary to clear and convincing facts contained in the record considered as a whole.

"(f) TEMPORARY DISQUALIFICATION OF NEWLY LEGALIZED ALIENS FROM RECEIVING AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN.—During the five-year period beginning on the date an alien was granted lawful temporary resident status under subsection (a), and notwithstanding any other provision of law, the alien is not eligible for aid under a State plan approved under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act. Notwithstanding the previous sentence, in the case of an alien who would be eligible for aid under a State plan approved under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act but for the previous sentence, the provisions of paragraph (3) of section 245A(h) shall apply in the same manner as they apply with respect to paragraph (1) of such section and, for this purpose, any reference in section 245A(h)(3) to paragraph (1) is deemed a reference to the previous sentence.

"(g) TREATMENT OF SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—For all purposes (subject to subsections (b)(3) and (f)) an alien whose status is adjusted under this section to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, such status not having changed, shall be considered to be an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence (within the meaning of section 101(a)(20)).

"Sec. 210. Special agricultural workers.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 402(f) of the Social Security Act (as added by section 201(b)(1) of this Act) is amended—

(A) by inserting "and subsection (f) of section 210 of such Act" before the period at the end of paragraph (1);

SEC. 303. DETERMINATIONS OF AGRICULTURAL LABOR SHORTAGES AND ADMISSION OF ADDITIONAL SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 1 of title II is amended by adding after section 210 (added by section 302 of this title) the following new section:

"DETERMINATION OF AGRICULTURAL LABOR SHORTAGES AND ADMISSION OF ADDITIONAL SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

"SEC. 210A. (a) DETERMINATION OF NEED TO ADMIT ADDITIONAL SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Before the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1990 and ending with fiscal year 1993), the Secretaries of Labor and Agriculture (in this section referred to as the 'Secretaries') shall jointly determine the number (if any) of additional aliens who should be admitted to the United States or who should otherwise acquire the status of aliens lawfully admitted for temporary residence under this section during the fiscal year to meet a shortage of workers to perform seasonal agricultural services in the United States during the year. Such number is, in this section, referred to as the 'shortage number'.

"(2) OVERALL DETERMINATION.—The shortage number is—

"(A) the anticipated need for special agricultural workers (as determined under paragraph (4)) for the fiscal year, minus

"(B) the supply of such workers (as determined under paragraph (5)) for that year, divided by the factor (determined under paragraph (6)) for man-days per worker.

"(3) NO REPLENISHMENT IF NO SHORTAGE.—In determining the shortage number, the Secretaries may not determine that there is a shortage unless, after considering all of the criteria set forth in paragraphs (4) and (5), the Secretaries determine that there will not be sufficient able, willing, and qualified workers available to perform seasonal agricultural services required in the fiscal year involved.

"(4) DETERMINATION OF NEED.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(A), the anticipated need for special agricultural workers for a fiscal year is determined as follows:

"(A) BASE.—The Secretaries shall jointly estimate, using statistically valid methods, the number of man-days of labor performed in seasonal agricultural services in the United States in the previous fiscal year.

"(B) ADJUSTMENT FOR CROP LOSSES AND CHANGES IN INDUSTRY.—The Secretaries shall jointly—

"(i) increase such number by the number of man-days of labor in seasonal agricultural services in the United States that would have been needed in the previous fiscal year to avoid any crop damage or other loss that resulted from the unavailability of labor, and

"(ii) adjust such number to take into account the projected growth or contraction in the requirements for seasonal agricultural services as a result of—

"(I) growth or contraction in the seasonal agriculture industry, and

"(II) the use of technologies and personnel practices that affect the need for, and retention of, workers to perform such services.

"(5) DETERMINATION OF SUPPLY.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(B), the anticipated supply of special agricultural workers for a fiscal year is determined as follows:

"(A) BASE.—The Secretaries shall use the number estimated under paragraph (4)(A).

"(B) ADJUSTMENT FOR RETIREMENTS AND INCREASED RECRUITMENT.—The Secretaries shall jointly—

"(i) decrease such number by the number of man-days of labor in seasonal agricultural services in the United States that will be lost due to retirement and movement of workers out of performance of seasonal agricultural services, and

"(ii) increase such number by the number of additional man-days of labor in seasonal agricultural services in the United States that can reasonably be expected to result from the availability of able, willing, qualified, and unemployed special agricultural workers, rural low skill, or manual, laborers, and domestic agricultural workers.

"(C) BASES FOR INCREASED NUMBER.—In making the adjustment under subparagraph (B)(ii), the Secretaries shall consider—

"(i) the effect, if any, that improvements in wages and working conditions offered by employers will have on the availability of workers to perform seasonal agricultural services, taking into account the adverse effect, if any, of such improvements in wages and working conditions on the economic competitiveness of the perishable agricultural industry,

"(ii) the effect, if any, of enhanced recruitment efforts by the employers of such workers and government employment services in the traditional and expected areas of supply of such workers, and

"(iii) the number of able, willing and qualified individuals who apply for employment opportunities in seasonal agricultural services listed with offices of government employment services.

"(D) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to require any individual employer to pay any specified level of wages, to provide any specified working conditions, or to provide for any specified recruitment of workers.

"(6) DETERMINATION OF MAN-DAY PER WORKER FACTOR.—

"(A) FISCAL YEAR 1990.—For fiscal year 1990—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii), for purposes of paragraph (2) the factor under this paragraph is the average number, as estimated by the Director of the Bureau of the Census under subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii), of man-days of seasonal agricultural services performed in the United States in fiscal year 1989 by special agricultural workers whose status is adjusted under section 210 and who performed seasonal agricultural services in the United States at any time during the fiscal year.

"(ii) LACK OF ADEQUATE INFORMATION.—If the Director determines that—"(I) the information reported under subsection (b)(2)(A) is not adequate to make a reasonable estimate of the average number described in clause (i), but

"(II) the inadequacy of the information is not due to the refusal or failure of employers to report the information required under subsection (b)(2)(A), the factor under this paragraph is 90.

"(B) FISCAL YEAR 1991.—For purposes of paragraph (2) for fiscal year 1991, the factor under this paragraph is the average number, as estimated by the Director of the Bureau of the Census under subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii), of man-days of seasonal agricultural services performed in the United States in fiscal year 1990 by special agricultural workers who obtained lawful temporary resident status under this section.

"(C) FISCAL YEARS 1992 AND 1993.—For purposes of paragraph (2) for fiscal years 1992 and 1993, the factor under this paragraph is the average number, as estimated by the Director of the Bureau of the Census under subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii), of man-days of seasonal agricultural services performed in the United States in each of the two previous fiscal years by special agricultural workers who obtained lawful temporary resident status under this section during either of such fiscal years.

"(7) EMERGENCY PROCEDURE FOR INCREASE IN SHORTAGE NUMBER.—

"(A) REQUESTS.—After the beginning of a fiscal year, a group or association representing employers (and potential employers) of individuals who perform seasonal agricultural services may request the Secretaries to increase the shortage number for the fiscal year based upon a showing that extraordinary, unusual, and unforeseen circumstances have resulted in a significant increase in the shortage number due to (i) a significant increase in the need for special agricultural workers in the year, (ii) a significant decrease in the availability of able, willing, and qualified workers to perform seasonal agricultural services, or (iii) a significant decrease (below the factor used for purposes of paragraph (6)) in the number of man-days of seasonal agricultural services performed by aliens who were recently admitted (or whose status was recently adjusted) under this section.

"(B) NOTICE OF EMERGENCY PROCEDURE.—Not later than 3 days after the date the Secretaries receive a request under subparagraph (A), the Secretaries shall provide for notice in the Federal Register of the substance of the request and shall provide an opportunity for interested parties to submit information to the Secretaries on a timely basis respecting the request.

"(C) PROMPT DETERMINATION ON REQUEST.—The Secretaries, not later than 21 days after the date of the receipt of such a request and after consideration of any information submitted on a timely basis with respect to the request, shall make and publish in the Federal Register their determination on the request. The request shall be granted, and the shortage number for the fiscal year shall be increased, to the extent that the Secretaries determine that such an increase is justified based upon the showing and circumstances described in subparagraph (A) and that such an increase takes into account reasonable recruitment efforts having been undertaken.

"(8) PROCEDURE FOR DECREASING MAN-DAYS OF SEASONAL AGRICULTURAL SERVICES REQUIRED IN THE CASE OF OVER-SUPPLY OF WORKERS.—

"(A) REQUESTS.—After the beginning of a fiscal year, a group of special agricultural workers may request the Secretaries to decrease the number of man-days required under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (d)(2) with respect to the fiscal year based upon a showing that extraordinary, unusual, and unforeseen circumstances have resulted in a significant decrease in the shortage number due to (i) a significant decrease in the need for special agricultural workers in the year, (ii) a significant increase in the availability of able, willing, and qualified workers to perform seasonal agricultural services, or (iii) a significant increase (above the factor used for purposes of paragraph (6)) in the number of man-days of seasonal agricultural services performed by aliens who were recently admitted (or whose status was recently adjusted) under this section.

"(B) NOTICE OF REQUEST.—Not later than 3 days after the date the Secretaries receive a request under subparagraph (A), the Secretaries shall provide for notice in the Federal Register of the substance of the request and shall provide an opportunity for interested parties to submit information to the Secretaries on a timely basis respecting the request.

"(C) DETERMINATION ON REQUEST.—The Secretaries, before the end of the fiscal year involved and after consideration of any information submitted on a timely basis with respect to the request, shall make and publish in the Federal Register their determination on the request. The request shall be granted, and the number of man-days specified in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (d)(2) for the fiscal year shall be reduced by the same proportion as the Secretaries determine that a decrease in the shortage number is justified based upon the showing and circumstances described in subparagraph (A).

"(b) ANNUAL NUMERICAL LIMITATION ON ADMISSION OF ADDITIONAL SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—

"(1) ANNUAL NUMERICAL LIMITATION.—

"(A) FISCAL YEAR 1990.—The numerical limitation on the number of aliens who may be admitted under subsection (c)(1) or who otherwise may acquire lawful temporary residence under such subsection for fiscal year 1990 is—

"(i) 95 percent of the number of individuals whose status was adjusted under section 210(a), minus

"(ii) the number estimated under paragraph (3)(A)(i) for fiscal year 1989 (as adjusted in accordance with subparagraph (C)).

"(B) FISCAL YEARS 1991, 1992, AND 1993.—The numerical limitation on the number of aliens who may be admitted under subsection (c)(1) or who otherwise may acquire lawful temporary residence under such subsection for fiscal year 1991, 1992, or 1993 is—

"(i) 90 percent of the number described in this clause for the previous fiscal year (or, for fiscal year 1991, the number described in subparagraph (A)(i)), minus

"(ii) the number estimated under paragraph (3)(A)(i) for the previous fiscal year (as adjusted in accordance with subparagraph (C)).

"(C) ADJUSTMENT TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT CHANGE IN NUMBER OF H–2 AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—The number used under subparagraph (A)(ii) or (B)(ii) (as the case may be) shall be increased or decreased to reflect any numerical increase or decrease, respectively, in the number of aliens admitted to perform temporary seasonal agricultural services (as defined in subsection (g)(2)) under section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a) in the fiscal year compared to such number in the previous fiscal year.

"(2) REPORTING OF INFORMATION ON EMPLOYMENT.—In the case of a person or entity who employs, during a fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1989 and ending with fiscal year 1992) in seasonal agricultural services, a special agricultural worker—

"(A) whose status was adjusted under section 210, the person or entity shall furnish an official designated by the Secretaries with a certificate (at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretaries establish, after consultation with the Attorney General and the Director of the Bureau of the Census) of the number of man-days of employment performed by the alien in seasonal agricultural services during the fiscal year, or

"(B) who was admitted or whose status was adjusted under this section, the person or entity shall furnish the alien and an official designated by the Secretaries with a certificate (at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretaries establish, after consultation with the Attorney General and the Director of the Bureau of the Census) of the number of man-days of employment performed by the alien in seasonal agricultural services during the fiscal year.

"(3) ANNUAL ESTIMATE OF EMPLOYMENT OF SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of the Census shall, before the end of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1989 and ending with fiscal year 1992), estimate—

"(i) the number of special agricultural workers who have performed seasonal agricultural services in the United States at any time during the fiscal year, and

"(ii) for purposes of subsection (a)(5), the average number of man-days of such services certain of such workers have performed in the United States during the fiscal year.

"(B) FURNISHING OF INFORMATION TO DIRECTOR.—The official designated by the Secretaries under paragraph (2) shall furnish to the Director, in such form and manner as the Director specifies, information contained in the certifications furnished to the official under paragraph (2).

"(C) BASIS FOR ESTIMATES.—The Director shall base the estimates under subparagraph (A) on the information furnished under subparagraph (B), but shall take into account (to the extent feasible) the underreporting or duplicate reporting of special agricultural workers who have performed seasonal agricultural services at any time during the fiscal year. The Director shall periodically conduct appropriate surveys, of agricultural employers and others, to ascertain the extent of such underreporting or duplicate reporting.

"(D) REPORT.—The Director shall annually prepare and report to the Congress information on the estimates made under this paragraph.

"(c) ADMISSION OF ADDITIONAL SPECIAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1990 and ending with fiscal year 1993), the Attorney General shall provide for the admission for lawful temporary resident status, or for the adjustment of status to lawful temporary resident status, of a number of aliens equal to the shortage number (if any, determined under subsection (a)) for the fiscal year, or, if less, the numerical limitation established under subsection (b)(1) for the fiscal year. No such alien shall be admitted who is not admissible to the United States as an immigrant, except as otherwise provided under subsection (e).

"(2) ALLOCATION OF VISAS.—The Attorney General shall, in consultation with the Secretary of State, provide such process as may be appropriate for aliens to petition for immigrant visas or to adjust status to become aliens lawfully admitted for temporary residence under this subsection. No alien may be issued a visa as an alien to be admitted under this subsection or may have the alien's status adjusted under this subsection unless the alien has had a petition approved under this paragraph.

"(d) RIGHTS OF ALIENS ADMITTED OR ADJUSTED UNDER THIS SECTION.—

"(1) ADJUSTMENT TO PERMANENT RESIDENCE.—The Attorney General shall adjust the status of any alien provided lawful temporary resident status under subsection (c) to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence at the end of the 3-year period that begins on the date the alien was granted such temporary resident status.

"(2) TERMINATION OF TEMPORARY RESIDENCE.—During the period of temporary resident status granted an alien under subsection (c), the Attorney General may terminate such status only upon a determination under this Act that the alien is deportable.

"(3) AUTHORIZED TRAVEL AND EMPLOYMENT DURING TEMPORARY RESIDENCE.—During the period an alien is in lawful temporary resident status granted under this section, the alien has the right to travel abroad (including commutation from a residence abroad) and shall be granted authorization to engage in employment in the United States and shall be provided an 'employment authorized' endorsement or other appropriate work permit, in the same manner as for aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

"(4) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, an alien who acquires the status of an alien lawfully admitted for temporary residence under subsection (c), such status not having changed, is considered to be an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence (as described in section 101(a)(20)), other than under any provision of the immigration laws.

"(5) EMPLOYMENT IN SEASONAL AGRICULTURAL SERVICES REQUIRED.—

"(A) FOR 3 YEARS TO AVOID DEPORTATION.—In order to meet the requirement of this paragraph (for purposes of this subsection and section 241(a)(20)), an alien, who has obtained the status of an alien lawfully admitted for temporary residence under this section, must establish to the Attorney General that the alien has performed 90 man-days of seasonal agricultural services—

"(i) during the one-year period beginning on the date the alien obtained such status,

"(ii) during the one-year period beginning one year after the date the alien obtained such status, and

"(iii) during the one-year period beginning two years after the date the alien obtained such status.

"(B) FOR 5 YEARS FOR NATURALIZATION.—Notwithstanding any provision in title III, an alien admitted under this section may not be naturalized as a citizen of the United States under that title unless the alien has performed 90 man-days of seasonal agricultural services in each of 5 fiscal years (not including any fiscal year before the fiscal year in which the alien was admitted under this section).

"(C) PROOF.—In meeting the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B), an alien may submit such documentation as may be submitted under section 210(b)(3).

"(D) ADJUSTMENT OF NUMBER OF MAN-DAYS REQUIRED.—The number of man-days specified in subparagraphs (A) and (B) are subject to adjustment under subsection (a)(8).

"(6) DISQUALIFICATION FROM CERTAIN PUBLIC ASSISTANCE.—The provisions of section 245A(h) (other than paragraph (1)(A)(iii)) shall apply to an alien who has obtained the status of an alien lawfully admitted for temporary residence under this section, during the five-year period beginning on the date the alien obtained such status, in the same manner as they apply to an alien granted lawful temporary residence under section 245A; except that, for purposes of this paragraph, assistance furnished under the Legal Services Corporation Act (42 U.S.C. 2996 et seq.) or under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 (42 U.S.C. 1471 et seq.) shall not be construed to be financial assistance described in section 245A(h)(1)(A)(i).

"(e) DETERMINATION OF ADMISSIBILITY OF ADDITIONAL WORKERS.—In the determination of an alien's admissibility under subsection (c)(1)—

"(1) GROUNDS OF EXCLUSION NOT APPLICABLE.—The provisions of paragraphs (14), (20), (21), (25), and (32) of section 212(a) shall not apply.

"(2) WAIVER OF CERTAIN GROUNDS FOR EXCLUSION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Attorney General may waive any other provision of section 212(a) in the case of individual aliens for humanitarian purposes, to assure family unity, or when it is otherwise in the public interest.

"(B) GROUNDS THAT MAY NOT BE WAIVED.—The following provisions of section 212(a) may not be waived by the Attorney General under subparagraph (A):

"(i) Paragraphs (9) and (10) (relating to criminals).

"(ii) Paragraph (23) (relating to drug offenses), except for so much of such paragraph as relates to a single offense of simple possession of 30 grams or less of marihuana.

"(3) MEDICAL EXAMINATION.—The alien shall be required, at the alien's expense, to undergo such a medical examination (including a determination of immunization status) as is appropriate and conforms to generally accepted professional standards of medical practice.

"(f) TERMS OF EMPLOYMENT RESPECTING ALIENS ADMITTED UNDER THIS SECTION.—

"(1) EQUAL TRANSPORTATION FOR DOMESTIC WORKERS.—If a person employs an alien, who was admitted or whose status is adjusted under subsection (c), in the performance of seasonal agricultural services and provides transportation arrangements or assistance for such workers, the employer must provide the same transportation arrangements or assistance (generally comparable in expense and scope) for other individuals employed in the performance of seasonal agricultural services.

"(2) PROHIBITION OF FALSE INFORMATION BY CERTAIN EMPLOYERS.—A farm labor contractor, agricultural employer, or agricultural association who is an exempt person (as defined in paragraph (5)) shall not knowingly provide false or misleading information to an alien who was admitted or whose status was adjusted under subsection (c) concerning the terms, conditions, or existence of agricultural employment (described in subsection (a), (b), or (c) of section 301 of MASAWPA).

"(B) violates paragraph (1) or (2), or

"(C) violates the provisions of section 505(a) of MASAWPA (as they apply under paragraph (3)), the person or entity is subject to a civil money penalty under section 503 of MASAWPA in the same manner as if the person or entity had committed a violation of MASAWPA.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two House on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1200) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to effectively control unauthorized immigration to the United States, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text with an amendment which is a substitute for the text of the Senate bill and the House amendment. The differences between the text of the Senate bill, the House amendment, and the subsitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

In addition, the House amendment to the title of the bill substituted a different title. The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the title of the House amendment to the title.

SCOPE OF SANCTIONS COVERAGE

The Senate bill penalized employers who knowingly hired, recruited, or referred for a fee, or other consideration, undocumented aliens.

The House amendment did not include the term "or other consideration."

The Conference substitute adopts the House approach. It is the intent of the Conferees that the employer be able to rely on such referrals for purposes of complying with the verification requirements under the bill so that employers will not be in violation of any contrary contractual provisions with union hiring halls.

PENALTY STRUCTURE

A. CITATION STATE

The Senate bill provided for a 6 month notice and warning (citation) period for a first violation of knowingly hiring, recruiting or referring undocumented aliens, following the initial six month education period during which no penalties apply.

The House amendment provided for a 1 year notice and warning (citation) period for a first offense following the initial 6 month education period during which no penalties apply.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. The Conferees wish to make it clear that following receipt of a citation, an employer is subject to civil penalties even though the citation period has not expired.

B. CIVIL AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES

The Senate bill established a 3-tiered civil penalty structure:

(1) $100-$2,000 for a first offense.

(2) $2,000-$5,000 for a second offense.

(3) $3,000-$10,000 for "pattern or practice" violations.

As noted, "pattern or practice" violation was a precondition to the third tier of civil fines. The Senate bill also imposed criminal penalties of $3,000 and/or 6 months imprisonment for "pattern or practice" violations, following imposition of a civil fine.

The House amendment established a 2-tier civil penalty structure:

(1) $1,000-$2,000 for a first offense, and

(2) $2,000-$5,000 for a subsequent offense.

It also imposed criminal penalties of $1,000 and/or 6 months imprisonment for "pattern or practice" violations.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision with two modifications. First, the minimum fine for a first violation (also applying at any time after a citation during the citation period) is $250 rather than the $100 contained in the Senate bill. Second, the requirement of a "pattern or practice" for the third tier of civil fines is eliminated and the requirement of a civil fine as a prerequisite to a criminal penalty is eliminated.

It is the intention of the Conferees that criminal sanctions are to be used for serious or repeat offenders who have clearly demonstrated an intention to evade the law by engaging in a pattern or practice of employment, recruitment, or referral of persons who do not meet the requirements under sections (1)(A) or (2) of subsection (a) of section 274A. The Conferees expect the Immigration and Naturalization Service to target its enforcement resources on repeat offenders and that the size of the employer shall be a factor in the allocation of such resources.

TERMINATION OF SANCTIONS

The Senate bill required the General Accounting Office (GAO) to submit to Congress, and a specially created task force, three annual reports regarding, among other things, whether a pattern of employment discrimination based on national origins has resulted from employer sanctions. It then requires the task force to submit a report, with legislative recommendations, to Congress if the GAO report in fact discovered such discrimination. The House and Senate must hold hearings within 60 days of receipt of the task force report. The bill further specified that employer sanctions shall cease 30 days after receipt of the final report required to be transmitted if: (1) GAO has reported that a widespread pattern of discrimination has resulted solely from employer sanctions; and (2) there is enacted within such 30-day period a joint resolution stating that Congress approves the findings in the report.

It requires expeditious consideration in the House and Senate of any such resolution and specifies procedures governing Senate consideration of such resolution.

The House amendment terminated employer sanctions and the anti-discrimination program automatically six and one-half years after the date of enactment.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision.

ANTIDISCRIMINATION PROVISION

As noted above, the Senate bill required the General Accounting Office (GAO) to submit to Congress, and a specially created task force, three annual reports regarding, among other things, whether a pattern of employment discrimination based on national origins has resulted from employer sanctions.

The House amendment prohibited employment discrimination based on citizenship status or national origins. It applies to employers who employ more than three or fewer than fifteen employees and covers U.S. citizens, permanent resident aliens, refugees, asylees, and newly legalized aliens, who have filed a notice of intent to become U.S. citizens. It allowed employers to choose a U.S. citizen over an alien when applicants are equally qualified. It established a Special Counsel in the Department of Justice to investigate and prosecute claims claims of employment discrimination and provides for certain sanctions against offending employers, including fines, granting of back pay, and requirement that the employer keep paperwork on future job applicants.

The Conference substitute adopts the House language with certain amendments.

The antidiscrimination provisions of this bill are a complement to the sanctions provisions, and must be considered in this context. The bill broadens the Title VII protections against national origin discrimination, while not broadening the other Title VII protections, because of the concern of some Members that people of "foreign" appearance might be made more vulnerable by the imposition of sanctions. While the bill is not discriminatory, there is some concern that some employers may decide not to hire "foreign" appearing individuals to avoid sanctions.

The antidiscrimination provisions of the bill will only provide this broadened protection while the sanctions are in effect; if the sanctions are repealed by joint resolution, the antidiscrimination provisions will also expire, the justification for them having been removed.

The antidiscrimination provisions would also be repealed in the event of a joint resolution approving a GAO finding that the sanctions had resulted in no significant discrimination, or that the administration of the antidiscrimination provisions had resulted in an unreasonable burden on employers. In this regard, the Conference also expect that GAO would specifically look into the issue of whether the anti-discrimination mechanism and remedies are being utilized in a manner that is inconsistent with their original purpose (i.e. to guard against employment discrimination based on national origins or citizenship status). Conferees wish to emphasize that the anti-discrimination provision has been included in order to respond to the fears and concerns expressed by many that sanctions will result in employment discrimination based on national origins or citizenship status. Thus, the anti-discrimination provision does not in itself in any way set a precedent for the expansion of other Title VII protections. Furthermore, nothing in this bill shall prevent the use of language as a Bona Fide Occupational Qualification.

VERIFICATION/RECORD KEEPING REQUIREMENTS

The Senate bill provide that employers with four or more employees, but not recruiters or referrers, must comply with various verification requirements. It required that a person employing four or more persons must verify that he/she has examined documents which establish both (1) employment authorization and (2) identity (showing that the individual is not presenting documents relating to another individual). A U.S. passport, certificate of U.S. citizenship, certificate of naturalization, or certain resident alien cards would establish both. Otherwise, one document of each type would be presented. Employment authorization documents would include the Social Security card or birth certificate. Identity documents would include: drivers's license, other State-issue card, or, under certain circumstances, other documentation approved by the Attorney General. The Senate bill also provided that the attestation forms signed by the employer and employees must be retained for specified periods.

The Senate bill did not impose civil fines for failure to satisfy the above requirements. Instead, it provided that if an employer did not meet them, the employer was presumed to have knowingly hired the alien. The presumption could have been rebutted by "clear and convincing evidence" to the contrary.

The House amendment required employers to verify all new hires by examining either (1) a U.S. passport, or (2) a U.S. birth certificate or Social Security card and a driver's license, state issued I.D. card, or an alien identification document and required each employer to attest, in writing, under penalty of perjury, that he/she has seen the documentation mentioned above. It also required the employee to attest in writing that he/she is authorized to work in the U.S. It also required the employer to retain the attestation forms for such periods as may be specified by the Attorney General. Failure to follow these verification/record keeping requirement would have subjected the offending party to a civil fine of between $250–$1000.

The House amendment also provided that nothing in this section of the legislation was to be construed as authorizing, directly or indirectly, the creation of a national identification card.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provisions on coverage for, and the mandatory nature of, the verification/record keeping requirements. It adopts the Senate provisions on the documents to be used during the verification process and the time periods for retaining the attestation forms. It provides a minimum civil fine of $100 for violations of these requirements in lieu of the $250 minimum fine in the House amendment. The Conference substitute also provides that violations of the hiring prohibition in the bill shall be considered in assessing the level of the civil fineto be imposed. It also includes the House provision that "nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the issuance or use of national identification cards or the establishment of a national identification card."

VERIFICATION PROCESS AND STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE DOCUMENTATION

The House amendment provided that an employer will be deemed to have complied with the verification requirements, if an individual has been referred for employment by a state employment agency, if such employer retains appropriate documentation of the referral by that agency which specifically certifies that such agency has satisfied such requirements.

The Senate had no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision. The Conferees, however, wish to emphasize that this provision is not intended to impose any affirmative duty or obligation upon State employment service offices or personnel.

TIME FOR COMPLIANCE WITH VERIFICATION PROCESS

The House amendment provided employers with a 24 hour grace period for compliance with the verification requirements.

The Senate bill had no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute does not contain the House provision. However, the Conferees direct the Attorney General to develop and promulgate regulations regarding the time for compliance which addresses the practical problems confronting farm workers and agricultural employers in satisfying the discrimination and verification requirements of this legislation. The employer shall be presumed to be in compliance with the paperwork and verification requirements for the first twenty-four hours after the worker has been hired to allow the worker time to produce the required documents under this subsection. The Justice Department may rebut this presumption with evidence that the employer has attempted to evade liability for employer sanctions and responsibilities for verification through the employment of day hires.

FUTURE VERIFICATION SYSTEM

A. GENERAL PROVISIONS

The Senate bill directed the President to monitor the verification system. If he finds that the system is not secure, he must seek to implement such changes as may be necessary to establish a secure system to determine employment authorization. Such changes would only be permitted after notice to Congress: 2 years for a major change, such as a telephone verification system or a new identification document, and 60 days for a non-Major change, such as an improved Social Security card. It also authorized the President to establish demonstration projects for up to three years, and required studies of the Executive Branch and GAO to evaluate the use of a telephone verification system and possible improvements in the current Social Security card.

The House amendment directed the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretaries of Labor and Health and Human Services, to conduct a study on the use of a telephone verification system for determining the employment eligibility of aliens in the U.S. The House amendment also directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct a feasibility study of a social security number validation system.

The conference substitute adopts the Senate provision regarding a future verification system, with an amendment with regard to the use of Social Security cards (discussed below) and with the addition of House language prohibiting the development of a national i.d. card. The conference substitute also includes a study of both the telephone verification system and a study on the feasibility of a social security number validation system.

The scope of the studies required in sections 101(d) and 101(e) of the House amendment are separate and distinct and do not overlap. The study required by section 101(d) is to examine the possible use of the Federal data bases excluding data collected through the Social Security Administration by use of the social security number. The study conducted under section 101(e) is to be the only examination of the feasibility of a telephone verification system involving the social security number, account card, and data collected using the social security number and card.

B. USE OF SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS

The Senate bill allowed the use of current and previous government-issued social security cards as proof of employment authorization in the U.S., allowed the President to require (without notice to Congress) universal use of the current social security card for employment authorization, allowed the President to make changes in the current version of the social security card after 60 days notices to Congress, and allowed the President to require a new card, document, or other system to be presented for worker verification after two years' notice to Congress and specific Congressional appropriations for the change.

The House amendment allowed the use of current and previous government-issued social security cards as proof of employment authorization in the United States.

The conference substitute requires the President to provide one year's notice to Congress before instituting any change in the social security card (including a requirement that current social security cards be universally used for employment authorization), and requires Congress to specifically appropriate funds for any such change.

INS FUNDING FOR ENFORCEMENT AND SERVICES

The Senate bill provided a two-year authorization of appropriations for the Immigration and Naturalization Service as follows: $840 million for fiscal year 1987 and $830 million for fiscal year 1988.

The House amendment provided a two-year supplemental authorization of appropriations for the Immigration and Naturalization Service as follows: $422 million for fiscal year 1986 and $419 million for fiscal year 1987. The amendment also authorizes, for fiscal years 1987 through 1989, such sums as may be necessary to provide for an increase in border patrol personnel so that the average level of such personnel is 50% higher than such level in fiscal year 1986.

The Conference substitute provides supplemental authorizations at the House levels for fiscal years 1987 and 1988. Within these levels the conferees were aware that at least $184 million was to be expended on enhanced enforcement efforts. The Conferees agree as to the need for sufficient funding to ensure a 50 percent increase in border patrol personnel in accordance with the House provision.

IMMIGRATION EMERGENCIES

The Senate bill established a revolving fund to provide assistance in the case of an immigration emergency.

The House amendment required the Attorney General to develop a contingency plan for operation in an immigration emergency and established a fund to be used for assistance.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision but deletes the revolving nature of the emergency fund. The Conference substitute deletes the requirement that the Attorney General develop a contingency plan because it is the Conferees' understanding that a plan has already been developed.

SAVE PROGRAM

A. GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

The Senate bill required States to verify, through INS computer records, the legal status of all aliens applying for benefits under certain programs of public assistance.

The House amendment required States to verify, through INS computer records, the legal status of all aliens applying for benefits under certain programs of public assistance, and allowed a waiver to be granted, upon recommendation of the appropriate Secretary, for covered programs where a particular verification program would not be cost-effective or would be redundant.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision.

B. PROGRAM INFRASTRUCTURE

The Senate bill reimbursed state governments for 90% of the non-labor costs of the SAVE program, and applied the verification requirements to the AFDC, Medicaid, Unemployment Compensation, Food Stamp, and SSI programs.

The House amendment reimbursed state governments for 100% of the total costs of the SAVE program, applied the verification requirements to the AFC, Medicaid, Unemployment Compensation, Food Stamp, Housing Assistance, and Higher Education programs, and provided for a hearing process in the case of an applicant with an unresolved immigration status.

The conference substitute adopts the House provision.

LEGALIZATION

The Senate bill created a Commission to study enforcement measures designed to curtail employment of undocumented aliens and issue a finding on whether effective enforcement measures have been instituted. It granted temporary status to aliens who entered the United States illegally or fell into illegal status prior to Janaury 1, 1980 and who have resided continuously in the United States since then only when the Commission issues its finding, or after three years, whichever is earlier. It adjusted the status of these people to permanent residence after two and one-half years of temporary status upon a showing of general admissibility and basic citizenship skills.

The House amendment provided temporary status to aliens who entered the United States illegally or fell into illegal status prior to January 1, 1982 and who have resided continuously in the United States since then. It adjusted the status of these people to permanent residence after one year of temporary status upon a showing of general admissibility and basic citizenship skills.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision (including the 1982 date) with an amendment making the period of time spent in temporary status eighteen months.

LEGALIZATION APPLICATION FEES

The Senate bill provided a minimum fee of $100 per alien to file an application for legalization.

The House amendment established a maximum fee of $75 for individuals and $175 for families.

The Conference substitute requires the Attorney General to prescribe a fee schedule for the filing of applications under the legalization program. It is the understanding of the Conferees that the fee level should be sufficient to cover the costs of processing applications and should be comparable to those charged for aliens seeking entry into the United States as immigrants.

LEGALIZATION DOCUMENTS EVIDENCING EMPLOYMENT

The Senate bill required legalization applicants to submit documents to support continuous residence, together with independent corroboration of the information contained in the documents, which documents should be employment-related if available and obtainable by the applicant.

The House amendment contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. The Conferees prefer the use of employment-related documents whenever possible, because this type of documentation is viewed as the "best evidence" of continuous residence. The employment-related documents need not be provided only by the employer, and independent corroboration of the information contained may be in the form of affidavits.

DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION ON LEGALIZATION

The Senate bill provided that the Attorney General, in cooperation with qualified organizations and governments and the Secretary of Labor, shall broadly disseminate information respecting the benefits aliens may receive under the legalization program and the requirements to obtain such benefits.

The House amendment provided that the Attorney General, in cooperation with designated agencies, organizations and persons, shall broadly disseminate in English and other appropriate languages information respecting the benefits aliens may receive under the legalization program and the requirements to obtain such benefits.

The Conference substitute adopts the House language, but deletes "in English and other appropriate languages." It is in the intent of the Conferees that such information include: (1) information respecting the requirements that aliens with lawful temporary residence status would have to meet to have their status adjusted to permanent resident status and the facilities available to provide education and employment training and opportunities in order to meet such requirements; (2) information on the conditions under which temporary lawful residence status can be rescinded; (3) information on conditions for employment and foreign travel of aliens with lawful temporary residence status; and (4) information respecting compulsory school enrollment requirements for minors in the various States and localities and the identification of the appropriate schools in which children should be enrolled.

LEGALIZATION FUNDING

The Senate bill provided for a capped entitlement (subject to appropriations) of $3 billion over six years. Legalization funds were authorized to be used for state costs incurred due to the participation of legalized aliens in programs of public assistance. Except for a small number of PRUCOL aliens currently receiving SSI, the Senate bill disqualified all newly legalized aliens from federal programs of public assistance for six years.

The House amendment provided for 100% federal reimbursement (subject to appropriations) of state costs incurred due to the legalization program. The funds were authorized to be used for state programs of public assistance, programs of public health assistance, and local educational agency services. All legalized aliens were disqualified for five years from all federal programs of public assistance, except for SSI and Medicaid in certain circumstances.

The conference substitute provides for an immediate appropriation of $1 billion for each of the four fiscal years beginning in 1988 and ending in 1991. Unused funds may be expended by states through FY 1994. Federal costs related to the exceptions in Medicaid and SSI are subtracted from the annual appropriation. The Secretary of HHS is to provide the states with payments to reimburse their legalization costs based on a formula that includes the number of legalized aliens in a state and the amount of money a state expends on such aliens. The States may use the funds to reimburse costs under programs of public assistance, programs of public health assistance, and services provided by local educational agencies. Also, 30% of a state's allotment must be equally divided between the three programs mentioned above, except that no program may be reimbursed for more than actual costs. The remaining 70% of a state's allotment may be used at a state's discretion among the programs previously mentioned.

TEMPORARY AGRICULTURAL WORKERS AND AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION

The Senator bill created a new nonimmigrant category for the admission of foreign temporary agricultural workers. Under the Senate bill, such workers would no longer be admitted under the "H" nonimmigrant category, but instead under the newly created program, a variety of provisions outlining the responsibilities and rights of such workers, and agricultural employers wishing to employ, or employing them were contained in the Senate bill. The Senate bill also created a Commission to study agricultural worker issues.

The House amendment created a new nonimmigrant subcategory, H-2A, for the admission of foreign temporary agricultural workers. The House amendment outlined the various rights and responsibilities of the various parties under the program and also created a Commission to study agricultural worker issues.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provisions.

LEGAL SERVICES FOR H-2 WORKERS

The House amendment specified that nonimmigrant workers admitted or permitted to remain in the United States for agricultural labor or services shall be treated like lawful permanent resident aliens for purposes of eligibility for legal services under the Legal Services Corporation Act.

The Senate bill contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute provides that such foreign agricultural workers will be eligible for legal services.

Legal services are to be made available to H-2 aliens with regard to housing, wages, transportation and other conditions of employment under their H-2 contract. Legal services are not meant to be an organizing tool in behalf of farm workers and is not meant to be used in order to harass growers. It is the intent of the Conferees that contracts entered into shall not violate any provision of the Immigration and Nationality Act authorizing the H-2 program or any regulations issued pursuant to that Act. Further, the Conferees intend that the Conference substitute will secure the rights of H-2 agricultural workers under the specific contract under which they were admitted to this country.

AGRICULTURAL LABOR TRANSITION PROGRAM

The Senate bill established a three-year agricultural labor transition program during which an agricultural employer would be permitted, on a declining percentage basis, to meet his non-domestic seasonal agricultural worker needs with transition workers. Undocumented aliens who met certain enumerated requirements would be eligible to apply for transition worker status.

The House amendment contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the House position, thereby deleting the provision.

ALIEN CREW MEMBERS

The House amendment prohibited the admission of nonimmigrant alien crew members to perform services at a time when there is a strike in the bargaining unit of the employer in which the alien intends to perform such service.

The Senate bill contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision but only places a one-year moratorium on the admission of such crew members. The Conferees agree that this is an important issue and intend that Congress study and investigate the issue during the one-year moratorium period.

SEASONAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

The Senate bill created a three-year program for the annual admission of up to 350,000 nonimmigrant workers to perform seasonal agricultural services in perishable commodities. The House bill required employers wishing to utilize the service of such workers to make a good faith effort to recruit domestic workers. Taking into account these efforts, the historical employment need of employers for seasonal agricultural labor in perishable commodities, and the availability of domestic workers, the Attorney General would admit, subject to the cap, the number of workers needed. Such workers would not be permitted to accept employment not involving seasonal agricultural services and would not be eligible for programs of public assistance.

The House amendment created a seven-year program for the adjustment and admission of foreign agricultural workers to meet U.S. grower labor needs regarding perishable commodities. Under this program, two groups of agricultural workers would be adjusted or admitted: seasonal agricultural workers and replenishment agricultural workers.

Regarding seasonal agricultural workers, the House amendment provided that an alien who had worked 90 man-days in perishable agriculture during the 12-month period ending May 1, 1986 could apply for lawful temporary resident status in the United States. Such aliens would remain in temporary status for two years at which point they could apply for adjustment to lawful permanent resident status.

Aliens who had met not only the 90-day requirement (described above) but had also performed 90 man-days of perishable agricultural labor (1) during the twelve-month period ending May 1, 1985, and (2) during the twelve-month period ending May 1, 1984, would remain in temporary status for one year before being allowed to apply for adjustment to lawful permanent resident status. The number of aliens who would be granted such one-year temporary status would be capped at 350,000. Further, such individuals would not be eligible to receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children for five years and would have limited access to Medicaid benefits.

Regarding replenishment agricultural workers, the House amendment provided that in the event of a shortage of workers to perform seasonal agricultural labor in the United States in a particular year (such question as to the existence or extent of the shortage to be determined jointly by the Secretaries of Labor and Agriculture) additional alien workers to perform such labor could be admitted. The replenishment program would last from fiscal year 1990 through 1993. The maximum number of replenishment workers admissible in any such year would be based on a formula that takes into account the number of seasonal agricultural workers originally adjusted.

Replenishment workers would receive three years of temporary resident status and would be required to perform at least 90-man-days of labor in seasonal agricultural labor in each of those years. Upon completion of these requirements, such workers would be eligible to apply for adjustment to lawful permanent resident status. In order to become naturalized U.S. citizens, such workers would be required to meet the above described labor requirements for an additional two years. Replenishment workers would be disqualified for five years—and with the exception of eligibility under the Food Stamp Act—to the same extent as newly legalized aliens, from receiving public assistance.

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision.

It is the intent of the Conferees that the residence requirement for special agricultural workers does not require that a prospective special agricultural worker had to have been continuously resident in the U.S. in order to qualify for such status, nor that such a worker have only been present for the manday per year requirement, but instead that the conferees intend "resided" to mean 6 months per year, in the aggregate, in the U.S. for the "Group 1" workers, and 6 months, in the aggregate, in the U.S. between May 1985 and the date of enactment for "Group 2" workers.

Special agricultural workers (SAWs) who might otherwise be excluded as public charges under section 212(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act may nonetheless be admitted if they satisfy the special rule for determination of public charge under section 210(c)(2)(C). For the purpose of the special rule for SAWs, the requirement of a history of employment in the United States can be satisfied by evaluating whether the individual in question meets the eligibility standards to become a Group 1 or Group 2 SAW.

For replenishment agricultural workers (RAWs), they may also demonstrate a history of employment in the United States under the special rule. RAW admissions are triggered by a determination that a shortage of SAWs exist. This determination may served, as evidence that employment is available to qualifying aliens entering as RAWs and, as such, they would not likely become public charges.

It is the intent of the Conferees that, for the purposes of calculating the annual numerical limitation on replenishment agricultural workers admissions (section 210(A)(c)(1), the term "at any time" means the number of workers who have worked at least 15 man-days in seasonal agriculture. This more accurately reflects the fact that those counted as working in agriculture for purposes of the Annual Census survey have worked in agriculture for some measurable period. To count those working a lesser period of time would inaccurately suggest that fewer replenishment workers are required than is actually the case.

Under subsection (d) of new section 210 of the House amendment the managers provide for a temporary stay of deportation or exclusion for certain applicants who can establish a nonfrivolous case of eligibility for adjustment of status under subsection (a). The Conferees intend that the Immigration and Naturalization Service allow aliens to make a declaration, under penalty of perjury and under such terms and conditions that the Attorney General may by regulation provide, (i) attesting that they have in fact worked the requisite number of man-days required; (ii) identifying the type or nature of documentation they intend to adduce to make the necessary showing, (although this shall not limit their rights to produce other evidence at a later date), (iii) acknowledging that false statements concerning their eligibility constitute a violation of title 18 U.S.C., and may make them ineligible for this program and, further, subject to deportation or exclusion, and (iv) identifying their current or immediate past employer(s). The Conferees intend that INS not go beyond these criteria in seeking to determine whether an alien has made a nonfrivolous case for eligibility. To do otherwise may undermine the purposes of this section, viz., to encourage undocumented workers to come forward and seek to obtain legal status.

For purposes of interpretation of the requirements of subparagraph (3)(B) of subsection (b) of new section 210, the managers intent is that the standards embodied in Fair Labor Standards Act caselaw govern. The Conferees note that in a line of cases 1 leading from Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 66 S.Ct. 1187 (1946), (including cases which specifically address the unique documentation of work history problems in the agriculture, such as Beliz v. W.H. McLeod Co., 765 F.2d 1317 (1985)), courts have dealt with fact patterns involving employee loss of records, destruction or falsification of records by employers, and other difficult circumstances where precise evidence of hours worked is lacking.

This problem is compounded in agriculture, where pay records may only show piece rate units completed. While this Act will require evidence of hours worked, the lack of hourly records for agricultural employees (which could result from small employer exemptions from wage and hour laws as well as from employment by farm labor contractors or others whose recordkeeping practices are deficient), has led the Conferees to conclude that fairness dictates they create a presumption in favor of worker evidence, unless disproved by specific evidence adduced by the Attorney General. This approach rejects any possibility that a mechanistic formula for translating piece rate units picked into hours worked could satisfy this subsection's requirements. Rather the Conferees intend the experience gained under the Fair Labor Standards Act to govern. If an alien is able to produce evidence showing only piece rate units picked, then any day on which piece rate work was performed shall be deemed to satisfy the man-day requirements to this Act.

The Conferees intend that individuals admitted under sections 302 and 303 of the House amendment as temporary or permanent resident aliens be considered United States workers for purposes of Section 301 of the House amendment.

Additional Immigrant Visas for Certain Countries

The House amendment provided that when the annual admission level of a country is lower than ¾ of the average annual visas used during 1955–1965, then the difference shall be available for use in the next fiscal year. That total, however, could not exceed 7,500.

The Senate bill contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute allows an additional 5,000 visas per year for two years over the ceiling in the non-preference category with preference being granted to those countries which enjoyed favorable quotas and/or whose nationals received significant numbers of visas prior to the 1965 amendments to the immigration law. The Conferees direct the Secretary of State to establish an orderly mechanism for distribution of visas under this provision. The Conferees note that the Committees on the Judiciary of both Houses have commenced studies on possible changes to the legal immigration system and, because statutory revisions are anticipated, additional immigrant visas under this section are limited to a two year period. The Conferees strongly recommend that these Committees continue to expeditiously review the entire subject of legal immigration including the issues addressed by this particular provision.

United States-Mexico Border Revitalization

Section 407 of the House amendment authorized the President to negotiate with the Government of Mexico on the establishment of a free trade and co-production zone as a first step to achieving a U.S.-Mexico free trade area, and to report to the Congress on the progress and any changes in legislation recommended.

The Senate bill contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate position, thereby deleting the provision from the bill.

The House Conferees, in agreeing to recede on the House amendment, urge the Committee on Ways and Means to hold hearings on this matter next year.

Suspension of Deportation for Nationals of Certain Countries

The House amendment contained a provision suspending deportation of nationals of El Salvador and Nicaragua pending a final report by the Comptroller General on general conditions in those countries and the conditions of displaced persons from those countries.

The Senate bill has no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute deletes the provision. The Conferees believe that deportations should be suspended on a case-by-case basis in cases such as El Salvador where natural disasters have added to other societal problems in a manner which adds significantly to the difficulties inherent in the resettlement of deportees.

Nothing in this statement is intended to set a precedent for ignoring the basic standards set forth in the Refugee Act of 1980.

The Conferees strongly recommended that Congress consider and take up this issue expeditiously next Congress.

Sense of Congress Regarding English Language

The Senate bill contained a Sense of Congress provision that English is the official language of the United States.

The House amendment contained no comparable provision.

The Conference substitute deletes the Senate provision. By deleting the provision the Conferees do not do so lightly. The Conferees recognizes the importance of this issue and strongly recommend that Congress should address this issue in the next Congress.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GINGRICH. I might say in passing, by the way, that this is a very important act the gentleman has submitted the conference report on, a very major achievement of this Congress and one of the things for which this Congress will be remembered, and I commend the gentlemen who are here today for sticking to it when it must have been very, very frustrating.

Mr. SCHUMER. On behalf of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RODINO] the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I know all the members of the committee, we thank the gentleman for his kind words.

Mr. GINGRICH. The question is, in this setting and I think Chairman Fahrenkopf put it very correctly: It is wrong in the denial of our civil liberties for those of us who are legally registered, honest citizens when we go to vote to have our votes cancelled out by vote theft, by vote fraud. It is wrong for an expressway to outvote an American citizen. It is wrong for a vacant building to outvote an American citizen. This entire issue—I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WALKER. I just wanted to point out the interesting thing about the suit would be that it is awfully hard to intimidate a dead person. Death has a number of negative things that can be said about it, but the fact is that you do become relieved of any threat of intimidation at that point. And the suit would become silly on its face when one realizes that the contention is that somehow dead people are being intimidated because that is the essence of what the Republicans are attempting to do with their antifraud campaign; that really does, I think, call the whole suit and the whole action by the Democrats into an awful lot of question.

Mr. GINGRICH. Well, let me move in that sense to the Louisiana case, where sending out letters found 31,000 questionable voters.

I want to cite from the Ballot Integrity Group, Inc., first in New Orleans, a series of examples of what we are talking about. These are specific field investigative reports in which investigators went out to the address as cited and looked to see what was there.

Marlene J. Vincent, 1711 Behrman, this was the investigator's report: The address of 1711 Behrman corresponds to a vacant lot. House addresses on the 1700 block of Behrman begin with the address of 1729. The 1600 block of Behrman ends with the address 1625. Marlene J. Vincent voted March 1, 1986.

James Nettles, 1317 Music Street. Investigators report at this location no structure for dwelling. Junk autos on this vacant lot. Last voted March 1, 1986.

Possible photo attached. They attached a photo to their report of what the vacant lot looks like.

Next Winold Harris, 1732 Touro Street. The interview was conducted September 12, 1986 at 4:25. Marian Mitchell interviewed at the location related that she lived at the location for the past 4 years and has never heard of the voter. Last voted March 1, 1986.

Kevin Harris, 1624 Hendee. Investigators report: No such address of 1624 Hendee could be found. The sides of buildings located at 1804 Bringier and 1801 Lawrence occupied the closest proximity for such an address. Kevin Harris voted March 1, 1986.

Corliss Camel, 1928 Frenchman Street. Comments: Glenda Robinson resides at address for past 4 years. Never heard of Corliss Camel. Last voted March 1, 1986.

Freddie Morton, Jr., 2033 Upper Line Street. I might say that when I went to Tulane I lived at Lower Line. So some of these streets bring back fond memories.

Investigators report: Spoke to Mrs. Weber at 2030 who stated Mr. Morton has been gone for 4 years or better. A Mr. Brown now resides there. No answer at 2033. Voted March 1, 1986.

Myra Wright, 2427 Pauger Street. Interview September 12, 1986. Stoney Yansen who resides at 2423 Pauger interviewed, related she knew voter, however voter moved approximately 3 years ago. Voter last voted March 1, 1986.

Theodore Robinson, 2859 Dryades.

Spoke to a Mrs. Washington at 2856 who stated no one has lived there for 2 years. She did not know subject. Front door padlocked. Voted March 1, 1986.

Rite Mae Batiste, 2118 Josephine. Investigators report says that Rhette Parker of 2118 Josephine stated that she has lived at her present address for 9 years and Rite Mae Batiste has not resided there. Rite Mae Batiste voted March 1, 1986.

Dawn McGuffey, 1008 Valence Street, interviewed September 13, 1986 stated: Mrs. Coleman, the interviewee, current residence of location related the following: That voter moved from location 4 years ago.

Date last voted March 1, 1986.

Urachel Lewis, 1007½ Valence. The interview was on September 13, 1986. Mrs. Coleman of 1008 Valence interviewed and related the following, that voter moved from location 3 years ago.

Date last voted, March 1, 1986.

Richard Harrison, 5210 East Lemans. Mrs. Barth, current resident related that voter moved from location 9 years ago. Last voted 1986.

Cora Sheffield, 1714 Touro Street. Investigators report: Mildred Kemp resides at 1712 Toruo Street, related that voter moved from address at least 4 to 5 years ago. Date last voted, March 1, 1986.

Let us shift parishes, that is, after all, New Orleans, a big city. Let us go to Rapides Parish.

Rapides, investigator goes out and investigates: Mary Smith, 812 Compton Street. Report: Present occupant Williester Sanders stated above subject moved over 8 years ago. Subject last voted 1986.

Lawrence Coaty, 1512 Levin Street. Investigators report: There is no such address. Location is a fenced-in empty lot in between two other residences. There never was a house or residence on 1512. Subject last voted 1986.

Doreatha Watson, 315 Marye Court. Present occupant, Tina Johnson, advised subject moved over 1 year ago. Subject last voted 1986.

Annie Fells, 4028 North. Investigators report: North Street ends with 3617. No such address. Picture No. 10 shows 3617 North. Subject last voted 1986.

Notice in that instance, by the way, there is not even physically an address, and they are voting.

James Stovall, 725 Maple Street. Investigators report: Occupant of above address, Rosie Jackson, stated that above subject used to own the grocery up front—T's Grocery—but never lived there. Furthermore, the store has been closed for at least 2 years. Subject last voted 1986.

Frankie Brown, 1709 Houston Street. Investigators report: Houston Street begins in the 1900 block. No such address at 1709. Subject last voted 1986.

Rufus Williams, 3635 Jones Street.

Investigators report: No such address. Street numbers end at 3633 Jones. Subject last voted 1986.

Joann Brown, 503 St. Ann Street.

Investigators report: Observed vacant lots where 500 block of St. Ann once was. Land purchased by Rapides

General Hospital years ago. Photos taken. Subject last voted 1986.

Charlotte W. Heagword, 1628 Harris Street.

Investigators report: Harris Street begins in the 1800 block. No such address. Subject last voted 1986.

Cleveland Obey, 812 Lafitte Street. Report: Vacant house at above address. Matthew Brown said Mr. Obey has not lived there in 7 or 8 years.

Subject last voted in 1986.

Alma Nelson, 1817 Mason. Houses number from 1813 to 1821. No house or lot by 1817. Subject last voted in 1986.

Now let us shift to the city of Alexandria.

Ernest T. Davis, 4401 Rosa Street. Report: Rose Mae Ward has lived at 4402 for 20 years. She has never heard of Ernest Davis. 4401 is an empty lot. Subject last voted 1986.

Nancy McNeal, 203 Tulane.

Report: No such address. Tulane begins at intersection with Clinton Street in the 2100 block.

Subject last voted 1986.

Russell Moses, 1829 Wise Street. No lot or house at that address. The last house on that street is 1827 Wise. Subject last voted 1986.

Chester Pugh, 1402 Rapides Avenue.

Report: Observed well-grown-over vacant lot where 1400 block of Rapides was before land was cleared for interstate years ago. Subject last voted in 1986.

Barbara Smith, 3419 Elliott Street. Report: According to resident homeowner, Mr. Clarence Slack, he has lived at the above location since 1952 and never heard of any Smith.

Subject last voted in 1986.

Let me point out to my colleagues: Mr. Slack has been at this location for 34 years. And the person has been voting, claiming to live there, and he does not know who they are.

Josie Cowan, 4519 New York Avenue. Report: I-49 demolition, no houses at all for years. Subject last voted in 1986. In other words, in Louisiana we now match our earlier discovery in Indiana of an expressway being allowed to vote.

Now I serve, I might say, on the Surface Transportation Subcommittee. I believe in highways. I have helped finance highways. But it never occurred to me that a highway has a right to vote. But then I may be narrow-minded.

I will be glad to yield to my friend.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding because I think the gentleman does point out something which is very interesting. This has not been an isolated matter. The gentleman has pointed out that in Indiana we had an expressway that voted there. Now he has pointed out that in Louisiana an expressway voted. He pointed out in Indiana vacant lots were voting. He has pointed out in Louisiana that vacant lots are voting. We have added in Louisiana now that nonexistent addresses are voting. I think we also established that in Indiana they had nonexistent addresses, too, or was that Michigan? I guess it was Michigan.

Mr. GINGRICH. Michigan.

Mr. WALKER. Michigan then that had some nonexistent addresses that were on the voter rolls. I mean, we really are dealing with a pattern here, and one has to guess that if someone has lived in a place for 32 years and does not know the voters who are being identified are either nonexistent or perhaps a dead one there.

Mr. GINGRICH. Let me just close with two more examples and then summarize, I think, the major point.

Mr. WALKER. If the gentleman would yield, none of these vacant lots were cemeteries, were they? I mean, it has been a long tradition in machine politics to vote cemeteries. Have we voted a cemetery? They could be voting all kinds of people out of cemeteries.

□ 2100

Mr. GINGRICH. Historically, though, I might say to my friend, as I remember the history of the city machine in Chicago, they vote dead people but not cemeteries. That is they almost never cite the geographic address of the cemetery as the place that is voting. They cite the last residence of the dead person they are voting. But as a general rule, when you talk about voting graves, they are actually voting the individuals usually at their last place of residence.

Mr. WALKER. They do not want one of these investigators to go out and actually find the cemetery and look for the tombstone.

Mr. GINGRICH, They do not vote them quite that way.

Mr. WALKER. They think that that might be a real indication of fraud and they might not even be able to take that case into Federal court; is that what the gentleman is contending?

Mr. GINGRICH. I do not know, and it would be interesting under the Guiness Book of Records to see what is the record for the person who has voted most often after death or the person who voted the longest after dying. I am not sure Chicago holds that record, but Louisiana certainly seems to be in competition. Indiana has not entered into it.

But the point I think is that this is all real. This is not some made up partisan gimmick. What I am reading here is the Ballot Integrity Group's report on physically visiting locations.

Let me read two more and then I will summarize.

"Jane Powell, 1881 Harris Street. Investigator's report: George Smith, Jr. has lived here for 4 months. A neighbor three doors down gave this information: 'Sarah Green says that Jane Powell moved over ten (10) years ago.' Last voted 1986."

Finally, "Ossie M. Monk, 2219 Houston Street. Investigator's report: 'Florida Mini, Mildred Johnson, Reginald Johnson have lived here for 40 years. They do not know Ossie Monk.' Subject last voted 1986."

Now I think we have cited from Michigan, from the U.S. attorney in Illinois, from Indiana and from Louisiana enough cases that every American who cares about honest elections should have some concern, and that every one of our liberal Democrats who express such pious outrage about vote theft in the Philippines should recognize that vote theft in Louisiana, vote theft in Michigan, vote theft in Indiana, vote theft in Illinois are at least as great a danger to American freedom.

Furthermore, let me make three quick points. First, votes matter. The largest spending bill in the history of the world passed this House several weeks ago by one vote. And there is at least one seat in this House that, in my judgment, clearly would not be occupied with the Democrat who voted for that bill if dead people had not been voting.

Second, every American has the civil right to have their vote count honestly. If a living American who is legally registered walks down to vote and the local Democratic machines cancels their vote with a stolen vote, with a fraudulent vote or with the vote of a dead person, the civil right of that American to have an honest election and have their voice count is crushed. It is gone.

Third, there should be a bipartisan effort to clean up the voting rolls and to insist that in Federal elections we have honest rolls going into the election. There should not be people who moved away 10 years ago or 40 years ago. There should not be people for vacant lots. There should not be votes for expressways. There should not be votes for people who died.

Let me make one other comment, because I guess it was the most outrageous part of the Democrats' effort to cover up their vote theft and their machine politics.

No group in America is greater penalized by the machine using illegal votes than rising young blacks who want to live in an honest city, in an honest precinct, in an honest neighborhood. Those votes are not just voted against Republicans in the general election, as some of our Democratic friends seem to think. Those votes are voted by the machine in the primary against the local reformer. Those votes are voted in favor of the old hack who runs the country government or who runs the local judgeship or who runs the sheriff's office against that young person who is out there trying to reform. It is blacks who are peculiarly affected because they tend to live in the inner cities where the machines are dominant, they tend to live in the rural parishes where the machines are dominant.

I think it is a very sad commentary when so-called liberal Democrats in this House prove that they are in fact machine Democrats because, instead of rising up as good liberals and saying. "Let's clean up the elections so that reform citizens who happen to be black can have a chance to vote," they rise up and say, "How dare you try to clean up those polls. How dare you try to clean off the expressway that voted last year, the vacant lot that voted, the dead person that voted."

I think it is an assault on those black voters who want honest elections when a Democrat claims that they are defending the right to steal in the name of civil rights. I think every American citizen has the civil right to have their vote counted honestly and to have it counted in an election where there is no illegal voting. I hope this Congress will adopt a law which requires a report on how much fraudulent voting there is in America, and I hope we will move to ensure that elections in America are at least as honest as elections in the Philippines, and that no precinct in America has dead people voting, expressways voting and vacant lots voting.

THE WILLIAM F. NICHOLS ROTC CENTER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, October 4, I had the opportunity to travel to Auburn, AL, to attend dedication ceremonies of the WILLIAM F. NICHOLS ROTC Center on the campus of Auburn University. Our colleagues EARL HUTTO of Florida, SONNY CALLAHAN of Alabama, and RICHARD RAY of Georgia were also there to join in this fine tribute to BILL NICHOLS.

The $1.9 million center will support the military ROTC programs of the Army, Navy, and Air Force at Auburn University. These programs have a fine tradition at Auburn. Each program ranks in the top 10 of its respective service nationwide.

An additional honor was the dedication of a portrait of BILL NICHOLS, which will hang in the lobby of the center.

BILL NICHOLS is a great American and this is a very fitting tribute for someone who has done so much here in the Congress to help strengthen our national defense. He is also very proud of his alma mater. I know what a thrill it was for BILL to have this great facility named in his honor and to see his portrait hanging in the center.

I want to share with my colleagues the remarks he made at the dedication ceremonies:

REMARKS OF BILL NICHOLS AT DEDICATION OF WILLIAM F. NICHOLS ROTC CENTER

Some weeks ago when vice chairman of the Auburn Board of Trustees, Henry Steagall, made the surprise announcement at the July Auburn board meeting that this new ROTC building would be named the William F. Nichols ROTC Center, I was ill prepared to respond. My response was simply that never in my wildest imagination when I came to Alabama Polytechnic Institute on a football scholarship and elected to continue ROTC beyond the required 2 years that if anyone had suggested that a half a century later this edifice would be named for me I would have said such person would be a fit candidate for Bryce hospital and to use an old country expression "He ough't to be bored for the hollow horn".

First, let me express my thanks to a number of people who made this important day in my life possible beginning with my colleagues on the Auburn Board of Trustees, who by resolution elected to name this newest Auburn facility in my honor.

Then I would certainly wish to thank those who, through their financial means, have made possible the portrait which will hang in the foyer of this building for some grandchild or great-grandchild perhaps one day to see.

Then to my colleagues in the Congress, Congressman SONNY MONTGOMERY from Mississippi who is a retired major general in the Mississippi National Guard; Congressman RICHARD RAY who ably represents the Columbus, Georgia area, my Alabama colleague SONNY CALLAHAN from Mobile and from the Pensacola-Panama City area of Florida Congressman EARL HUTTO.

And to those special friends who have come to be with me and my family on the significant occasion in our lives and who have had an important part in shaping my life over the years, my Sunday school teacher in the 8th grade, my banker who has suggested that I make it short so he can get to Legion Field by game time and to another friend whose name will go unmentioned who has reminded me he needs to get to a dove hunt in Mobile county by "the time they start flying".

And to friends who came out on a busy Saturday morning—my former teammates on the Auburn athletic field, a few classmates with whom I drilled in the ROTC unit on the old Bullard field—my roommate in college, Retired Colonel Marion Walker, who made the Army a career, all who make this a memorable occasion.

Then I would like to express my appreciation to another group—to those officers and non-commissioned officers who instilled in my generation those traits of duty, honor, country indelibly imprinted on the lives of those of us who were destined to command troops in World War II, in Korea and In Vietnam.

The lessons I learned from my military instructors have served me well during my service in the military and later in civilian life-lessons taught through the Auburn ROTC program, from men like Colonel Almquist whose son, Elmer, retired a year or so back as a major general and from Captains McKinnon, Jacoby and Kleppinger, who came back to make Auburn his home following his retirement and whose services I attended at Arlington just a few months ago and from Sergeants Fitzpatrick and Moxham in whose home on South Gay I roomed for 3 years while at Auburn.

It was my privilege to serve with Auburn men in combat during World War II—men like Major Ralph Jordan who served with distinction in a combat engineer unit in the South Pacific. Men like Captain Buddy McMahon who was killed in action from a direct hit on his tank in desert fighting in Africa. They were leaders that possessed the qualifications of leadership taught on Bullard Field where the quadrangle now stands and in summer camp near Upataw creek at Fort Benning where Auburn cadets trained on the old French 75 millimeter artillery pieces pulled by the lead, swing and wheel pair of horses—rather archaic by today's guided missile standards but I am persuaded that the lessons we learned carried over to what ever civilian professional we chose for a livelihood.

Auburn University has a long and proud association with the military going back to the formation of the Auburn guards, who passed in review before Confederate States' President Jefferson Davis at the Auburn railroad station on a cold day in February 1861. Eleven years later in 1872, Auburn students were required under the Land Grant Act to undergo military instruction and the cadets were required to buy their own uniforms at a cost of $43.00, a lot of money in those days. Church parade on Sunday was compulsory and cadets were marched to the church of their denomination.

In 1916 the Reserve Officer Training Corps was established and Auburn was one of the 37 land grant colleges in the United States where ROTC began. Two thousand Auburn alumni served in World War I and our honorary military society, Saber and Blade, was established during the World War II period.

The Auburn ROTC program has consistently produced the highest qualified officer graduates who have served not only as reserve officers but predominantly as regulars in our career officers corps. In the last four years Auburn's Army ROTC program has won more top national awards than any Army ROTC detachment in history.

And so, I accept this building on behalf of more than 6,500 officers who have received commissions through the Auburn military program.

I accept it with the acknowledgement of the 81 Auburn men who have pursued a military career to become general officers. Men like the Army's Lieutenant General Robert Bullard and Brigadier General Proter Grant and Major General Al Harrision. Men like the Marine Corps Lieutenant General Holland M. Smith and four-star General Franklin Hart. Navy Admiral, Henry S. Persons and the Air Force's Brigadier Generals Tom McGee, Joe Stewart, and Reed Doster.

And with grateful appreciation and on a note of sadness I accept this building in behalf of those Auburn men who paid the supreme sacrifice so that we Americans and countless other people throughout the world might escape the bonds of tyranny. It is these men and their counterparts to whom we shall always remain eternally grateful.

THE ISSUE OF THE TAX PLEDGE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, over the last couple of weeks, a number of us have attempted to bring to the American people the issue of the tax pledge. The issue of the tax pledge is important in this campaign year because it puts candidates and Congressmen on record as to where they stand on the issue of taxes in the 100th Congress.

Why is that important? Well, because numerous liberal leaders of this Congress have already stood up and said that what this country needs is a good tax increase. What we need to do is raise taxes on the American people to pay for overspending in Washington, that the only way that we can work our way out of our deficit problem in this country is to raise taxes, and that we intend to raise taxes, that everybody with any sense knows that what you have to do is raise taxes.

Out of that kind of statement has grown the feeling that we need to get candidates on record as to where they really stand on that issue. Are they in fact people who come to Washington as taxers, or are they people who will come to Washington with a pledge that they will not raise taxes in the next Congress.

The pledge is basically a fairly simple one. The pledge simply says that this particular candidate, if elected to Congress, or this particular Congress if reelected to Congress, will not vote to raise the individual tax rates that are presently embodied in the tax reform bill that passed this House just a few short weeks ago.

Those rates were 15 and 28 percent on individuals and 34 percent on corporations. The pledge essentially says that we are not going to raise those rates above those levels. It is basically a hold-the-line kind of pledge.

Along with that, we have thought that those people who want to come forward and tell the American people very honestly that they are willing to raise taxes ought to have a chance to take a pledge, too. So in that vein, we have offered not only the no tax pledge, but also the Walter Mondale truth in taxing pledge. That grows out of Walter Mondale's statement at the 1984 San Francisco convention that he was going to raise taxes, he told the American people he was going to raise taxes, and that was that.

Well, there are some people around here who are saying the same thing in essence, and we thought that they ought to be given the chance to take their particular pledge and define for the American people why taxes are good for the country.

I have been disappointed that some of those people who have talked in terms of higher taxes have not seen fit to come forward and actually sign the Mondale truth in taxing pledge. But I would say to my colleagues that opportunity is very much open to them, and we would certainly like to have them tell the American people where they stand on this issue if they would like to do so.

On the other hand, we have had considerable support garnered for the no tax pledge. At the present time, there are numerous Members of Congress who have signed on to this particular pledge. Other Members of Congress are specifically filling out a witness form and sending it in to the Americans for Tax Reform who are running an effort to get the pledge taken in as many congressional districts as possible.

In addition, the legislation that I have placed into the Congress asking that the tax pledge be taken by this Congress as it relates to the next Congress has garnered about 130 signatures at the present time.

So we are very close to having a veto-proof situation in the next Congress. In other words, we would have almost enough names right now on that resolution to assure that if all those people are returned to this Congress, the President who has taken the pledge could veto a tax increase bill in the next Congress and be assured that that veto would be sustained in the House of Representatives.

We are hoping that we will get sufficient signatures on that bill over the next several days that will give us that kind of vote strength situation in the upcoming Congress.

The pledge becomes an extremely important thing for voters who want to focus on how do you want your deficit resolved in this country? Do you want the deficits to be resolved by Washington cutting out wasteful spending or do you want your deficit to be resolved by people who would come down here and tax in order to reduce deficit levels? That particular item is something that has to be decided on a district-by-district basis. You cannot take the overall national viewpoint on these issues and hope that somehow it will get resolved in Washington.

Taxers, if they come to Washington, are going to vote for more taxes. People pledged to no new taxes are going to come to Washington and refuse to vote new taxes into place. The American people clearly have a chance to make that choice themselves as they walk into the voting booth. Their vote this year can be cast for people who are either going to raise taxes or people who are going to pledge not to raise taxes.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. GINGRICH. I thank the gentleman for again holding this special order on the no-tax-increase pledge. I might comment in the Atlanta paper over the weekend I noticed that one of the distinguished gentlemen who is talked of as a potential Presidential condidate, Chuck Robb of Virginia, wrote an article or made a speech which was turned into an article in our paper in Atlanta in which he said that clearly we would have to raise taxes as part of his answer to balancing the budget.

I found it interesting that we now have three potential Democratic Presidential candidates, Senator HART, Representative GEPHARDT and former Governor Robb, all three of whom have now come out for tax increases as part of their solution to how they would solve the deficit. I think it reinforces the fact that this is not an idle discussion; that in fact on the Democratic side there is a very deep commitment to more tax increases and of taking more money out of the paycheck of working Americans as their solution to paying for the welfare state. I just think that it is a very serious thing for voters to consider as we look at our decisions in the near future; that they have to choose between a tax increase party and a party which is concerned about take-home pay.

Mr. WALKER. Since the gentleman has been on the floor during some of these discussions he will remember that we have had some of our Democratic colleagues come to the floor and make precisely those points; that they do think that the responsible kind of policy would be for a tax increase. They have not been willing to sign the Mondale truth-in-taxing pledge, but they have certainly come out and defended that point of view.

I noticed the other day, the gentleman was holding a special order that I was not able to come over for, but one of our colleagues came to the floor and suggested that he did in fact think that there might be a need for more taxes. In fact, when the gentleman used terms like the liberal welfare state and so on, that was regarded, I think he used the term that that was a perjorative phrase for the gentleman to use because he was making the very clear point that if in fact you take the stand that so many of our friends on the left do, that the liberal welfare state is basically good for the country, then you also have to come down to the idea that they have got to figure out a way now with the American people worried about deficits to pay for it, and that the solution that they have arrived at is to pay for it with more taxes rather than to pay for the problems by cutting out a lot of the wasteful spending and thereby reducing the problems. They do not see Government and Government waste as the problem; they see it as a part of the solution. Therefore, they go for taxes.

I think most of us feel that in creating a conservative opportunity society that what we want to do is reduce the size of Government. We want to focus on the problems that are within government and resolve those problems rather than raising taxes on the American people.

Mr. GINGRICH. If the gentleman will yield, the thing that I find fascinating, and you will remember that in 1984 we had Senator HART running as a "new ideas" candidate, then we had Walter Mondale asking "Where's the beef"; from that point on it turned it was a new ideas slogan but with not necessarily a whole lot of new ideas.

Governor Robb repeated what I think is the most common fallacy of the modern left in that he said, "Obviously we have to both cut spending and raise taxes." I want to suggest that in fact the answer is not just cutting spending. It is not let us have 6 percent less food stamps or let us have 4 percent less health care.

The answer is, as we have been trying to do with the conservative opportunity society group and in working with the Reagan administration, to develop a new generation of ideas. I commented earlier in a very important special order that was to discuss Congressman BILL WHITEHURST and his contribution to this Congress in his career here, that BILL WHITEHURST helped found the Military Reform Caucus. The Military Reform Caucus has been trying to pass reforms. We have passed at least two so far that get us better government, not just more government or less government.

I think what most Americans want is they want better Government. I think that it is a mistake for as many very significant and very smart Democrats as I see it, and these are smart people; these are not dumb people, but they are trapped into a liberal welfare state mentality where they can only think of more and less. So they say let us have more taxes and let us have less spending, which of course is double pain.

What they are going to say is we are going to raise taxes on your children, if you are a senior citizen, so they are not going to have as much take-home pay, and, by the way, we are also less health care so you are not going to be able to stay in the hospital so you are going to have to stay with your children who now have less to spend because we just raised taxes on them. So you increase the level of pain.

Mr. WALKER. Because they are not willing to confront the constituencies out across the country with the need to reform the program so that you can in fact have better health care and have better defense and have better programs aimed at a wide variety of interests in the country through reform.

Mr. GINGRICH. I think that is right and there are two reasons. One is that psychologically and mentally and maybe politically, an awful lot of the leading Democrats of our generation are trapped inside the liberal welfare state and its political alliances. So it is very difficult for them to step outside. I think this is what happens when you have been in the majority for 60 years and you have created the modern liberal welfare state government. I think it is very hard at that point to get outside it and rethink it.

Second, it is almost as though they have a mantra, a chant, and their chant is "Cut spending; raise taxes. Cut spending; raise taxes." They now think that somehow the deficit dragon will disappear if all of the Democrats form in a circle and chant "Cut spending; raise taxes."

That is not the way the world works. It seems to me that what you have got to do is instead invent new programs that work better. I will give the gentleman an example. Last year I had the opportunity, with his help, to offer the Workfare Program that President Reagan had sent to Congress. Now workfare is not more food stamps or less food stamps. It is not more welfare or less welfare. Workfare is a fundamentally different approach that says if you are an able-bodied adult under the age of retirement and you are going to get money from the Government, you ought to work for it. It is the most widely desired reform in this country. If you ask the average person, "What would you like to see change in Washington, DC?" And it failed. It failed because liberal Democrats who are now courageously talking about cutting spending could not bring themselves to try the experiment of approaching the welfare culture in a new way and passing workfare.

Mr. WALKER. I think we ought to point out, if I remember the gentleman's amendment correctly, he was not proposing a massive change of the system all of a sudden; he was proposing essentially an experiment to see whether or not workfare would prove to be the kind of concept that we ought to put into a broader based context. Is that not correct?

Mr. GINGRICH. I think that is exactly right. What we were saying, unequivocably, is that we were in a situation where, as Charles Murray and others have proven, and Charles Murry in his seminal work "Losing Ground," the study of the Welfare system," that the welfare culture as we have developed it is not working; it is not getting the job done. We now have a country where many working mothers get up in the morning and go to work to pay the taxes so other mothers who are on welfare do not go to work. There is something wrong with that whole system.

Furthermore, where those mothers who are not working are themselves and their children are learning, wait around and the Federal Government will send you a check. Now, that is destructive of the whole fabric of life.

The point I was making was that workfare provides labor for the community in return for money for that person. So we have a double victory. The person who has been on welfare learns to work and the community gets the services of that human being as they learn to work.

□ 2120

Mr. WALKER. What you are saying is that the conservative opportunity believes there is an intrinsic value in work that goes far beyond the system itself, that what you have in work is something that cannot be measured in its ability to benefit the individual.

What we have lost in the welfare system is we have lost whole generations of people who, because of their reliance on welfare, have lost all sense of hope and self dignity.

Mr. GINGRICH. That is right. The point I would make, as it relates to our no tax increase budget, is just this: Any liberal Democrat who believes that you have to raise taxes should be required first to stand up and explain why raising taxes on the take-home pay of working Americans is better than the experiment of workfare. Why would they vote to kill workfare and then raise taxes on working Americans?

Mr. WALKER. Let me give the gentleman another example. We have several attempts that have been made on the floor to do something about the Davis/Bacon Act. Davis/Bacon is one of those things that has been buried into the liberal welfare state philosophy that benefits a handful of people across the country, but it benefits them in a very, very meaningful fashion. What it means is that as we build construction projects for the Federal Government, we charge a premium price by paying the highest possible labor costs for those construction projects.

Many people, looking at how you can reform the Government and lower expenses, will point out that we can build exactly the same number of projects; we can build exactly the same number of buildings that we would otherwise put in place, not lose one job; not lose one building and so on, and save $2.5 billion by simply eliminating the Davis/Bacon provisions that pay the highest possible wage costs.

It seems to me that that is something that is logical, rather than raising taxes on the American people to end the special privilege of Davis/Bacon that costs the Federal Government $2.5 billion a year.

Most people would say, OK, if you can get the same amount of work done for less cost, we ought to go that direction, rather than raising my taxes.

Yet, when that issue is brought to the floor, invariably liberal Democrats vote to reject Davis/Bacon reform.

Mr. GINGRICH. Let me make two points here. One, because big numbers often confuse all of us, and 2½ billion is a big number, what the gentleman is saying is that every American is paying $10 this year for the waste built into Davis/Bacon.

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. GINGRICH. A family of four is paying $40 this year for the waste built into Davis/Bacon.

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. GINGRICH. Our liberal friends who yell about waste in the Pentagon, which is the single biggest construction center in the United States, are unwilling to recognize that I think about $1 billion of waste in the Pentagon is Davis/Bacon.

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. GINGRICH. So my challenge to our friends who believe in the liberal welfare state is very simple: If you are currently taking $40 from a family of four to waste it on Davis/Bacon every year, are we not better to vote for the experiment of not having Davis/Bacon, rather than to raise taxes $40 so we can keep wasting it?

That is the major difference, I think, between what is beginning to be the take-home pay family budget Republican party and the tax-increase, liberal welfare state Federal budget Democratic party.

We are saying, let us change the Federal budget and let us change Washington. Let us save the $40 in Washington so you can spend it back home on your family, and the liberal Democrats are saying, oh, no, you cannot do that. What you have to do is let us take the $40 away from the American people so we liberal Democrats can spend it through the Federal Government.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct and the gentleman has mentioned the military.

It struck me the other day on the floor that we had a lot of our liberal Democratic friends who often talk to us about the need to cut defense spending. That seems to be the one area that they are willing to do something about. We are out here voting for a training plane that the Pentagon did not want. I mean, one of the things that we have got to do is we have got to exercise the kind of self-discipline and we have got to stop the pork-barrel policies that, in fact, allow us to decide that there are certain amounts of spending in areas like the Pentagon that we are willing to force upon them whether they want it or not.

That one struck me as being particularly interesting at a time when we hear so much talk about cutting defense spending. Here was an airplane that the Pentagon said they did not want, and we in the House of Representatives said, you are going to take it anyway. We are going to jam it down your throats and you have got to do this airplane.

There were all kinds of arguments made out here as to the reason why that might be a good thing to do. That is fine, except then you have an obligation not to turn around and suggest that the Pentagon is the irresponsible element, because it seems to me that the Congress at that point has defined itself as the spender in that particular area.

We cannot continue to go on telling the Pentagon that they have to keep bases open because there is political pork-barrel involved; they have to build projects because there is political pork-barrel involved; that they have to site ships in certain ways because there is political pork-barrel involved; they have to build certain projects because there is political pork-barrel involved; they have to buy from certain contractors because there is political pork-barrel involved; they have to move families when they are moving to Hawaii and Alaska and other places on particular high-priced moving companies because there is political pork-barrel involved.

You cannot go on defending all of those things and then say, oh, yes, we have got to cut waste in the Pentagon.

That is the problem here, and it is one of the things that I think we have to address right up front in this House of Representatives.

But those are the reforms that the liberal welfare State Democrats have been unwilling to talk about and, therefore, have been unwilling to make the kinds of meaningful cuts in spending that allow us to reduce the deficit.

Mr. GINGRICH. Let me carry it just one stage further and just say that as long as we have those kinds of congressionally imposed wastes, it seems to me that the American people should demand of Congressmen that they clean up Washington before we require families to change their plans to pay higher taxes.

There is a very profound reason I say this. We have an economy which, for the last 47 months, has been remarkably good overall. We have problems in farming; we have problems in the oil industry, but outside of those 2 industries, we have really had a remarkable period of relative job creation: 11.5 million jobs, the most successful job creation anywhere in the world in the last 4 years.

If we were to do, as our liberal Democratic friends ask, and raise taxes; if we were to follow the lead of three of their Presidential candidates and raise taxes, I think it would have a severely negative effect on the economy.

I think it would tip us in 1987 and 1988 into a recession. One of our concerns has to be the choice between jobs and growth on the one hand, versus recession and unemployment on the other hand.

We, as you will remember, because you and I served in that Congress, we served under the last liberal Democratic President. That President gave us higher taxes; 22-percent interest rates; 13-percent inflation; an economy that was collapsing; unemployment that was skyrocketing, and when Ronald Reagan took over in 1981, this country was a disaster.

December of 1980, just before the Reagan administration took over, we peaked at 22 percent interest rates. The dollar was actually so bad at one point in 1980, declining so rapidly because of inflation, that Italian hotels would not accept greenbacks.

We have spent 6 long years working to bring this country back to health. We still have problems in the Midwest and we still have problems in agriculture. We still have problems in south Georgia, partly drought and partly the whole general problem of agriculture.

We also have problems in the oil patch, but the fact is that overall, and even in those areas, we are so much better than we were in 1980 that the question is, How do we move forward?

My fear is that if Members of Congress get reelected without signing the no-tax-increase pledge, that in 1987, the liberal Democrats will be very tempted to rush back to an effort to reestablish the liberal welfare state, to raise taxes, to have the American people have less money, and in the process, as they raise those taxes, as three of the Democratic Presidential candidates have already suggested, I think they will guarantee a recession, and as a result, we have a great deal more pain in the United States and a great number of more people out of work.

Let me, if I might, just make one last comment. This ends up being ultimately a question of choice. If we fight for the no-tax-increase pledge; if we establish the principle that the new tax rates of 15 and 28 percent for individuals and 34 percent for corporations are permanent, then we leave more money back home.

That means individuals have greater choices; that means cities and counties have greater choices; that means States have greater choices because they can decide, do we want to raise our own taxes locally to build libraries and to build hospitals and to do the things we want to do or do we want to leave money in our local government?

If we in Washington pre-empt that decision by raising taxes so that nobody has any choice below us, nobody out there in the country has any choice, the money goes to Washington, it never gets home for take-home pay, then we are in effect taking power away from individuals. We are taking power away from families and neighborhoods. We are taking power away from all the voluntary institutions people give money to and we are taking power away from State and local governments and we are bringing that power to Washington because we will have the money and it will be up to the bureaucracy in Washington to decide.

For all those reasons, I hope every Member will sign the no tax increase pledge and I hope every voter will ask between now and election day whether or not the candidates in their districts have signed the no-tax increase pledge.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, let me take this opportunity to encourage our colleagues as they come to the floor tomorrow to do just that, to see me on the floor and we will see to it that you get your name on the no-tax increase pledge, that this is your opportunity to do it before Congress closes up. We certainly hope that our colleagues will join us.

Those who want to join Walter Mondale in the "Truth in Taxing Pledge," we will also tell you how you can do that. We would be very happy to have a few people who would come forward and say that is their plan for the American people to sign that particular document.

Particularly I would encourage colleagues tomorrow as they come to the floor to sign the no-tax increase pledge.

Let me, though, just for our colleagues' edification indicate who has signed the no-tax pledge on the card here on the floor. As I indicated earlier, there are some other people who have signed the no-tax increase pledge in the form that has gone to Americans for tax reform and also 130 people who have cosponsored the legislation that I have introduced.

The people who have signed the no-tax increase pledge here on the floor are:

DUNCAN HUNTER of California; CONNIE MACK of Florida; myself from Pennsylvania; TOM DELAY of Texas; NEWT GINGRICH of Georgia; LARRY CRAIG of Idaho; BOB MCEWEN of Ohio; MIKE STRANG of Colorado; GERALD SOLOMON of New York; JOE BARTON of Texas; PHIL CRANE of Illinois; BILL DANNEMEYER of California; DON SUNDQUIST of Tennessee; JIM SENSENBRENNER of Wisconsin; BILL SCHUETTE of Michigan; BOB DORNAN of California; JOHN PORTER of Illinois; DEAN GALLO of New Jersey; DAVE MONSON of Utah; DAN COATS of Indiana; VIN WEBER of Minnesota; BOB LAGOMARSINO of California; LARRY HOPKINS of Kentucky; DAN DANIEL of Virginia; JIM KOLBE of Arizona; HANK BROWN of Colorado; BOB STUMP of Arizona; TRENT LOTT of Mississippi; PAT SWINDALL of Georgia; STAN PARRIS of Virginia; LARRY COMBEST of Texas; DICK ARMEY of Texas; BOB SMITH of New Hampshire; DAVE DREIER of California; TOMMY ROBINSON of Arkansas; RON PACKARD of California; JOHN DUNCAN of Tennessee; DAN BURTON of Indiana; LYNN MARTIN of Illinois; HOWARD NIELSON of Utah; and HOWARD COBLE of North Carolina—a group of people that is both bipartisan and has spread geographically all across the country, that come from various differing kinds of districts, all of whom feel strongly that the family budget should be the first priority of Congress and that the Federal budget ought to be solved by reforming in Washington, not by taxing the American working family out of existence.

So I would ask again for my colleagues to come to the floor tomorrow, sign the no-tax increase pledge, be a part of the growing movement across this country that says no new taxes.

SEC. 216. EFFECT OF STRATEGIC DEFENSE INITIATIVE ON COMPLIANCE WITH THE ANTI-BALLISTIC MISSILE TREATY

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The President's Commission on Strategic Forces declared in its report to the President, dated March 21, 1984, that "One of the most successful arms control agreements is the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972".

(2) The Secretary of State has stated that the "ABM Treaty requires consultations, and the President has explicitly recognized that any ABM-related deployments arising from research into ballistic missile defenses would be a matter for consultations and negotiations between the Parties".

(3) The Secretary of State declared on October 14, 1985, that "our research program has been structured and, as the President has reaffirmed, will continue to be conducted in accordance with a restrictive interpretation of the treaty's obligations".

(4) The President has determined that the Krasnoyarsk radar is a violation of the ABM Treaty.

(5) The Krasnoyarsk radar therefore erodes the integrity of the ABM Treaty and is a matter of serious concern.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL DECLARATIONS.—The Congress therefore declares—

(1) that it fully supports the declared policy of the President that a principal objective of the United States in negotiations with the Soviet Union on nuclear and space arms is to reverse the erosion of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems, signed on May 26, 1972 (commonly referred to as the "ABM Treaty"); and

(2) that action by the Congress in approving funds in this Act for research on the Strategic Defense Initiative—

(A) does not express or imply an intention on the part of Congress that the United States should abrogate, violate, or otherwise erode such treaty; and

(B) does not express or imply any determination or commitment on the part of Congress that the United States develop, test, or deploy ballistic missile strategic defense weaponry that would contravene such treaty.

SEC. 217. REPORT ON THE ANTI-BALLISTIC MISSILE TREATY

(a) REPORT ON LESS RESTRICTIVE INTERPRETATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report concerning the effect of the less restrictive interpretation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty on the Strategic Defense Initiative program.

(b) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The report shall include the following:

(1) An analysis of the ramifications of the less restrictive interpretation on the development under the Strategic Defense Initiative program, of strategic defenses, including comprehensive strategic defense systems, and more limited defenses designed to protect vital United States military and command and control assets, based on "other physical principles". This analysis should compare research and development programs pursued under both the restrictive and less restrictive interpretations of such treaty, including a comparative analysis of—

(A) the overall cost of the research and development programs,

(B) the schedule of the research and development programs, and

(C) the level of confidence attained in the research and development programs with respect to supporting a full-scale engineering development decision in the early 1990's.

(2) A list of options under the less restrictive interpretation of such treaty that meet one or more of the following objectives:

(A) Reduction of the overall development cost.

(B) Advancement of the schedule for a full-scale engineering development decision.

(C) Increase in the level of confidence in the results of the research by the original full-scale development date.

(c) DEADLINE FOR REPORT.—The report under subsection (a) shall submitted not later than February 1, 1987.

PART C—BALANCED TECHNOLOGY INITIATIVE

SEC. 221. CONVENTIONAL DEFENSE INITIATIVE

(1) That the Director of Defense Research and Engineering apportion the funds among the research, development, test, and evaluation accounts of the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, and Defense Agencies on a merit basis, either to augment ongoing but underfunded basic and exploratory research or to establish new basic or exploratory research programs.

(2) That no portion of such funds be applied to any program, project, or activity in support of the Strategic Defense Initiative.

(3) That no portion of any undistributed reduction made in any research, development, test, and evaluation account be applied against the technology base activities of any military department or Defense Agency in a greater proportion than the share of that department's or Agency's technology base as a proportion of the total research, development, test, and evaluation funds made available to that department or Agency for fiscal year 1987.

(4) That no portion of any undistributed reduction be applied against any program, project, or activity which has received additional funds under this subsection.

(1) by inserting "in each industry category" in paragraph (3) after "Government", and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentences: "For purposes of clause (3) of the first sentence of this subsection, an industry category is a discrete group of similar goods and services. Such groups shall be determined by the Administration in accordance with the four-digit standard industrial classification codes contained in the Standard Industrial Classification Manual published by the Office of Management and Budget, except that the Administration shall limit such an industry category to a greater extent than provided under such classification codes if the Administration receives evidence indicating that further segmentation for purposes of this paragraph is warranted due to special capital equipment needs or special labor or geographic requirements or to recognize a new industry. A market for goods or services may not be segmented under the preceding sentence due to geographic requirements unless the Government typically designates the area where work for contracts for such goods or services is to be performed and Government purchases comprise the major portion of the entire domestic market for such goods or services and, due to the fixed location of facilities, high mobilization costs, or similar economic factors, it is unreasonable to expect competition from business concerns located outside of the general areas where such concerns are located.".

(b) AWARDING OF CONTRACTS AT FAIR MARKET PRICES.—(1) Section 15(a) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 644(a)) is further amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "A contract may not be awarded under this subsection if the award of the contract would result in a cost to the awarding agency which exceeds a fair market price.".

"(i) in the case of a contract for services (except construction), at least 50 percent of the cost of contract performance incurred for personnel shall be expended for employees of the concern; and

"(ii) in the case of a contract for procurement of supplies (other than procurement from a regular dealer in such supplies), the concern will perform work for at least 50 percent of the cost of manufacturing the supplies (not including the cost of materials).

"(B) The Administrator may change the percentage under clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A) if the Administrator determines that such change is necessary to reflect conventional industry practices among business concerns that are below the numerical size standard for businesses in that industry category. A percentage established under the preceding sentence may not differ from a percentage established under section 15(n).

"(C) The Administration shall establish, through public rulemaking, requirements similar to those specified in subparagraph (A) to be applicable to contracts for general and specialty construction and to contracts for any other industry category not otherwise subject to the requirements of such subparagraph. The percentage applicable to any such requirement shall be determined in accordance with subparagraph (B), except that such a percentage may not differ from a percentage established under section 15(n) for the same industry category.".

(2) Section 15 of such Act (15 U.S.C 644) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(o)(1) A concern may not be awarded a contract under this subsection as a small business concern unless the concern agrees that—

"(A) in the case of a contract for services (except construction), the concern will perform at least 50 percent of the cost of the contract with its own employees; and

"(B) in the case of a contract for procurement of supplies (other than procurement from a regular dealer in such supplies), the concern will perform work for at least 50 percent of the cost of manufacturing the supplies (not including the cost of materials).

"(2) The Administrator may change the percentage under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) if the Administrator determines that such change is necessary to reflect conventional industry practices among business concerns that are below the numerical size standard for businesses in that industry category.

"(3) The Administration shall establish, through public rulemaking, requirements similar to those specified in paragraph (1) to be applicable to contracts for general and specialty construction and to contracts for any other industry category not otherwise subject to the requirements of such subparagraph.".

(d) EXPANSION OF ANNUAL PARTICIPATION GOALS.—Section 15(g) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "having values of $10,000 or more" in the first sentence; and

(2) by adding at the end the following: "For the purpose of establishing goals under this subsection, the head of each Federal agency shall make consistent efforts to annually expand participation by small business concerns from each industry category in procurement contracts of the agency, including participation by small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. The head of each Federal agency, in attempting to attain such participation, shall consider—

"(1) contracts awarded as the result of unrestricted competition; and

"(2) contracts awarded after competition restricted to eligible small business concerns under this section and under the program established under section 8(a).".

(e) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION CONCERNING APPLICANTS FOR PROCUREMENT SET-ASIDES.—Section 15 of such Act is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(B) Subparagraph (A) shall apply only to business concerns in the following industry categories:

"(i) Construction.

"(ii) Architectural and engineering services (including surveying and mapping services).

"(iii) Ship building and ship repair.

"(iv) Refuse systems and related services.

"(3) If the Administrator determines, on the basis of any such review, that contracts awarded under the set-aside programs under such sections exceed 30 percent of the dollar value of the total contract awards for that industry category, as determined under the last sentence of section 15(a)(3), the Administrator shall adjust the size standards for such industry category establishing eligibility for a set-aside program to a size that will likely reduce the number of contracts which may be set aside to approximately 30 percent of the value of contracts to be awarded under such sections.

"(4)(A) An interested person may petition the Administrator at any time to review an adjustment to a size standard made under paragraph (3) or any designation of an industry category made under section 15(a)(3) if the petitioner presents credible evidence that any such adjustment or designation—

"(i) is not likely to further the purposes of paragraph (3)(A) or section 15(a); and

"(ii) has caused the petitioner to suffer severe financial loss.

"(B) The Administrator shall render a final determination on any petition filed under subparagraph (A) before the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date that such petition is received by the Administration. Such determination shall be reviewable in the manner prescribed in chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code.

"(C) The Administrator shall prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

(h) INITIAL REVIEW OF SIZE STANDARDS.—(1) Paragraph (2) of section 3(a) of the Small Business Act (as added by subsection (f)) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The first review conducted by the Administrator under such paragraph shall review the periods beginning on October 1, 1983, and ending on September 30, 1986, and shall be completed not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) If the Administrator of the Small Business Administration determines, on the basis of the review referred to in paragraph (2), that contracts awarded under the set-aside programs under sections 8(a) and 15(a) of the Small Business Act in any industry category subject to that review exceed 30 percent of the dollar value of the total contract awards for that industry category, as determined in accordance with the last sentence of section 15(a)(3) of such Act, the Administrator shall propose adjustments to the size standards for such industry category establishing eligibility for a set-aside program to a size that will likely reduce the number of contracts which may be set aside to approximately 30 percent of the value of contracts to be awarded under such sections. The Administrator shall publish such proposed adjustments in the Federal Register for public comment. The Administrator may not issue final regulations implementing revised size standards for an industry category under section 3(a)(3) of such Act (as added by subsection (f)) until October 1, 1987.

(C) recommendations for furthering the interests described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) in a more efficient manner than provided in such amendments.

(3) In preparing the report required by paragraph (1), the Administrator of the Small Business Administration shall seek the views of all affected agencies of the Government and the views of the public, including the views of business concerns of all sizes and of trade, business, and professional organizations. The views of such agencies, and a summary of the views of the public, shall be included in the report.

"(a)(1) Subject to subsections (c) and (d), a person who is a former officer or employee of the Department of Defense or a former or retired member of the armed forces may not accept compensation from a contractor during the two-year period beginning on the date of such person's separation from service in the Department of Defense if—

"(A) on a majority of the person's working days during the two-year period ending on the date of such person's separation from service in the Department of Defense, the person performed a procurement function (relating to a contract of the Department of Defense) at a site or plant that is owned or operated by the contractor and that was the principal location of such person's performance of that procurement function;

"(B) the person performed, on a majority of the person's working days during such two-year period, procurement functions relating to a major defense system and, in the performance of such functions, participated personally and substantially, and in a manner involving decisionmaking responsibilities, with respect to a contract for that system through contact with the contractor; or

"(C) during such two-year period the person acted as a primary representative of the United States—

"(i) in the negotiation of a Department of Defense contract in an amount in excess of $10,000,000 with the contractor; or

"(ii) in the negotiation of a settlement of an unresolved claim of the contractor in an amount in excess of $10,000,000 under a Department of Defense contract.

"(2) In the application of paragraph (1) to a former officer or employee of the Department of Defense or a former or retired member of the armed forces, a person's status as a contractor shall be determined as of the date of the separation from service in the Department of Defense of the officer or employee or member or former member involved.

"(b)(1) Any person who knowingly violates subsection (a)(1) shall be subject to a civil fine, in an amount not to exceed $250,000, in a civil action brought by the United States in the appropriate district court of the United States.

"(2) Any person who knowingly offers or provides any compensation to another person, and who knew or should have known that the acceptance of such compensation is or would be in violation of subsection (a)(1), shall be subject to a civil fine, in an amount not to exceed $500,000, in a civil action brought by the United States in the appropriate district court of the United States.

"(c) This section does not apply to any person with respect to—

"(4) If a designated agency ethics official, on the basis of a complete disclosure as required by paragraph (2), states in a written opinion furnished to any person under this subsection that this section is inapplicable to the acceptance of compensation by such person from a contractor in a particular case, there shall be a conclusive presumption in favor of such person, for the purposes of this section, that the person's acceptance of such compensation in such case is not a violation of subsection (a)(1).

"(f) In this section:

"(1) The term 'compensation' includes any payment, gift, benefit, reward, favor, or gratuity—

"(A) An offeror for a prime contract under this chapter to be entered into using procedures other than sealed-bid procedures shall be required to submit cost or pricing data before the award of the contract if the price of the contract to the United States is expected to exceed $100,000.

"(B) The contractor for a contract under this chapter shall be required to submit cost or pricing data before the pricing of a change or modification to the contract if the price adjustment is expected to exceed $100,000 (or such lesser amount as may be prescribed by the head of the agency).

"(C) An offeror for a subcontract (at any tier) of a contract under this chapter shall be required to submit cost or pricing data before the award of the subcontract if—

"(i) the price of the subcontract is expected to exceed $100,000; and

"(ii) the prime contractor and each higher-tier subcontractor have been required to make available cost or pricing data under this section.

"(2) A person required, as an offeror, contractor, or subcontractor, to submit cost or pricing data under paragraph (1) (or required by the head of the agency concerned to submit such data under subsection (c)) shall be required to certify that, to the best of the person's knowledge and belief, the cost or pricing data submitted are accurate, complete, and current.

"(3) Cost or pricing data required to be submitted under paragraph (1) (or under subsection (c)), and a certification required to be submitted under paragraph (2), shall be submitted—

"(1) for which the price agreed upon is based on—

"(A) adequate price competition;

"(B) established catalog or market prices of commercial items sold in substantial quantities to the general public; or

"(C) prices set by law or regulation; or

"(d) PRICE REDUCTIONS FOR DEFECTIVE COST OR PRICING DATA.—(1)(A) A prime contract (or change or modification to a prime contract) under which a certificate under subsection (a)(2) is required shall contain a provision that the price of the contract to the United States, including profit or fee, shall be adjusted to exclude any significant amount by which it may be determined by the head of the agency that such price was increased because the contractor (or any subcontractor required to make available such a certificate) submitted defective cost or pricing data.

"(B) For the purposes of this section, defective cost or pricing data are cost or pricing data which, as of the date of agreement on the price of the contract (or another date agreed upon between the parties), were inaccurate, incomplete, or noncurrent. If for purposes of the preceding sentence the parties agree upon a date other than the date of agreement on the price of the contract, the date agreed upon by the parties shall be as close to the date of agreement on the price of the contract as is practicable.

"(2) In determining for purposes of a contract price adjustment under a contract provision required by paragraph (1) whether, and to what extent, a contract price was increased because the contractor (or a subcontractor) submitted defective cost or pricing data, it shall be a defense that the United States did not rely on the defective data submitted by the contractor or subcontractor.

"(3) It is not a defense to an adjustment of the price of a contract under a contract provision required by paragraph (1) that—

"(A) the price of the contract would not have been modified even if accurate, complete, and current cost or pricing data had been submitted by the contractor or subcontractor because the contractor or subcontractor—

"(i) was the sole source of the property or services procured; or

"(ii) otherwise was in a superior bargaining position with respect to the property or services procured;

"(B) the contracting officer should have known that the cost and pricing data in issue were defective even though the contractor or subcontractor took no affirmative action to bring the character of the data to the attention of the contracting officer;

"(C) the contract was based on an agreement between the contractor and the United States about the total cost of the contract and there was no agreement about the cost of each item procured under such contract; or

"(D) the prime contractor or subcontractor did not submit a certification of cost and pricing data relating to the contract as required under subsection (a)(2).

"(4)(A) A contractor shall be allowed to offset an amount against the amount of a contract price adjustment under a contract provision required by paragraph (1) if—

"(i) the contractor certifies to the contracting officer (or to a designated representative of the contracting officer) that, to the best of the contractor's knowledge and belief, the contractor is entitled to the offset; and

"(ii) the contractor proves that the cost or pricing data were available before the date of agreement on the price of the contract (or price of the modification) and that the data were not submitted as specified in subsection (a)(3) before such date.

"(B) A contractor shall not be allowed to offset an amount otherwise authorized to be offset under subparagraph (A) if—

(i) the certification under subsection (a)(2) with respect to the cost or pricing data involved was known to be false when signed; or

(ii) the United States proves that, had the cost or pricing data referred to in subparagraph (A)(ii) been submitted to the United States before the date of agreement on the price of the contract (or price of the modification), the submission of such cost or pricing data would not have resulted in an increase in that price in the amount to be offset.

"(e) INTEREST AND PENALTIES FOR CERTAIN OVERPAYMENTS.—(1) If the United States makes an overpayment to a contractor under a contract with the Department of Defense subject to this section and the overpayment was due to the submission by the contractor of defective cost or pricing data, the contractor shall be liable to the United States—

"(A) for interest on the amount of such overpayment, to be computed—

"(i) for the period beginning on the date the overpayment was made to the contractor and ending on the date the contractor repays the amount of such overpayment to the United States; and

"(ii) at the current rate prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954; and

"(B) if the submission of such defective data was a knowing submission, for an additional amount equal to the amount of the overpayment.

"(2) Except as provided under subsection (d), the liability of a contractor under this subsection shall not be affected by the contractor's refusal to submit a certification under subsection (a)(2) with respect to the cost or pricing data involved.

"(f) RIGHT OF UNITED STATES TO EXAMINE CONTRACTOR RECORDS.—(1) For the purpose of evaluating the accuracy, completeness, and currency of cost or pricing data required to be submitted by this section with respect to a contract or subcontract, the head of the agency, acting through any authorized representative of the head of the agency who is an employee of the United States or a member of the armed forces, shall have the right to examine all records of the contractor or subcontractor related to—

"(A) the proposal for the contract or subcontract;

"(B) the discussions conducted on the proposal;

"(C) pricing of the contract or subcontract; or

"(D) performance of the contract or subcontract.

"(2) The right of the head of an agency under paragraph (1) shall expire three years after final payment under the contract or subcontract.

"(3) In this subsection, the term 'records' includes books, documents, and other data.

"(g) COST OR PRICING DATA DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'cost or pricing data' means all information that is verifiable and that, as of the date of agreement on the price of a contract (or the price of a contract modification), a prudent buyer or seller would reasonably expect to affect price negotiations significantly. Such term does not include information that is judgmental, but does include the factual information from which a judgment was derived.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Subsection (f) of section 2306 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"(f) So-called 'truth-in-negotiations' provisions relating to cost or pricing data to be submitted by certain contractors and subcontractors are provided in section 2306a of this title.".

(2) Section 934(a) of the Defense Procurement Improvement Act of 1985 (title IX of Public Law 99-145; 99 Stat. 700) is repealed.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), section 2306a of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), and the amendment and repeal made by subsection (b), shall apply with respect to contracts or modifications on contracts entered into after the end of the 120-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Subsection (e) of such section shall apply with respect to contracts or modifications on contracts entered into after November 7, 1985.

SEC. 953. RIGHTS IN TECHNICAL DATA

(a) RIGHTS IN TECHNICAL DATA.—Subsection (a) of section 2320 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations to define the legitimate interest of the United States and of a contractor or subcontractor in technical data pertaining to an item or process. Such regulations shall be included in regulations of the Department of Defense prescribed as part of the Federal Acquisition Regulation. Such regulations may not impair any right of the United States or of any contractor or subcontractor with respect to patents or copyrights or any other right in technical data otherwise established by law.

"(2) Such regulations shall include the following provisions:

"(A) In the case of an item or process that is developed by a contractor or subcontractor exclusively with Federal funds, the United States shall have the unlimited right to—

"(i) use technical data pertaining to the item or process; or

"(ii) release or disclose the technical data to persons outside the government or permit the use of the technical data by such persons.

"(B) Except as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D), in the case of an item or process that is developed by a contractor or subcontractor exclusively at private expense, the contractor or subcontractor may restrict the right of the United States to release or disclose technical data pertaining to the item or process to persons outside the government or permit the use of the technical data by such persons.

"(C) Subparagraph (B) does not apply to technical data that—

"(i) constitutes a correction or change to data furnished by the United States;

"(ii) relates to form, fit, or function;

"(iii) is necessary for operation, maintenance, installation, or training (other than detailed manufacturing or process data); or

"(iv) is otherwise publicly available or has been released or disclosed by the contractor or subcontractor without restriction on further release or disclosure.

"(D) Notwithstanding subparagraph (B), the United States may release or disclose technical data to persons outside the Government, or permit the use of technical data by such persons, if—

"(i) such release, disclosure, or use—

"(I) is necessary for emergency repair and overhaul; or

"(II) is a release or disclosure of technical data (other than detailed manufacturing or process data) to, or use of such data by, a foreign government that is in the interest of the United States and is required for evaluational or informational purposes;

"(ii) such release, disclosure, or use is made subject to a prohibition that the person to whom the data is released or disclosed may not further release, disclose, or use such data; and

"(iii) the contractor or subcontractor asserting the restriction is notified of such release, disclosure, or use.

"(E) In the case of an item or process that is developed in part with Federal funds and in part at private expense, the respective rights of the United States and of the contractor or subcontractor in technical data pertaining to such item or process shall be agreed upon as early in the acquisition process as practicable (preferably during contract negotiations), based upon consideration of all of the following factors:

"(i) The statement of congressional policy and objectives in section 200 of title 35, the statement of purposes in section 2(b) of the Small Business Innovation Development Act of 1982 (15 U.S.C. 638 note), and the declaration of policy in section 2 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 631).

"(ii) The interest of the United States in increasing competition and lowering costs by developing and locating alternative sources of supply and manufacture.

"(iii) The interest of the United States in encouraging contractors to develop at private expense items for use by the Government.

"(F) A contractor or subcontractor (or a prospective contractor or subcontractor) may not be required, as a condition of being responsive to a solicitation or as a condition for the award of a contract, to sell or otherwise relinquish to the United States any rights in technical data except—

"(i) rights in technical data described in subparagraph (C); or

"(ii) under the conditions described in subparagraph (D).

"(G) The Secretary of Defense may—

"(i) negotiate and enter into a contract with a contractor or subcontractor for the acquisition of rights in technical data pertaining to an item or process developed by such contractor or subcontractor exclusively at private expense if necessary to develop alternative sources of supply and manufacture; or

"(ii) agree to restrict rights of the United States in technical data pertaining to an item or process developed entirely or in part with Federal funds if the United States receives a royalty-free license to use, release, or disclose the data for purposes of the United States (including purposes of competitive procurement).

"(3) The Secretary of Defense shall define the terms 'developed' and 'private expense' in regulations prescribed under paragraph (1).

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'Federal Acquisition Regulation' means the single system of Government-wide procurement regulations as defined in section 4(4) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(4)).".

(b) VALIDATION OF PROPRIETARY DATA RESTRICTIONS.—Subsections (a) and (b) of section 2321 of title 10, United States Code, are amended to read as follows:

"(a) A contract for supplies or services entered into by the Department of Defense which provides for the delivery of technical data shall provide that a contractor or subcontractor at any tier shall be prepared to furnish to the contracting officer a written justification for any restriction asserted by the contractor or subcontractor on the right of the United States to use such technical data.

"(b)(1) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that there is a thorough review of the appropriateness of any restriction on the right of the United States to release or disclose technical data delivered under a contract to persons outside the Government, or to permit the use of such technical data by such persons. Such review shall be conducted before the end of the three-year period beginning on the date on which final payment is made on a contract under which technical data is required to be delivered, or the date on which the technical data is delivered under such contract, whichever is later.

"(2)(A) If the Secretary determines, at any time before the end of the three-year period beginning on the date on which final payment is made on a contract under which technical data is required to be delivered, or the date on which the technical data is delivered under such contract, whichever is later, that a challenge to a restriction is warranted, the Secretary shall provide written notice to the contractor or subcontractor asserting the restriction. Such a determination shall be based on a finding by the Secretary that reasonable grounds exist to question the current validity of the asserted restriction and that the continued adherence to the asserted restriction by the United States would make it impracticable to procure the item competitively at a later time. Such notice shall—

"(i) state the specific grounds for challenging the asserted restriction;

"(ii) require a response within 60 days justifying the current validity of the asserted restriction; and

"(iii) state that evidence of a validation by the Department of Defense of a restriction identical to the asserted restriction within the three-year period preceding the challenge shall serve as justification for the asserted restriction if—

"(I) the validation occurred after a review of the validated restriction under this subsection; and

"(II) the validated restriction was asserted by the same contractor or subcontractor (or any licensee of such contractor or subcontractor) to which such notice is being provided.

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the United States may challenge a restriction on the release, disclosure, or use of technical data delivered under a contract at any time if such technical data—

"(i) is publicly available;

"(ii) has been furnished to the United States without restriction; or

"(iii) has been otherwise made available without restriction.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1202 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1985 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note), is amended—

"(1) the request is made by a citizen of the United States or a United States corporation, and such citizen or corporation certifies that the technical data requested is required to enable such citizen or corporation to submit an offer or determine whether it is capable of submitting an offer to provide the product to which the technical data relates to the United States or a contractor with the United States (except that the Secretary may require the citizen or corporation to pay a deposit in an amount equal to not more than the cost of complying with the request, to be refunded upon submission of an offer by the citizen or corporation);

"(2) the release of technical data is requested in order to comply with the terms of an international agreement; or

TITLE X—ARMS CONTROL MATTERS

SEC. 1001. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS RELATING TO SALT II COMPLIANCE

(a) CONTINUED ADHERENCE TO SALT II NUMERICAL SUBLIMITS.—It is the sense of the Congress that it is in the national security interests of the United States to continue voluntary compliance with the central numerical sublimits of the SALT II Treaty as long as the Soviet Union complies with such sublimits.

(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the central numerical sublimits of the SALT II Treaty include prohibitions on the deployment of the following:

(1) Launchers for more than 820 intercontinental ballistic missiles carrying multiple independently-targetable reentry vehicles.

(2) Launchers for an aggregate of more than 1,200 intercontinental ballistic missiles carrying multiple independently-targetable reentry vehicles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles carrying multiple independently-targetable reentry vehicles.

(3) An aggregate of more than 1,320 launchers described in paragraph (2) and heavy bombers equipped for air-launched cruise missiles capable of a range in excess of 600 kilometers.

SEC. 1002. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON NUCLEAR TESTING

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The United States is committed in the Limited Test Ban Treaty of 1963 and in the Non-Proliferation Treaty of 1968 to seek to achieve the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time.

(2) A comprehensive test ban treaty would promote the security of the United States by constraining the United States-Soviet nuclear arms competition and by strengthening efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

(3) The Threshold Test Ban Treaty was signed in 1974 and the Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty was signed in 1976, and both have yet to be considered by the full Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

(4) The entry into force of the Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty and the Threshold Test Ban Treaty will ensure full implementation of significant new verification procedures and so make completion of a comprehensive test ban treaty more probable.

(5) A comprehensive test ban treaty must be adequately verifiable, and significant progress has been made in methods for detection of underground nuclear explosions by seismological and other means.

(6) At present, negotiations are not being pursued by the United States and the Soviet Union toward completion of a comprehensive test ban treaty.

(7) The past five administrations have supported the achievement of a comprehensive test ban treaty.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that, at the earliest possible date, the President should—

(1) request the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification (with a report containing any plans the President may have to negotiate supplemental verification procedures, or if the President believes it necessary, any understanding or reservation on the subject of verification which should be attached to the treaty) of the Threshold Test Ban and Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaties, signed in 1974 and 1976, respectively; and

(2) propose to the Soviet Union the immediate resumption of negotiations toward conclusion of a verifiable comprehensive test ban treaty.

In accordance with international law, the United States shall have no obligation to comply with any bilateral arms control agreement with the Soviet Union that the Soviet Union is violating.

SEC. 1003. REPORT BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF ON UNITED STATES NON-COMPLIANCE WITH EXISTING STRATEGIC OFFENSIVE ARMS AGREEMENTS

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff shall submit to Congress a report containing a detailed assessment of—

(1) the military consequences to the United States of a policy decision by the United States to discontinue compliance with the major provisions of existing strategic offensive arms limitations agreements (including central numerical sublimits on strategic nuclear delivery vehicles in the SALT II accord) would have on the security of the United States; and

(2) the likely military responses of the Soviet Union to such a policy decision.

(b) MATTERS TO BE CONSIDERED.—The assessment required by subsection (a) shall focus on what the likely Soviet military responses would be during the period between 1987 and 1996. In making such assessment, the Chairman shall specifically consider the following:

(1) The effect on the ability of United States strategic forces to accomplish their nuclear deterrent mission (including the effect on the survivability of United States strategic forces and on the ability of United States strategic forces to achieve required damage expectancies against Soviet targets) of any expansion of Soviet military capabilities undertaken in response to a United States decision to abandon compliance with existing strategic offensive arms agreements.

(2) The additional cost to the United States, above currently projected military expenditures for those periods for which such budget projections are available, of research, development, production, deployment, and annual operations and support for any additional strategic forces required to counter any expansion in Soviet military capabilities undertaken in response to a United States decision to abandon compliance with existing strategic offensive arms agreements.

(3) Under average annual real growth projections in defense spending of 0 percent, 1 percent, 2 percent, and 3 percent, the percent of the annual defense budget in each year between fiscal year 1987 and fiscal year 1996 which would be consumed by increased United States strategic forces needed to counter the Soviet force expansions.

(4) The military effect on United States national security of the diversion the funds identified under paragraph (2) away from nonstrategic defense programs and to strategic programs to counter expanded Soviet strategic capabilities, including the military effect of such a diversion on the ability of United States conventional forces to meet the specific non-nuclear defense commitments of the United States as a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and under the 1960 Treaty of Mutual Cooperation and Security with Japan.

(5) The military implications for the United States of Soviet violations of offensive arms control agreements that have been determined.

(c) REPORT REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The Chairman shall—

(A) include in the report required under subsection (a) the individual views of the other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and

(B) submit such report in both classified and unclassified form.

(2) The report required by subsection (a) shall be submitted not later than December 19, 1986.
